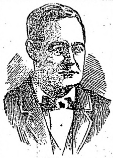
How would it do to abolish the Pension Office, and devote a portion of the clerk hire to paying just pensions? This is merely a suggestion, and the writer realizes that it would not be "business" to adopt it, because how would the poor pension clerk live if all the good money paid to him was thrown away upon the old fellows that served in the war. But old soldiers cannot hasten their pension claims by writing to anybody. They are in the mill and will come out, probably, after the applicant is dead. The dead, you know, are at rest and do not want pensions—government salvage.

In 1885 President Arthur opened to settlement the Crow Creek Indian reservation in South Dakota. About 1,000 settlers responded by taking claims and homesteads on that reservation. As soon as Mr. Cleveland had succeeded Mr. Arthur he recalled his predecessor's proclamation and restored the reservation to the Indians. This necessitated the withdrawal of the settlers, many of whom had made more or less extensive improvements.

When South Dakota was admitted to the Union, one of the first bills introduced by Senator Pettigrew was one to reimburse the settlers for money expended. This bill aggregated the sum of about $180,000, the proceeds to be divided between about 1,000 persons, in sums ranging from $50 to $350 each. The bill passed but no appropriation has ever been made to pay the money. Senator Pettigrew has offered an amendment to the Indian Appropriation Bill covering this amount. This amendment has been favorably endorsed by the Indian Office and will probably be adopted and the money paid.

There is a rumor around just now that Governor Boies, of Iowa, has been tendered the position of Secretary of Agriculture in President Cleveland's Cabinet, and that he has declined the distinguished honor. This is almost unparalleled. "Uncle Jerry" Rusk has succeeded in making the smallest place in the Cabinet one of the most important. While there are candidates from every section for Cabinet positions under Mr. Cleveland, it is looked upon as extraordinary that any man should have the nerve to decline so high an honor. Possibly Mr. Boies intends to contest for the Democratic nomination in 1896. This would be as the banging of a man's head against the adamantine walls of fate. The entire force of Mr. Cleveland's administration, and all of the great personal strength of Mr. Cleveland himself, may be exercised to give that nomination to another New York man—probably Mr. W. C. Whitney. Mr. Horace Boies should accept such good as comes to him—thankfully, modestly, and without "jawing back."



HORACE BOIES.

The silver question was settled for this session by the vote on the motion of Senator Hill, of New York, in the Senate on Monday last. This was Senator Hill's first important appearance since his election. He showed more talent than he has been credited with in the speech advocating taking up the bill for the repeal of the Sherman law, and hereafter the senior senator from New York will be listened to when he makes his appearance on the Senate floor, either in advocacy of or in opposition to any important measure.

The feeling in relation to the question of the repeal of the Sherman law cannot be graduated by the vote on Hill's motion. There are a variety of reasons why there is a reluctance to tackle this question. First, it is near the close of the session, and there is a general desire on the part of the Senators to fully discuss the subject before taking definite action. If the Sherman repeal bill was taken up it would knock out by delay a large amount of other important legislation. In the next place, a large number of Republican Senators desire to leave this tangled question as a legacy to the Democrats, who will have both the legislative and executive branches of the Government next year.

Mrs. Whitney's death in New York last week cast almost as much gloom over the social world in Washington as the passing away of almost any of the great men who departed last month. Her husband was a member of Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet here four years ago, and Mrs. Whitney, who was very rich, endeared herself to all classes by a wise, generous, charitable and judicious use of her money. She was also a woman of great ability, high character and marvelous social qualities—a splendid wife and mother. Hence the universal mourning for her premature death at 39 years of age.

A French journal reports the case of a man who entered a coffee-house and sat down near a customer who was reading the morning newspaper which belonged to the establishment.

"After you with the paper, if you please," said the new-comer.

The other man nodded assent, and went on reading, but at the end of half an hour had hardly finished the first column. Just as the waiting customer was about making a second and perhaps impatient application, he noticed that the reader had lost his organs of sight. His resentment vanished.

"Ah," said he, in a low voice, "I am not surprised. The poor man has only one eye, and has to read every thing twice over."

Misled By the Name.

"Who is dat man Talmage we hear so much about?" asked Flatfoot Jones the other day.

"Why, don't you know?" said Brother Snow. "He am de great Brooklyn preacher."

"Preacher!" exclaimed Jones: "I thought he war a comic lecturer."

"Why, Brudder Flatfoot?"

"Kase day calls him de wit. Talmage."

A Chip of the Old Block.

"Is your father in?" said the man who rang the bell with one hand while he held a bunch of accounts behind him with the other.

"I don't know," said the boy who opened the door. "Got one of your photographs with ye?"

"Why—yes. I believe I have."

"Well, let me take it a minute, and I'll find out."

Too Cunning.

A man and woman found themselves wedged in a crowd in one of the streets of New York, says the Herald. They had come out to see the parade,—it may have been at the recent Columbian celebration,—and as things were, they could see nothing. The man had a bright idea.

"When I give the word, Julia, you scream and faint."

Julia waited. The signal came, and she flopped over into her escort's arms.

"Give me air," she gasped.

"Air! air!" cried the man.

The crowd parted, and the man and woman emerged at the front. The woman revived, and the pair made ready to enjoy the show.

Just then, however an ambulance dashed up. Some one had turned in a signal.

"You can't be too careful about these cholera cases," said the surgeon, with a wink. "I'd better take you both along for inspection."

And they did not see the parade.

Many bright and useful publications come round to us annually and the sight of them is as refreshing and welcome as the faces of friends on New Year's Day. Friends' faces are kept in remembrance; good books for reference, inasmuch as they lead and teach us what is to be done in many painful straits. One such publication, always foremost, is before us, brimful of sound advice and the raciest bits of fun, original and copyrighted, from the pens of such noted humorists as Bill Nye, Opie P. Read, Danbury-News-Man and others. It is a free gift of the season at the Druggists' counter, and will be sought for as the highly popular St. Jacobs Oil Family Almanac and Book of Health and Humor, 1893. The work differs somewhat from its former editions, but is none the less attractive and in many of its features is the superior of former numbers. One special feature is the "Offer of One Hundred Dollars," open to all contestants, the details of which a perusal of the book will more fully give. The almanac is sent forth by The Charles A. Vogeler Company, Baltimore, Md., proprietors of some of the best known and most reliable medicinal preparations. A copy will be mailed to any address on receipt of a 2-cent stamp by the above firm.

FRIDAY, Feb. 10.

SENATE.

Senator Sevatson made a motion to reconsider the vote by which Senator Davis' bill for the limitation of actions was lost a day or two ago. This created a hot discussion.

HOUSE.

As usual the proceedings in the house this morning opened with the reading of a long list of petitions for the passage of the anti-scalpers bill and for the erection of a state elevator instead of a new capitol building.

The judiciary committee reported a substitute for the anti-scalpers bill, but made no recommendation regarding its passage.

The following bills were introduced:

To prevent the destruction of timber on leased mineral lands in this state; to regulate the salaries and expenses of the state board of corrections and charities; to establish public market places at the head of Lake Superior and near the head of navigation on the Mississippi river; exempting homesteads to the value of $3,000 from execution of judgment; reducing the salary of the state oil inspector from $2,400 to $1,000 per year; relating to the state accounting of the public funds; to prohibit the use of cigarettes in the State of Minnesota, and fixing a fine of not less than $25 as a penalty for violation. On motion of Mr. Fuller the bill was given a second and third reading and placed on its final passage. The bill passed unanimously; to amend law of 1878, relating to trial by jury in civil actions enabling five-sixths to render a verdict after six hours deliberation.

The house then took up general orders and went into committee of the whole. Progress was reported on H. F. No. 94, Mr. Greer's bill to provide for furnishing Minnesota reports to judges.

Various other bills were considered.

Cattle that are housed in the barnyard and fed on a straw-stack will not be a source of much profit for the next few months. And the man who winters his stock in this way is not a stockman—but a scrub.

Another Bridge Bill.

Washington, Special Telegram—Kittel Halvorsen introduced to-day, by request, the bill for a bridge across the St. Louis river at Rice's and Connor's Points. It is changed somewhat from the bill first introduced for this bridge, conforming to what criticism the first measure received. It is not absolutely a free bridge, but the cities of Duluth and Superior are granted the right of purchase if they desire, paying what it actually cost. This bill is Hartley and Mendenhall's, but Halvorsen did not give it a very good send off by putting it in "by request," which generally defeats a bill.

Forty-Five Chinamen Perished.

Van Couver, B. C., Special—The sloop Cornelius, which left Cadboro bay early in December with forty-five Chinamen on board, destined for California, has not been heard of since. Shortly after the Cornelius left Cadboro bay there was a succession of severe gales, one of which it is feared sealed the fate of the cargo and crew. The sloop was but thirty feet long.

New Officers Installed.

Milwaukee, Special—At the tailor's meeting R. C. Nolbheim of Milwaukee was elected treasurer and James Lawrie reappointed Milwaukee's representative on the world's fair committee. After the installation of officers the following executive committee was appointed for the ensuing year: B. R. Merriam, New York; J. C. Seaman, St. Louis; Julius Winter, Jr., Louisville; John Bradley, Pittsburg; Walter Hear, Boston.

Misplaced Bragging.

He was a very tired-looking man. Dejection was written on every line in his face, and as I was a stranger in the village with nothing to do and no one to talk to, I relieved my pent-up spirits by expressing my sympathy with him in his troubles, whatever they were.

"Thanks," he said; "my chief trouble seems to be that I am an idiot from idiotville, and that is incurable. I just got into a bragging match with a stranger in the post-office. He bet he was richer than I was, and I took him on—just for fun. I told him all I had and more, too, and after a while he gave in, saying he wouldn't have thought it. Then I said I'd swear to it, and he said all right, and I did; and by thunder, who do you suppose he was?"

"I don't know. Who?"

"The assessor!" he groaned.

It certainly was a case of hard luck.

Stamp Collectors Their Victims.

"The new Columbian stamps, while they seem large when compared with our ordinary stamps," remarked a well-known stamp collector of the city, "are not nearly so large as some of those once used by some of the South American governments. It is a fact, not generally known, that for years many states paid nothing whatever for their stamps, but were supplied free by the engravers, who looked to the collectors for their profits. The arrangement made was that the model should be changed every three months, and that at the end of this period all unused stamps should be returned to the sellers. In this way a great many different issues were gotten out, all of which soon became rare and commanded high prices. The number of people who collect stamps is much larger than is generally supposed, as is proved by the fact that the dealers made a handsome profit out of the transaction."—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

Trained Down.

Householder—"I'm going to move to the suburbs next Monday, and I'd like you to do the job." Mover—"How many loads, sir?" "I don't know. You moved me once, you remember." "Yes, sir." "I needed three vans then to get through, but that was some years ago." "Have you moved since, sir?" "Yes, indeed, half a dozen times." "Hum! I should say one van will carry all you have left now, sir."

Hood's Cures

The marvelous cure of Miss Lottie Huntley of Cortland, N. Y., has attracted widespread attention. She was nigh to death's door with hemorrhages caused by ulcers in the stomach. Could eat nothing. When the physicians said there was no hope, her mother urged her to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. She reluctantly consented, and in a few days felt stronger, bloating subsided, appetite gradually returned and in a month she could walk across the room. In six months she was at work, and has been in perfect health ever since. She says: "I know that Hood's Sarsaparilla and that alone, saved my life."

World's Fair Souvenir Coins—
The Official Souvenir of the Great Exposition—
5,000,000 of which were donated to the World's Columbian Exposition by the Government, are being rapidly taken by an enthusiastically patriotic people.
As there early promised to be a demand for these Souvenirs that would render them very valuable in the hands of speculators, the Exposition Authorities decided to place the price at $1.00 for Each Coin
and sell them direct to the people, thus realizing $5,000,000, and using the additional money for the further development of the Fair.
Considering the fact that there were but 5,000,000 of these coins to be distributed among 65,000,000 people, in this country alone (to say nothing of the foreign demand,) and that many have already been taken, those wishing to purchase these mementoes of our Country's Discovery and of the grandest Exposition ever held, should secure as many as they desire at once.

Realizing that every patriotic American will want one or more of these coins, and in order to make it convenient for him to get them, we have made arrangements to have them sold throughout the country by all the leading Merchants and Banks. LACKING IN ENGLISH.

But Little to Express the Femininity of Many Words.

"There really seems to be no hope for words which we class as common gender so that we shall perhaps forever hear our servants refer to their 'lady friend' or their 'gentleman cousin,'" writes J. Howard Gore in the February New Peterson. "Nor can we desire such a complete differentiation that would compel us to be strictly logical in giving the feminine of 'Michigander,' or constrain us to follow an example already set in referring to woman's convention 'moving in the even soprano of their ways.'

"This latter might be improved upon by saying mezzo-soprano of her way. But, joking aside, how are we to refer to the presiding officer of an assembly of women. Will Mrs. President do? Or shall we, in our rules of parliamentary practice, suggest The Chair? Perhaps this would answer. But suppose the chair appoints a committee, and, in announcing the members, desires that Mrs. A. should preside at the deliberations of this committee; how shall she indicate it? Shall she say 'I appoint Mrs. A. chairman, or chairwoman?' This latter bears too close a resemblance to chairwoman to be popular, and, in the broad pronunciation of some, might be mistaken for it. Would it do to say chair-mistress? If not, what shall we advise?

"Again, we are likely soon to see women on our juries; and it is more than probable that one of them would be selected to render the verdict. In such an event confusion might result, inasmuch as our statutes prescribe the functions of the foreman. Shall these States, as soon as they admit women on the jury, revise their statutes in this regard? If so, what change must be made—foreman or forewoman? foreman or foremistress? or what?

Ben Butler's Joke.

When the city council of Lowell passed an ordinance, some years ago, making it an offense to permit a dog to go upon the streets without a muzzle, and not stating where that muzzle should be attached to the dog, Gen. Buttler bought a muzzle for his canine and one day started out to take a walk, with the animal at his heels. The dog wore a muzzle, but it was so attached to the brute that it inclosed his tail instead of his nose. At the next meeting of the council the ordinance was amended to cover the location of the guard.

WISH TO BOTHER FRANCE.

SUCH APPEARS TO BE ENGLAND'S DESIRE.

Added to the Distress Caused by Internal Complications, Are the Disquieting Relations of La Belle France Abroad.

Insular Courtesy.

Paris, Feb. 20.—The internal situation in France will certainly be arranged sooner or later. What is most disquieting is the situation abroad, which is anything but good, especially as to the relations with England. At the same time, France's relations with Germany are less strained, because both sides know that the result of a war would be so serious that neither dares to commence. England, on the contrary, is seeking to create difficulties with France in every possible way and place. After the attempt to take Morocco, which failed, came the Egyptian question, which was certainly caused by the high-handed action of Lord Cromer toward the khedive, who only asked to be left in peace. The khedive is attempting to "regain" possession from the English of the rights unduly encroached upon by them. The English, perceiving this, are endeavoring to create difficulties with France on account of the port Bizerta, in Tunis. Their claims are based upon the fear lest France should convert Bizerta into a military post, notwithstanding her denial of any such intention. Italy has complained for some time, and England backs her up.

A Strange Career Closed.

Black River Falls, Wis., Special, Feb. 20.—The suicide of E. J. Sanrope in the city jail yesterday closed a very singular career. For the last five or six years it has been a struggle between the temperance element of the city and their opponents to see who should control the man. Time and time again he has been picked up by the temperance people, and they supposed they had him sure. Then the gutter and jail soon followed. As a final resort he was asked last spring if he would take the Keeley treatment if it would cost him nothing. He consented and funds were raised and the treatment given. Upon his return it was said the saloon would have him again in three months. His temperance friends watched him closely, but within six months after his treatment they were pained to see him again in the gutter. The saloons have come out ahead and leave a widow and five small children helpless on the community. It is one of the saddest affairs here for many years, and coming just on the eve of election will be a hard blow against license for another year.

Too Little Water.

New Orleans, Feb. 20.—The Picayune's Fort Worth, Tex., special says: Freight engine No. 210 exploded in the Texas & Pacific yards at 3 o'clock this morning, one man being killed and five badly injured, three fatally. The engine had been prepared to go east at 6 a. m. The hostler reported plenty of water and 120 pounds of steam and had only been out of the cab fifteen minutes when the disaster occurred. Massive pieces of the engine were hurled long distances, smashing everything they came in contact with, and window glass sixteen blocks away was shivered. John Mills, a negro knocker, was mangled and instantly killed. A man under the cab of the engine engaged in work was not hurt. The following are the injured: W. A. Ford, seven ribs broken; W. R. Barrett, left hip dislocated, body and face bruised; H. E. Hayden, nose broken; T. M. Deats, arm broken and otherwise injured; Robert Thompson, leg broken, otherwise badly injured and sight destroyed.

Death of a Millionaire.

San Francisco, Feb. 20.—Judge H. C. Hastings, millionaire and pioneer, died yesterday in his seventy-ninth year. He was born at Watertown, N. Y., in 1814, but went West to attend school. He and Henry Ward Beecher were students together at Lawrenceburg, Ind. He then settled in Iowa and studied law. He was first supreme judge of the Hawkeye state and took Iowa into the Union in the Twenty-ninth congress. He was married to Miss Arzela A. Bradt of Iowa. Judge Hastings came to California early in the fifties, and was first supreme judge of this state. He was prominent in legal practice and held many offices. He founded the Hastings law college of San Francisco, and accumulated a large estate, which he divided among his only enough to assure him good maintenance. His fortune was estimated at $1,500,000.

Letter Carriers' Pay.

New York, Feb. 20.—A meeting of letter carriers of New York and neighboring towns was held to-day to hear a report on the letter carrier's salary bill from the legislative committee of the National Association of Letter Carriers of America. John F. Walsh of Chicago reported that every means had been taken to procure the aid of congressmen favorable to the bill and with decided success. In fact, except by accident, the passage of the bill was now an assured success. The bill which the letter carriers seek to have passed provides for an increase of salary.

Strikers' Outbreak.

Springfield, Ohio, Feb. 20.—The first serious outbreak since the Big Four strike began this afternoon in the yards. The trouble arose over Trainmaster McCarthy, of the Big Four, ordering a man named Moore to leave the yards. A general fight ensued, in which Police Officer Sullivan, Detectives Jeffries of Indianapolis and Dixon of Columbus and two men named James Tuitte and Clayton Hucless participated. Jeffries and Dixon were roughly handled and repeatedly struck in the face. Sullivan arrested Jeffries and Dixon, who were bailed out, and they, in turn arrested Tuitte and Hucless.

ELECTRICAL ETCHINGS.

Briefly Told.

Bronson Howard, the playwright, has gone to the Sandwich islands, whence he will go to Alaska.

President Harrison has declined to accept the presidency of the Loyal Legion, which was offered to him.

The next Fourth of July will be a big occasion in Newburyport, as the colossal bronze statue of William Lloyd Garrison will be unveiled at that time.

Mrs. Eugene de Mitkiewicz, great granddaughter of Chief Justice John Marshall, of the United States supreme court, is lying at the point of death at her residence in Washington.

Ward McAllister defends hoop skirts and finds no little worth in them. It looks as if the great society monarchs did not propose to surrender to the limited circumference of common judgments.

Dr. Mary Walker isn't bothering about the reintroduction of crinoline. She will quietly persevere in her Prince Albert coat, dark trousers, button shoes, silk hat and brown military cape, which is her de rigueur.

T. S. Peck of Burlington, adjutant general of Vermont, is attempting to make a complete roll of the soldiers who served in the late war from that state, and asks any person who knows of such soldiers to communicate with him.

Harry Allen of New York, a grandson of Commodore Vanderbilt and a son of Mrs. Daniel Allen, who was a sister of William K. Vanderbilt, is charged by his wife, Annie Odell Allen, with infidelity. On this charge she has applied for a divorce.

It is not generally known that Gen. Grant refused a salary of $25,000 a year to take an office in the Panama Canal company, on the ground that he regarded the scheme as impracticable and was unwilling to induce anybody to invest in it. He believed that the Nicaragua route was the feasible one.

Maj. N. A. Hambright, U. S. A., retired, died at Lancaster, Pa., yesterday of a cancerous affection, aged seventy-four years. He served through the Mexican war and through the Rebellion, at the close of which he had become brigadier-general. He then entered the regular army from which he was retired several years ago.

Kaiulani's Plea.

London, Feb. 20.—The Princess Kaiulani sends the following address to the American people: "Four years ago, at the request of Mr. Thurston, then Hawaiian cabinet minister, I was sent away to England to be educated privately and fitted for the position which, by the constitution of Hawaii, I was to inherit. For all these years I have patiently and in exile striven to fit myself for my return, this year, to my native country. I now am told that Mr. Thurston is in Washington asking you to take away my flag and my throne. No one tells me even this officially. Have I done anything wrong that this wrong should be done to me and my people? I am coming to Washington to plead for my throne, my nation and my flag. Will not the great American people hear me?"

Heavy Snow in New York.

New York, Feb. 20.—Seventeen inches of snow have fallen around New York city since yesterday afternoon. Great drifts are piled up in the streets, and the street cars and other vehicles get along slowly. The wind blew a gale during the night, and it is believed that all the railroad trains will be greatly delayed by the drifts. An attempt was made to-day by the street commissioners to get additional carts to carry away the accumulated snow in the streets, but the contractors raised prices so high none could be obtained.

To Prevent Fraud.

Black River Falls, Wis., Special, Feb. 20.—One of the citizens of this place claims to have discovered or invented a device whereby it is impossible for any one under any circumstances to use a postage stamp the second time. It can be applied to the stamps now in use. An application for its adoption has been made to the postoffice department at Washington and Third Assistant Postmaster General Hazen has sent for a description and plan of the device, but could make no promises of its adoption.

Tired of Personal Organs.

Aberdeen, S. D., Special, Feb. 20.—There are rumors that another daily newspaper will soon be started in this city. Its inception growing out of the controversy between the old and the new management of the Daily News. The people will be satisfied if, by reason of the new deal, they obtain what they so much desire—a good daily newspaper, devoted to the interests of the city and county, instead of being a personal organ.

THE FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS

What is Being Accomplished by our National Lawmakers.

SATURDAY, Feb. 11.

SENATE.

The bill to promote the safety of employes and travelers upon railways by compelling railway companies to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes and their locomotives with driving wheel brakes, was finally disposed of in the senate to-day. The substitute for the house bill of last session was agreed to, and the bill passed; yeas, 39; nays, 10.

The only other important piece of legislation was the agreeing to the conference report on the fortifications bill, and making the Nicaragua canal unfinished business.

HOUSE.

The house resumed in committee of the whole the consideration of the invalid pension appropriation bill. An attempt to limit debate gave rise to a filibustering movement led by Mr. Burrows, and the motion for limitation was withdrawn.

After considerable discussion the committee rose and the house adjourned.

MONDAY, Feb. 13.

SENATE.

The sundry civil bill was reported to the senate today. It carries a total appropriation of $40,350,114, an increase of $924,161 upon the bill as it passed the house.

The bill which is intended to secure the construction of the Nicaragua ship canal occupied the attention of the senate today.

Mr. Morgan discussed the diplomatic features of the measure, and the bill went over until tomorrow.

Mr. Carey attempted to have his bill taken up for the admission of four more states but was defeated.

HOUSE.

No business was transacted in the house today.

TUESDAY, Feb. 14.

SENATE.

Mr. Quay, (Rep.) Pennsylvania offered a resolution, which was agreed to, calling on the secretary of the treasury for information as to whether any part of the appropriation for the World's Columbian exposition has been paid, and, if so, under what modification of the rules as to Sunday closing. He also gave notice of an amendment to an appropriation bill making appropriations connected with the World's Fair conditioned on Sunday closing. The senate proceeded to a consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill. When the terms relating to the Columbian exposition were reached Mr. Allison (in charge of the bill) proposed that they go over temporarily without action. The amendment suggested by Mr. Quay, making Sunday closing an imperative condition, was referred to by that senator and some remarks in opposition were made by Senators Stewart, (Rep.) of Nevada, and McPherson, (Dem.) of New Jersey. Mr. Allison's proposition, however, was agreed to and the items relating to the fair were passed over without action Further discussion was postponed till tomorrow.

The Nicaragua canal bill was under discussion but no action was taken.

HOUSE.

The house resumed consideration of the pension bill.

Mr. Hatch (Dem., of Mo.) then indirectly gave notice of the course which he would pursue in reference to the anti-option bill. He had, he said, waited patiently for days in order that the consideration of the appropriation bills should be completed. But he now gave notice that unless the appropriation bills were disposed of in a reasonable time he would ask for the consideration of a bill which, being a revenue bill, had a right of way.

After further debate on the pending pension bill the committe rose and the house, without coming to any conclusion thereon, at 4:55 adjourned.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 15.

SENATE

The Nicaraguan canal bill, though having the advantage of being the "unfinished business," had to give way today in the senate to the sundry civil appropriation bill. All the amendments to that bill reported by the committee on appropriations (including the World's Fair items) were disposed of with the exception of those relating to river and harbor improvements, and these were in the full tide of debate when the president's Hawaiian message was delivered, and then without the delay of a minute, the senate, on Mr. Sherman's motion, went into executive session. The diplomatic and consular and the military academy appropriation bills were reported and placed on the calendar.

HOUSE.

The invalid pension appropriation bill monopolized the attention of the house today. The general debate was enlivened by Mr. Boutelle, of Maine, who made one of his vigorous and characteristic speeches. But the house at large looked upon the controversy today without excitement, and it ended without any gain on either side.

Against the amendments changing the existing pension law points of order were made, the determination of which was postponed until tomorrow.

THURSDAY, Feb. 16.

SENATE.

The session of the senate today was occupied in the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill, an amendment involving the continuance of the supervisor of elections giving rise to a long heated political discussion.

Mr. Faulkner gave notice that in consequence of the very serious illness of one of the late Senator Kenna's children, the memorial services for Mr. Kenna were postponed from next Saturday till Monday, Feb. 27.

HOUSE.

The house resumed in committee of the whole the consideration of the pension appropriate bill. But no action was taken.

Friday, Feb. 17.

SENATE.

The sundry civil appropriation bill occupied the exclusive attention of the senate today. The amendment relating to federal supervision of elections was carried by a party vote. Mr. Sherman offered an amendment providing for an issue of 3 per cent bonds to maintain the gold reserve. Debate on this amendment consumed the greater part of the session and adjournment was taken without disposing of it.

HOUSE.

The pension appropriation bill was passed after short debate.

The post office appropriation bill was postponed until Tuesday.

The senate bill was passed extending to the North Pacific ocean the provisions of the statutes for the protection of fur seals.

Geo. F. Fuller, general agent for the Plano Manufacturing Co., was in town to-day and closed a contract with Hall Bros. to handle their machinery the coming season. They will handle harvesters, binders, mowers and hay rakes and will always have a full supply of extras on hand,

George Ralph is probably one of the best informed persons in this part of the state where the pineries and the reservation are concerned, His many surveying contracts having given him a good insight as to where the best pine is situated and he informs us that he is constantly receiving letters from eastern parties relating to the pine timber in this section. This would carry the idea that eastern capital is watching the pine with a view of investment,—Crookston Times.

Col. Carroll D. Wright, the well known statistician, avers, and produces figures to support his assertion, that the introduction of machinery has decreased the number of the unemployed. Among other things he points to England where machinery is most used and where the proportion of the employed to population is largest, and then to Russia, where precisely the reverse is the case as to both men and machinery As Mr Wright's position is the reverse of the contention of the majority of people, his position will attract a good deal of attention and perhaps controversy.—Pioneer Press

A movement is being made to have the legislature pass a law requiring that notice of a chattel mortgage sale must be published in some newspaper. This would be a wise measure. As the law is now a constable can stick up a notice on the back side of a barn, where no one will notice it, and still comply with the law, In such cases no buyers are there and the mortgagee can bid in the property at figures to suit himself, Such a law would still allow the mortgagor to give up mortgaged property without the expenses of such publication, if he wanted to do so. By all means let us have such a law—Marshall Leader.

An Exchange says the farmers ought to be allowed the cost of better roads by working it out on the highway. Why, that is just what the farmer has been doing and the result has been simply awful. Assessed so many days road tax, he and his hired help go out on the highway, plow it up so that it will be the more readily converted into mud devote about half the time to resting in the shade and having for a stated period made the highway about as impossible as it can be made, he goes back to work on the farm with a sense of relief and the consciousness that he has done his township a great and lasting service It must last till the next year for no condition can induce him to work on the roads except once a year, at a time when they least need it,"

In an article upon the great Rainy river valley published in the Northwest Magazine for February, Col, Platt B. Walker says; "Of the timber in the Rainy valley the most important is the pine. The aggregate quantity of white and Norway pine, of course, cannot even be approximated in figures; but from all sources of information extending through a period of twenty-five years, I feel safe in saying that there is more pine timber in the Rainy river valley, than ever grew in the upper Mississippi valley proper. The Indians and hunters have burned up vast quantities, particularly in the upper Pigeon river country, at the head of the Rainy valley and around the Net lake country where many hundreds of millions of feet have been ruthlessly destroyed. On the Canadian side of the river south of the C. P. R., there is a vast quantity of pine of two varieties. The hardwoods, consisting of oak, elm (three kinds), birch (three varieties), ash three kinds), maple, soft maple, "balm-gilead," moosewood, wild cherry, plum, thorn-apple, haw, blue beech, aspen willow, red cedar, and ironwood, are found in groves all over the region; and generally the undergrowth of prickly ash, blackberry, raspberry and hazel with numerous vines and creepers is so idense as to make life a burden to the surveyor and explorer who undertake to penetrate these jungles. No words can picture the swamps of this region, which occupy a considerable per cent of the whole area—tamarac, spruce and white cedar, with a thick matting of hazel, beech, willow and juniper, so dense as to defy passage of man or beast,"—Mississippi Valley Lumberman.

New York Store,

Senator Leavitt has aroused a storm of indignation by his bill regarding municipal taxation. If it is not true as he charges, that the wealth of the country evades the payment of its just proportion of the expense of conducting the government, why all this storm about it? But it is true, Wealth everywhere defeats the tax gatherer. It is the toiling millions and not the men of wealth, who bear the brunt of taxation. Just as the protective tariff works, so do all the schemes of ordinary direct taxation. The man of wealth invariably finds a way to escape that the man of ordinary means, or the really poor man is unable to follow. Let us hope that by his agitation of the matter, Senator Leavitt may accomplish some practical reform in taxation.—Le Sueur Sentinel.

Capt. T. A. Dunlava, of Fisher, Polk Co,, is a candidate for the position of receiver of the U. S. land office at Crookston. He was appointed to that position by Mr. Cleveland almost the last thing before he evacuated the office of president, Aaker's term having expired, but as congress was not then in session, Mr. Dunlava's appointment was not confirmed and when Harrison came in he reappointed Aaker, and a republican congress confirmed the appointment, leaving Mr, Dunlava out, and this was done in the face of the fact that President Cleveland had allowed Aaker the republican receiver to hold his position until his term of office had expired. Mr. Dunlava is a practical business man, and not given to seeking office, but taking everything into consideration we think he is entitled to and should receive the appointment. He has been a life-long democrat and is an old soldier, bearing the scars of many battles.—Detroit Free Press.

A Great Place for Salt.

Five or six years ago the people of Colorado City, away out on the rugged bluffs of the Colorado river, felt that they had reached a degree of advancement which justified municipal airs. They thought they ought to have a city council. When they got that they discovered that their water supply wasn't what it ought to be. There came in a class of high toned settlers who weren't satisfied with whisky and water, but wanted all water, and good water, too. The city council in due deliberation moved in the matter. A considerable fund was raised and a deep hole was bored. The drill went down 1,200 feet. It didn't find good drinking water, but it struck petroleum, eighty feet of rock salt and other things.

The boring stopped for awhile. Colorado City offered its hole for sale, but found no takers. After awhile somebody thought of making use of the salt. The hole was bored deeper. It struck fresh water, which arose to within 200 or 300 feet of the surface and dissolved the rock salt. A pump was put down. A windmill was hoisted above the pump. The wind raised the salt water, which was run into a reservoir. This west Texas sun, which shines about 340 days in the year, did the rest. Colorado City had salt. Other wells have been bored. Windmills have been hoisted in rows until Don Quixote might think he saw, by the moonlight, a whole array defying him. The process commends itself to an economical, not to say a lazy, man. The water dissolves the rock salt. The wind raises the water. The sun evaporates the water and leaves the salt on the ground.

Could anything be easier? Manual labor is necessary to take up the salt and barrel it, that's all, A 60-foot windmill raises from 5,000 to 8,000 gallons of salt water in an hour. Of the salt thus manufactured by nature's forces Colorado City ships out several hundred carloads a month. A chemical analysis shows this salt to be 98 per cent. pure. In a country where there were less sunshine and wind saltmaking could not be carried on so successfully.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

EVERYBODY IS TALKING ABOUT THE INAUGURATION

And What Cleveland Will Do, or May Do, or Should Do, When He Takes Harrison's Place Next Week. Short Talks With Northwestern Men.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20, 1893.

"Bob" Evans, the Republican national committeeman from Minnesota, in company with Judge Wilson, of Winona, have been in the city for two weeks past. The occasion of the visit of these two prominent legal and political lights was in no sense political. They were engaged in a legal contest before the Supreme Court of the United States regarding the title to certain lands in Minnesota—whether they were owned by the National government or by the old Winona and St. Peter Railroad company.

Judge Wilson refused to talk, remarking that "the silent man, when the gentleman of his choice was about to be inaugurated as President of the United States, was very liable to be wise as the serpent, if not as harmless as the dove."

On the other hand, Mr. Evans is always ready to converse with the public, more or less clearly, through the medium of the public press. On this occasion he remarked: "I have no possible interest in Mr. Cleveland's Minnesota appointments. There is an abundance of capable Democrats in the Northwest, not only to advise President Cleveland, but to fill any positions he may have to offer. Thus far no particular faction seems to have gotten a corner on the favor of the great elect. It seems very probable that one second class minister—probably one of either Sweden and Norway or Denmark—will be bestowed on the North Star state, but whether Mr. Doran, or Mr. Hall, or Major Baldwin will dictate the man, or whether they will join in recommending some Scandinavian Democrat has not yet developed.

"As to the minor places there are plenty of patriots to fill them. And I hope they will be permitted to do so by Mr. Cleveland.

"The Republicans have only one function to exercise: Close up the ranks for the next contest."

Major Pickler, of South Dakota, can grow very indignant when the occasion arises. It arose the other day, and the Major arose with it, from his seat in the House, and gave the members an opportunity to witness his indignation. The occasion of the Major's temper was found in the fact that the last session Congress passed a bill appropriating a sum of money for the erection of Indian school houses at Rapid City and Chamberlain, S. D. The bill was signed by the President, but the money has never been paid. Mr. Pickler inquired into it, and was informed that the appropriation had been held up on the recommendation of Mr. Dorchester, superintendent of Indian schools. Mr. Pickler naturally grew a little indignant.

"I do not see why our money should be kept from us," he said "upon the recommendation of this official from Massachusetts. South Dakota has more Indians than any State in the Union, and the establishment of the schools is a paramount necessity. It is impossible to do anything with the Indians so long as they are allowed to remain in ignorance. It is a question in which our people are vitally interested. We think that when money has been appropriated for our State we certainly should be allowed to draw it."

It is only one week until Mr. Cleveland will ride down the Avenue to the Capitol and for the second time take the oath as Chief Magistrate of the great Republic. He will then ride back and take possession of the White House, which spacious and commodious mansion will then be vacated by President Harrison. The arrangements for the great event are on a very elaborate scale, and if this erratic climate presents the unusual aspect of good weather, the inaugural ceremonies will far outstrip any previous effort in that line. All the surrounding States will be represented by their Governors and large bodies of militia, while that portion of the regular army which decorates the National Capital, will have an opportunity to shake the moths off their dress uniforms in public. Inaugurations are a positive blessing to the regular army. Not being confronted by grim visaged war, our splendid military establishment takes these rare occasions to exhibit itself in public, and to show to the eyes of all the world that it can be extremely ornamental if not constantly useful.

"I think Mr. Cleveland is to be congratulated upon his choice. Judge Gresham has long been before the American people, and always in a creditable attitude. I am not one of those who incline to punish men for leaving the party with which they have been affiliated when the desertion was made in obedience to the dictates of conscience. This I think was the case with Judge Gresham. The great question between the parties in the last campaign was protection or tariff for revenue only. The Judge was a consistent tariff reformer, and while the campaign was pending came out man fashion and declared in favor of Mr. Cleveland and his low tariff policy. The election shows that thousands of good Republicans took the same view of the subject, and gave Mr. Cleveland enough votes to elect him over Mr. Harrison. The minority party in our political system has only one way to become the majority party and succeed to power, and that is by opening the door to and recruiting from the disaffected element in the majority party. Mr. Cleveland's course, then, in calling to the head of his Cabinet a great and popular Republican who supported him in the recent campaign, has shown the President-Elect to be not only a broad and tolerant statesman, but also a shrewd and skillful politician. Hide-bound Democrats may growl, but Mr. Cleveland has shown his party the high road to continued party success. He has also emphasized a point that Republicans have long overlooked, and shown our party, that if it is to regain power it must call back the disaffected to its ranks by wise and equitable action."

There will be no silver legislation this session, notwithstanding the tremendous effort of all parties to bring this question to the front. Or was the effort, rather, to make a great noise over it, and after cackling and crowing and shouting, to deposit never an egg? Your correspondent is on the ground, and yet confesses his inability to discover with any degree of accuracy what anybody in Congress wants done with the silver question. But, the people having spoken so emphatically for the Democratic party, probably it is just as well to leave this vital subject to be determined by that party.

One of the great measures that will receive the closest attention from the next Congress will be the voting of the Nation's credit for the construction of the Nicaragua canal. It will be the most gigantic undertaking of the century, probably exceeding that of the Suez canal. The supporters of the measure claim that the government will never be called upon for more than the one hundred millions, it is now asked to guarantee. Yet all men realize that this is merely the entering wedge, and if more is needed, more will be asked for from Congress. The question for the people of America to decide is, whether the completed work will be worth the price that must be paid for it. The popular impression is that it will be, and any one listening to Senator Frye's speech last week would have left the Senate Chamber swearing that it would be cheap at a thousand millions, if it took that sum to build, complete and establish it. For this great work also the Democratic party will have to take the responsibility—although it is in no sense a partisan measure—because having all branches of the Government they will have the power to pass or defeat the bill.

As is well known, each member of the President's Cabinet comes after the Vice President as a possible President of the Republic, in case of the death of both the President and Vice President. Their rank in the Cabinet is graduated by the possibility of their succeeding to the Presidency, which is as follows:

Secretary of State.
Secretary of the Treasury.
Secretary of War.
Attorney General.
Postmaster General.
Secretary of the Navy.
Secretary of the Interior.
Secretary of Agriculture,

A special session of Congress is looked for by all of the best posted among the public men of the National Capital. It is first asserted, and apparently on the very best authority, that Mr. Cleveland insists upon clearing the ground for his administration by a definite settlement of the silver question. Those who ought to be behind the scenes say that he will not proceed to make any important appointments until the silver situation is finally fixed. Again Mr. Carlisle has the expert forces of the Treasury Department already engaged in preparing the figures for a re-adjustment of our tariff laws; and he says to his close friends that a bill for this re-adjustment will be ready for action by Congress by the 1st of June.

It is now about as perfectly assured as it can be that the Democratic party will have the next Senate—probably by a very narrow majority, but still by a majority large enough to secure tariff reform at all events. It is thought to be wise for the party to entrench their Democratic position as early as possible by the enactment of a tariff law and this will probably be done at the extra session.

IN NORTHERN ALASKA.

INTERESTING SIGHTS IN A TRIP TO FORT YUKON.

Beyond the Limits of the Tourist's Path—The Flora, the Scenery and the Natives of America's Little Known Northwestern Possessions.

In thirty days, with the aid of the transcontinental railway service, which co-operates with the Pacific coast steamship lines, the New Yorker can visit Southeastern Alaska, but he is there far from the "land of the midnight sun." That portion of the territory within the frigid zone is not so easily visited. Trasportation is uncertain and irregular. Not less than eighteen months must be allowed for the trip, with a possible delay for a year longer. Thirty or forty years ago the visiting agents of the Hudson Bay company's post at Fort Yukon occupied seven years in making the round trip from London. The journey was made with dog sledges from Winnipeg over the Mackenzie and Porcupine rivers. Since the advent of the Alaska Commercial company another approach is afforded. It is by ocean steamer to St. Michael, thence by river steamer up the Yukon.

SMALL ESKIMO VILLAGE NEAR ST. MICHAEL.

In June, 1889, the writer was one of a party of twenty who started from San Francisco for Northern Alaska to determine the international boundary. We sailed from San Francisco on the 14th of June on the Bertha. For the succeeding two weeks our experiences were such as are generally incident to a long voyage on the Pacific ocean. Our voyage to Unalaska was through as barren and desolate a waste as a journey through Death valley. A few "gooneys," as the sailors called some birds of the albatross species, followed us continually to detect the drop of every crumb. Other sea animals—porpoise, nautilus, barnacles, some small animals resembling "Portuguese men-of-war," and up near Bering sea a few schools of killer whales and numbers of fur seals.

On the 27th the captain announced that "the distant pale cloud to port is land." His statement was soon verified by the appearance of bright, snowy mountains, both to the left and to the right—showing we were headed for a "pass" in the Aleutian chain of islands. The rest of the day the most enchanting views presented themselves. If a section were taken from Colorado's most rugged, snow-capped range and placed on the middle of the broad Pacific, the picture would not do justice to the Aleutian chain. On the left was Mt. Makooshin, the Vesuvius of Unalaska, 5,500 feet above the sea. On the right was mighty Shishalden, towering 8,500 feet—its symmetrical cone enveloped in crowns of perpetual snow and its base washed by the mad waves of the Pacific and the more gentle surf of Bering sea. Both to the east and to the west was island after island, peak after peak, gradually turned into cloud in the distance.

We pass by "Egg Island" and "Old Man," high mountain peaks, projecting above the sea, and go through Onalgo pass into Bering sea. An Aleut village ten miles to port attracts eager interest the captain points out Beaver bay, where Capt. Cook refitted his fleet in 1778. Mount Makooshin was the first landing place of the Russians under Stephen Glottav in 1757. By 4 in the afternoon we are within twelve miles of Unalaska. "Priest Rock" marks our position. This is one of those fantastic "necks" so common in volcanic-made lands, standing of the sea slender and high, with cowl and gown, in thoughtful attitude.

Unalaska is about as well known as San Francisco was before 1849. It is the San Francisco of the Aleutian islands. At Unalaska we are not yet out of civilization nor out of temperate climes. Here the torrid and frigid zones meet and barbarism and civilization shake hands. The Japanese warm current pays tribute to the cold of the north in the form of raw fogs and chilly rains. Here are to be seen the first cryptogamic plant life and the humus peculiar to cold climes, yet the average annual temperature is about the same as that of the middle states and the superior goose of northern Alaska finds it warm enough for winter quarters.

Unalaska's little land-locked harbor of Iliuliuk was filled upon our arrival with men-of-war, revenue cutters, merchantmen and whaling vessels.

It was the middle of the flower season. Variegated anemones, orchids, monks' hoods, buttercups, dandelions and daisies were only a part of the luxuriance everywhere in profusion.

Since his first contact with Russian civilization upon the landing of Stephen Glottav in 1757 the Aleut has undergone a change in language, religion and dress. He is not improved, but he is changed. He still likes his fish, cod, halibut, trout, herrings and seal, and as a rule he spears his game in the old primitive manner. He is still at home in his underground burrow, or primitive house. But he has also learned to crave the canned foods, bread and flour of civilization, and he has not the least superstition against living in a comfortable cottage, burning Australian hard coal and dressing in imported cloth made suits. The Aleut has inherited the qualities of his ancestors, the wild Japanese-like natives of 1750, and the habits of his ancestors, the Russian traders of 1757 and later. These people are members of the Greek church. Many of them read and write the Russian language. This is taught them by the priests. The Aleuts are dependent upon the traders for a living. They are paid fixed prices for their otter, fox, mink, marten and other skins, and they work by the day about the warehouses of the Alaska Commercial company. During our stay a cargo of coal was discharged by the women and girls, who carried heavy baskets of the article on their backs from the vessel to the warehouse.

Early on the morning of July 2—the fifth day after our arrival—we left for the north. Our stores and quarters had been transferred to the St. Paul, a larger and more comfortable vessel, in charge of Capt. Erskine. Our course lay somewhat to east of the Pribiloff islands. Small birds did not desert us, and though the sea became somewhat "choppy," there was a marked improvement in comfort over the voyage on the Pacific.

On the glorious Fourth we were entering the region of ice fields. On deck the thermometer registered a few degress above freezing and the steam heater in my state room was a comfortable provision. A popular resort was the huge smokestack, around which brave arctic explorers and daring adventurers comfortably performed most valiant deeds.

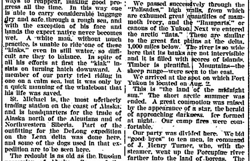
All vessels having business with the Yukon country are obliged to anchor at St. Michael—the nearest safe port to the mouth of the river. Upon awakening on the 6th I found the vessel anchored two miles off St. Michael, and the deck already swarming with a motly crowd of Esquimaux, half-breeds and white men—some eager for news, some eager for trade, all curious to see. To these the arrival of the St. Paul had been a subject of much speculation during ten preceding months. No Crusoe ever gazed more longingly for a sail than do the weary waiters at St. Michael each summer. Interest in the St. Michael increased by the news that our party of twenty was aboard, together with the workmen and material for the construction of a 300-ton steamer, to be known as the Arctic, to be used in landing our party and stores 1,300 miles up the Yukon river. The Arctic was to be several times larger than any steamer yet launched on the Yukon, and her construction at St. Michael during the next few weeks would make lively times.

The sea was rough, too rough for our stores to be lightered ashore. Nevertheless, the natives found no trouble in coming off to us in their small "kiaks." Kiaks are small canoes made of the raw hide of the seal. They are hatched over, leaving only a hatchway large enough for the legs of the occupant. The natives wear waterproof shirts made from the entrails of sea lions. These garments are called "kamlikas." After taking his seat in the "kiak," with the skirt of the "kamlika" securely fastened to the rim of the hatchway, and with the hood on the "kamlika" drawn tightly about his head and chin, the expert paddler would ride any sea. He might disappear beneath the waves, but always to reappear, making good progress all the time. In this way one is able to carry considerable baggage dry and safe through a rough sea, and with the exception of his face and hands the expert native never becomes wet. A white man, without much practice, is unable to ride one of these "kiaks," even in still water, so difficult are they to balance. In spite of all his efforts at first the "kiak" insists on turning hatch downward. A member of our party tried riding in one on a calm sea, but it was only by a quick manning of the whaleboat that his life was saved.

St. Michael is the most northerly trading station on the coast of Alaska, and is headquarters for the trade of Alaska north of the Aleutians and of Northwestern Siberia. Part of the outfitting for the DeLong expedition on the Lena delta was done here, and some of the dogs used in that expedition are to be seen here.

The redoubt is as old as the Russian possession of Alaska. Some of the bastions erected by the Russian exiles a generation ago still stand. There is an artistic Greek church, which was erected by the Russian government. It is the finest structure of the kind in Alaska.

No trees grow on the territory bordering on Bering sea, but flowers and berries nursed in cradles of downy moss are luxuriant. Beneath is frozen soil and perpetual ice—how deep no one knows, but it is estimated to be several hundred feet. The land is of volcanic formations; there are numbers of extinct craters in sight. The general flat surface of the country is sufficiently varied by low mountains as not to be unpleasing, but in winter when the sea is frozen and the earth clothed in monotonous white the scene becomes tiresome.



UNALASKA AND ILIULINK HARBOR.

The nights at this season of the year are as light as the day. The ship's carpenters work far into the night on the Arctic.

We left St. Michael amid the firing of an old Russian howitzer, the blowing of whistles and the waving of flags. Precautions as to the navigation of Bering sea in properly fitted ocean steamers, real danger begins upon taking the river steamers. When these crafts leave St. Michael it is always a matter of doubt whether they will ever return.

In less than twenty-four hours we had successfully passed through the shoals of the coast, over seventy miles, into the placid waters of a bayou of the Yukon. For several days scenes and experiences may be summed up in trader stores, Indian villages, graves decorated with totem poles and fantastic coverings, wild roses, marsh marigolds, blue bells, coarse marsh grass, belugas (white whales), hair seals and mosquitoes. We passed by an ancient battle ground, where arrow heads and fragments of primitive weapons testified to the once "grappling vigor and rough frown of war."

A SUMMER HOUSE.

As we left the sea the comely and homely features of the Innuit tribes of Esquimaux changed to more attractive expressions. At the lively and populous summer village of Rasbanski the bank of the river was lined with plump and laughing maidens dressed, at least in some cases, in light cotton wrappers. Here was the beginning of spruce, cottonwood, alder, willow and birch timber, and consequently of the birch bark canoe, which is used in place of the "kiak."

One of the oldest settlements on the Lower Yukon is the Russian mission, once the seat of priests of great power. The priests are half-breeds, who have adopted many of the repulsive habits of Indian savagery. The natives were filthy.

We found a veritable garden at Kuceriski above the mouth of Yuskokwin river. This is the seat of a thriving Jesuit mission and Indian boarding school. Think of turnips, onions, peas and radishes in this frozen wilderness!

Beautiful scenery on the Yukon begins just below Anvic. In July nature bestows her most attractive tints upon the moutains and skies. Bright Phoebus is near enough the horizon throughout the twenty-four hours to perfect such scenes as we witnessed at Anvic rapids.

It was a view of the Kalyuh range. Perpetual snow is not unusal in the long arctic summer day. It rather chooses to melt and hide below the moss in the form of everlasting ice. At Anvic rapids the first snow-capped range was seen. The picture reminded me of views of the La Platas and Ute Peak in Colorado, as seen from the lower mountains of New Mexico, fifty miles to the south. The Kalyuh range extended from east to west, cutting our course at right angles. The wide silver sheet of the river, with its banks hidden in green chapparal of alder and willow, and higher bluffs covered with spruce and aspen, lost itself in the deep purple base of the distant mountains. Over the scene towered white domes and peaks into clouds as variegated as the rainbow.

Our vessel's whistle was ever the signal which sent the dogs at the native villages along the banks howling frantically to the wilderness, and brought squaws, children and men in small canoes about us like flies. Most of the time we kept ourselves closely barred in our little state room: otherwise the mosquitoes would have devoured us.

We were sometimes entertained with dances by our Indian crew. These fellows appropriated "for'd" part of the lower deck to their sports, labors, beds and meals. The latter they prepared and consumed at all hours, and a meal usually consisted of a salmon stew and tea.

We passed successively through the "Palisades," high walls, from which are exhumed great quantities of mammoth ivory, and the "Ramparts," or canons of the Yukon. Next we entered the arctic "flats." These are similar to the great flat plains at the delta, 1,000 miles below. The river is so wide here that its banks are not intervisible and it is filled with scores of islands. Timber is plentiful. Mountains—the sheep range—were seen to the east.

This is "the land of the midnight sun." The short arctic summer was ended. A great commotion was raised by the appearance of a star, the herald of approaching darkness. Ice formed at night. Our camp fires were comfortable.

Our party was divided here. We bid "good byes" to ten men, in command of J. Henry Turner, who, with the steamer, went up the Porcupine river farther into the land of boreas. The rest of us, in command of J. E. McGrath, waited the arrival of the Arctic.

WAITING FOR JIM ALLISON.

The Virginia Mountaineer Still Retains Some of His Old-Fashioned Piety.

Down in the mountain regions of Virginia," said a commercial traveler to an Indianapolis Journal man, "there still exists a good deal of the old-fashioned piety which prevailed in the days when it was customary to run a digger into an obnoxious person's gizzard and then pray for the repose of his soul. I was traveling on horseback, of course, through that region last summer, when I came across an old fellow half-hidden in the underbrush by the side of the road. He was sitting so quiet, and his weather-beaten clothes so well matched the prevailing tints of the locality that I passed within a few feet of him without seeing him. If my horse hadn't shied. When he saw that he was discovered he stood up and looked at me for a moment or two without speaking. As he had a rifle that looked at that instant, to be near seven feet long thrown across his arm I felt it my duty to be sociable. I said:

"Hunting?"

"No," said he, "I hain't. I'm a-waitin' fer Jim Allison to come this way, an' if the Lord is willin' I low to blow the top of his — head off."

Aluminum Horseshoes.

That was a funny idea of those fellows in the Finnish cavalry regiments recently in experimenting with aluminum for horseshoes," was the remark of Captain James Morris, an ex-army officer, at the Southern recently. "They took a number of their horses and had them shod; on one fore foot they put an iron shoe, such as we all use, and on the other they put a shoe made of aluminum. This was repeated in shoeing the hind feet, and I wouldn't be surprised if the freak should cause a revolution in horseshoeing. It seems that after six weeks' trial, during which time the horses had been moving on a particularly hard and stony road, it was found that the aluminum shoes had worn infinitely better than those of iron; and while the latter had gone to pieces the former was intact. It is a lighter metal than iron, nearly as heavy, but it may prove a big thing for army horses yet."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Pine-trees on Volcanoes.

Every one who admires trees must be interested in the result of Professor Heilprin's studies of the pines that clothe the slopes of the great volcanic mountains of Mexico.

These huge peaks seem to have pierced their way upward through a mantle of pine forest, which clings to their sides up to a height of nearly three miles and three quarters.

The vertical range of the pine in Mexico is remarkable. It is found among the sun-loving palm-trees at the foot of the mountains, and it stands defiant of the cold close to the perpetual snows that cover their Ancient Pieces of Wrought Iron.

The three oldest known pieces of wrought iron in existence are the sickle blade that was found by Belzoni under the base of a sphynx in Karnak, near Thebes; the blade found by Colonel Vyse imbedded in the mortar of one of the pyramids, and a portion of a crosscut saw which Mr. Layard exhumed at Nimrod—all of which are now in the British museum. Another piece of iron, an account of which might not be inappropriate in this connection was the wrought bar of Damascus steel which King Porus presented to Alexander the Great. This bar, which is of unknown antiquity, is still carefully preserved in the National Turkish museum at Constantinople.—Philadelphia Press.

Ben Butler's Joke.

When the city council of Lowell passed an ordinance, some years ago, making it an offense to permit a dog to go upon the streets without a muzzle, and not stating where that muzzle should be attached to the dog, Gen. Buttler bought a muzzle for his canine and one day started out to take a walk, with the animal at his heels. The dog wore a muzzle, but it was so attached to the brute that it inclosed his tail instead of his nose. At the next meeting of the council the ordinance was amended to cover the location of the guard.

A few weeks ago Bob Fitzsimmons declared that as long as he has been sparring no boxer ever touched his face. In a recent exhibition at Chicago, however, Prof. George Siler, the veteran boxer, who recently had a "go" with Jack McAuliffe, is credited with hitting Bob twice on the nose, and also got several good blows on the face and body.

If the railroads of the United States were required to pay taxes on the full amount of their stock of more than $9,000,000,000, water would soon cease to be part of their capital. And with the water squeezed out and rates adjusted to the lower and real value, millions upon millions of dollars which are now paid to the transportation companies would remain in the pockets of the people. Several years ago under a special act the state of Minnesota advanced to farmers in this county as well as to residents of adjoining counties, seed wheat the several counties guaranteeing full payment to the state within two years, Seed grain to the value of $20,000 was distributed to indigent farmers in Polk county who had the previous year lost their crop by hail, the county taking as security a lien on the crop, the farmers contracting to return the value of the grain within two years. There is now due the state $2,000 or one-tenth of the original loan which cannot be collected, as many of the farmers taking advantage of the seed grain loan have long since departed for newer fields. A bill, house file No. 614, which provides for cancelling the indebtedness of Polk county to the state for the balance due has been introduced. Its passage is doubtful for the simple reason that it will establish, a dangerous precedent. If the county guaranteed the payment of the amount advanced by the state the county should pay it, Passing a measure to wipe out an honest debt is not paying it by any means—East Grand Forks Courier.

Political trimmers are all put out over Mr. Cleveland's selection of Judge Gresham as secretary of state. Mr. Cleveland came on the political stage at a time when political trimmers were in bad odor with the people, and it was his disregard of mere office-seekers that elevated him from sheriff to the presidency. It was his relaxation from this principle that defeated him in '88. Now he sees his mistake and seeks to return to the people, If he hangs to this he will build up his party- If he don't, his party will be knocked out again —Midway News.

Duluth Herald: It is unjust toconntries that large tracts of land should be exempted from taxation because they are owned by the railroads, and a double burden of taxation imposed upon the lands owned by private parties It is urged by some that the railroads now pay taxes based upon their gross earnings, and that should be sufficient. There are figures at hand, however, to show that this claim is fallacious. The assessed valuation of the whole state exclusive of railroad property, is $588,820 215, while the value of railroad property in the state is $233,000,000 The total taxes collected in 1890 were $12,707,471 while the tax payed the same year by railroads on their gross earnings was $707,867. This shows that the railroads are paying very much less under the gross earnings system than they would if they were assessed in the same manner as other property. It also shows that the taxation of their lands would not increase their burden of taxation to a greater extent proportionately than that of other people,

Backward, turn backward, oh time in your flight, give me July again just for the night, soften the soil where the frost king has lain; oh let me hear one mosquito again; I am so weary of snow drifts and ice, weary of paying the coal trust its price: weary, so weary of frostbitten pie—bring me a slice of the Fourth of July, Backward swing backward, oh season of snow—mercury fifteen to forty below—turn on the heat of the tropical zone, roast me until I am cooked to the bone; I am so tired of freezing my nose, weary of chilblains and corns on my toes, weary of trying to sleep with cold feet—turn on the heat, master, turn on the heat,—Nebraska State Journal.

This has a queer sound nowadays, hasn't it? "A reckless and unprincipaled tyrant has invaded your soil. Abraham Lincoln, regardless of all moral, legal and constitutional restraints, has his abolitionists among you who are murdering and imprisoning your citizens, confiscating and destroying your property and committing other acts of violence and outrage too shocking and revolting to humanity to be enumerated. All rules of civilized warefare are abandoned and they proclaim by their acts, if not on their banners, that their war cry is 'Beauty and Booty.' All that is dear to man, your honor and that of your wives and daughters, your fortunes and your lives are involved in this momentous contest." The man who wrote it died only the other day, He was Gen. Beauregard, last of the great chieftains of the Rebellion, and the words quoted are a portion of one of his proclamations, Minneapolis Tribune.

For nearly a year past negotiations have been going on between the Great Northern Railway people and an eastern syndicate relating to the sale of the swamp lands lying west of the Great Northern track in Polk county, to the syndicate, There are nearly 100,000 acres of land and the greater part of it is in the Beltrami swamp. The deal will be closed next month, or as soon as the snow leaves the ground sufficiently to get over it before the frost comes out. If the sale is so completed there will be $100,000 spent in draining and improving these lands within the next two years, This will spoil the fall sport for our hunters as the swamp is one of the best places in the county in which to shoot ducks and geese, but it will reclaim a large area of land that will add to the wealth of the county —Crookston Times.

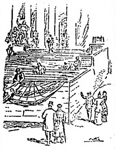
IN HOLIDAY ATTIRE.

WASHINGTON IS DRESSED FOR THE INAUGURATION.

Never Before Were Such Extensive Preparations Made For an Inauguration—A Profitable Season For Thrifty Washingtonians.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—In a few days it will be President Cleveland again. The Capital City is in holiday attire. All over town carpenters are hammering and sawing, decorators are climbing and tacking, and hotel keepers and boarding house people are doing a large and suggestive business in cots and cheap blankets. Never before were such extensive preparations made for an inauguration.



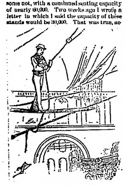
THE INAUGURAL PLATFORM.

Eight years ago, when the Democratic party came into power after standing uncomfortably on the outside for a quarter of a century, it was thought the climax in inaugural magnificence had been reached. But when the Republicans routed the Democracy four years later and with Little Ben returned to power they certainly outdid the celebration which their rivals had indulged in, and now it is the aim of all true Democrats to eclipse even the Harrison inauguration in brilliancy and in number of people engaged in the festivities. If this sort of rivalry goes on, and parties continue to alternate in possession of the presidency, as many acute observers think they will for several years to come, it is a matter of some curiosity as to where we shall stop in our mad efforts to make a display of partisan joy on these quadrennial occasions. If we go much further in this craze, our inaugural fetes will outdo the most gorgeous things that ever Rome saw in her most profligate days.

You may rest assured that the people of Washington are quite willing to have this rivalry continue. It is all grist that comes to their mill. When a Republican president is elected, the Republican business men of the city take the lead in preparing for the inauguration, and when a Democrat is the successful candidate for president the prominent Democrats come to the front. But on every such occasion both Democrats and Republicans help in the work and make of the fete a public rather than a party affair. The people of Washington, like people everywhere, are thrifty, and they go in for making an honest penny or two out of these inauguration celebrations. By contriving to make the receipts of the big ball pay all expenses they avoid the trouble of going down into their own pockets for funds, and the amount of money that the hotels, boarding houses, saloons, restaurants, carriage men, florists and other tradesmen are able to make cannot be estimated. Nor is this all. About one-half the people of the city conclude that they will rent out a room or two to strangers for the inauguration week. They want pretty good prices, too, and usually manage to get what they ask.

Along Pennsylvania avenue, the route of the parade, there is a mania for selling windows and standing room on temporary platforms. Some fancy prices have been paid for choice locations. A New York congressman has paid $500 for the use of a floor over a business house where there are four windows. Here he will accommodate on Saturday about 40 guests, serving them an elegant luncheon with all trimmings. He says this is a cheap way for him to campaign, for his guests are to be men of influence from his district who are coming to Washington and who will appreciate and whose wives will more than appreciate his thoughtful attentions. He figures that this outlay of $500 for the rooms and a hundred or two more for the luncheon and wines will come very near to securing his return to congress.

A single window tolerably well located is worth from $40 upward. Seats on covered balconies built out before the houses sell at from $5 to $10 each. All along the avenue, for a distance of nearly two miles, are huge stands, some of them covered and some not, with a combined seating capacity of nearly 60,000. Two weeks ago I wrote a letter in which I said the capacity of these stands would be 30,000. That was true, according to the plans then made, but the number and size of these structures have been doubled since that time, and this may be taken as a fair sample of the way in which this inauguration has been growing day after day.



DECORATING DIZZY ALTITUDES.

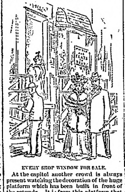
While the people of Washington are thrifty, as they have a right to be, they are not extortionate. At the hotels the prices are reasonable, considering everything. At the most of them the terms are $5 a day for board and lodging, but guests must be willing to sleep four in a room, and each guest at these rates must pay for four days' board whether he stays four days or not. This is not extortionate and is considered by all experienced travelers as a very reasonable charge and requirement. Of course fine parlors and special accommodations will cost a great deal more money. For instance, Mr. Cleveland will pay $175 a day for the parlors which he occupies at the Arlington hotel. At least that is said to be the price which he is to pay, but some people doubt if he is to pay anything more than the usual price of $6 or $7 a day for each person in his party.

Eight years ago Mr. Cleveland stopped at the same hotel when he came to Washington to be inaugurated, and thus gave the inn such a reputation that its proprietor has since made a fortune. It fixed that hotel as the leading caravansery of the capital and brought such a large volume of gilt edged trade that since Mr. Cleveland was here before the capacity of the house has been doubled. It would scarcely be right, after Mr. Cleveland had made the fortune of the owner, to be required to pay $175 a day for his accommodation, nor is it likely that he is to pay any such sum.

The proprietor of another good hotel made a desperate effort to capture the presidential party. He went to the expense of fitting up special parlors for the use of the president and his wife and invited Mr. Cleveland to be his guest without charge or at a mere nominal price. He brought a great deal of political influence to bear for the attainment of his purpose, but all unavailingly. Mr. Cleveland decided to make his headquarters at the same place where he stopped before, and the enterprising but unlucky owner of the other house will have to find some other way to popularize his hostelry.

Rivalry for the presidential patronage is already active in this city. Not only the hotels, but the physicians, the florists, the grocers, the butchers, the plumbers and even the churches, are eager to number the boss of the White House among their customers. To be the White House physician, the White House druggist, the White House butcher or the White House spiritual adviser is considered almost as desirable as to be "hatter to the Prince of Wales" or "bootmaker to her majesty the queen" on the other side of the water.

Curious crowds surround all the places in the city where arrangements are being made for the great event of next Saturday. For instance, at the pension office, where a big gang of workmen are completing the magnificent decorations, policemen are always on hand to keep the crowds moving. The scenes to be witnessed in that gigantic hall are indeed interesting. Workmen climb to dizzy heights, draping and festooning the timbers and steel rods, causing the spectators below to hold their breath in fear of accident. The entire ceiling of the big hall has been covered with a canopy of white and gold, forming in itself a most gorgeous spectacle. Ten thousand yards of material were required, and to hoist it into position 35,000 feet of rope were employed. Silk banners, innumerable flags, the coats of arms of all the states in silver and gold, decorate the galleries and doorways. Nothing prettier than the electric arches at either end of the hall was ever seen. Each is 65 feet high, decorated with plants against a background of pure white, and bearing the words "Cleveland and Stevenson" in letters formed of thousands of electric lights.



EVERY SHOP WINDOW FOR SALE.

At the capitol another crowd is always present watching the decoration of the huge platform which has been built in front of the rotunda. It is from this platform that the president is to deliver his inaugural address. Probably the grandest audience ever faced by an American is that which will assemble at this spot next Saturday. There will be on the platform behind Mr. Cleveland all the dignitaries of the government, congress, the supreme and other courts, the diplomatic representatives at this capital, the army and navy and thousands of distinguished men from all parts of the country—in front literally hundreds of thousands of the brawn and sinew of the land.

While these inauguration occasions are made great events, involving months of hard work and the expenditure of untold thousands of dollars, officially an American coronation is a very simple thing. The most important part of the ceremonies is that which takes place at the capitol at noon. The Fifty-second congress will be in session till almost noon. Very likely the hands of the clocks in the two houses will be moved backward in order to steal a few moments in which to finish up some important legislation. Then the president and his cabinet, the president elect and vice president elect, having been escorted to the capitol by a detachment of police and military, the president elect being also guarded by detectives in citizens' clothing, will assemble in the senate chamber. There both houses of congress and the other great people will be waiting more or less patiently.

After everybody has been seated and the necks of the spectators have been nearly twisted out of joint in the process of catching a glimpse of the big men of the nation, it will take the retiring vice president about two minutes to administer the oath of office to his successor and to declare the Fifty-second congress adjourned without day. The new vice president will announce the call of an extra session of the senate, and that body will meet at once, simply for the purpose of administering oaths to the new senators who may be present.

A recess is then taken, and a mighty procession moves out the doors of the chamber through the rotunda to the platform already spoken of. There the oath of office is administered to the new president by the chief justice of the supreme court, and the inaugural address delivered. Eight years ago Mr. Cleveland stood on this platform facing a spring sun. Four years ago Mr. Harrison stood in a pelting storm of rain. In the betting odds are always on having a stormy 4th of March, but Cleveland's luck may again save him a drenching. So far as the inauguration of the president is concerned, the taking of the oath and the customary address are all there is of the official ceremony, but it is no sooner over than the real show of the day—the great parade down the avenue—begins.

This year the parade is to be a monster. Among the interesting features is to be the presence of a large company of young women from Prince George county, Md., mounted. There are no better horsewomen in the world than these young girls of Maryland and Virginia, in the neighborhood of the capital.

SOME BEAUTIFUL WOMEN.

Faces That Wore Their Bloom Until Past Middle Life.

The portraits of beauties of the time of Washington's inauguration show the highest feminine charms of wit, feeling, heart and mind in faces which wore their bloom staunchly up to fifty.

Mrs. Jay, daughter of Rufus King, with her black hair and brilliant blue eyes; Mrs. Bayard, whose pictured face it is impossible to see and not love; the faithful, frank wife of Alexander Hamilton, who could have kept her gallant husband from his erring ways had she been more of a woman and less of a model.

Many will recall Mme. Rudersdorff, the singer, when over forty, beautiful as an image of rose and white Parian, and Rose Eytinge, whether among the tapestries of the snugly picturesque rooms or in full sunlight, who defied time more successfully than any beauty who has ever trod the stage.

Fortune was none too kind to either of those two women; indeed, it seems as if those best defied years who were constantly stirred up to effort. It depends upon a woman herself more than upon her charms and her youth up to three-score.

Saved.

Witherby—"I was walking along the street today and my feet got tangled up in some electric wires—when the whole current was turned on too."

Mrs. Witherby—"Oh, how terrible! Did the shock hurt you, dear?"

Witherby—"I didn't feel it, my love. I had on a pair of those socks that you knitted me for my birthday.

Gentlemen:—I desire to make a brief statement for the benefit of the suffering. I had been afflicted with catarrh of the head, throat and nose, and perhaps the bladder for fully twenty-five years. Having tried other remedies without success, I was led by an advertisement in the Sentinel-Democrat to try Hall's Catarrh Cure. I have just finished my fourth bottle, and I believe I am right when I say I am thoroughly restored. I don't believe there is a trace of the disease left. Respectfully,

DEFRAUDING ABORIGINES.

CLEVER SPECULATORS BUNCO POOR LO.

Swindles Perpetrated Upon the Dusky Denizens of the Logging Section of the State Which Fall Little Short of Depredations

Buying Birthrights.

Washington, Special, Feb. 27.—A report made public in the Indian office from the operations of logging by the Indians of the Northwest shows that, although in many instances individual Indians are well paid for the timber and in some cases do very well, the tendency to cheat and defraud the red men by speculators and the logging contractors is such that it is very doubful whether it is policy to allow the Indians to dispose of it under the direction of the land office after the appraisement to highest bidders. Instances of the way the frauds have been committed are cited in the following: At Fond du Lac reservation in Minnesota, there was an extensive robbery. It was found upon investigation, as Commissioner Morgan reports, that under the direction of government, Farmer J. S. Stack, 16,275,792 feet of sawlogs had been unlawfully cut and sold, for which he received $83,785. He had also sold a large quantity of telegraph poles, railroad ties, cedar paving and posts cut on the reservation. The lumber dealers, however, bought the timber from Mr. Stack in good faith, and the company which took much the greater part applied to Agent Leahy for information as to Mr. Stack's authority to sell it, and was informed that he had full authority. Hence Agent Ballin recommended that no suits should be brought against these innocent purchasers, although the contracts made with them were really fraudulent and in violation of the law.

Commissioner Morgan held that the original fraud vitiated every transaction connected with it; but in view of all the circumstances, he also was of the opinion that the purchasers ought not to be subjected to suit. The commissioner also held that since in all cases but one Mr. Stack paid to the loggers a price less than was received by him from the purchasers, he was liable in a civil suit for the difference. Mr. Stack was, of course, removed and Mr. McLennan appointed to succeed him as farmer. Then an effort was made to establish a shingle and lath mill to utilize the vast amount of waste timber which had been left on the ground by the choppers during these operation.

Another case of depredation occurred recently on the Leach Lake and Lake Winnebagoshish reservations in Minnesota. Contracts had been made by two Minneapolis firms or companies with Charles Losh for 1,000,000 feet of timber, with Opinwaywaycomegokquay for 750,000 feet, with Shocggeeshig for 250,000 feet, and with several other Indians. It was found, however, that under these contracts a large amount of green standing timber had been unlawfully cut and agents sent out to investigate and stop these depredations. It will be seen that the cutting of timber may be relied upon as a permanent and valuable source of income on some Indian reservations, but the government is forced to keep a vigilant watch on the manner of conducting it. The Indians engaged in such work receive good wages and the net price of the timber at market rates is deposited for them in funds at a high rate of interest, except the portion which may be immediately expended for them under direction of the interior department.

"Choctaw Finances."

London, Feb 27.—The Daily News says in a leader entitled "Choctaw Finance:" "Mr. Harrison and Mr. Foster seem to be leaving office with their tongues in their cheeks. What would we have thought had Mr. Goschen ascribed the Bering crisis to the Crofton question? The present position however, is really a graver one—the result of a long and varied course of finance." The article scarifies Senator Sherman and other supporters of the government and says: "But the truth must be confessed. It is not the shameless jobberies and wire-pulling of the silver men which have brought the country to the verge of a crisis in currency and finance; it is the Choctaw claim. Was there ever more perverse obliquity of intellectual vision?"

Obstinately Alive.

San Francisco, Feb. 27.—W. C. Rippey, who tried to kill John W. Mackay, is disappointing the doctors, who predicted at first that he could not live twelve hours, but finally made it forty-eight. He has passed this point and seems to be gaining rather than losing strength. To-day he talked a little and in regard to the shooting said: "I had been laying for Mackey for about a month, because I regarded him as the cause of all my losses. I am not sorry that I shot at him, but I made a bad business of it, for at that close range I ought to have killed him at the first fire." Mackay is getting along nicely, but his doctors still enforce the rule that he shall receive no callers and discuss no business.

A Physician's Sad End.

Marshfield, Wis., Feb. 27.—Dr. Lyman J. Hills of this county committed suicide last night by taking laudanum. He was thirty-seven years of age and of late years has drank to excess. Last spring he took a course in the Keeley cure at Dwight. On his return home he abstained from drink for some time, but resumed his old habits. Last fall he was induced to take the Ackermann anti-gold dipsomania cure at Fond du ac. On his return the whisky habit was supplemented by the use of chloral. He was highly respected and a good physician.

State Funds for Parochial Schools.

New York, Feb. 27.—A movement is on foot to secure from the state school fund of New Jersey money to support the Catholic parochial schools of that state. Several Catholic clergymen, who hold liberal views on the public school question, have prepared a bill which is to be introduced before the New Jersey legislature closes its session. The bill provides that the state shall annually appropriate a certain amount from the state school fund for the support and maintenance of the parochial schools.

Two of Garza's Men.

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 27.—Advices have been received at military department headquarters here of the capture by Lieut. West, Third cavalry, of Louis Ramon and Ebeneruda at Roma. The prisoners were two of the principal followers of Catarino Garza, and are desperate men. Refugio Cadena, another bold leader of the bandits, has come in and surrendered to Capt. Slocum at the La Pena ranch, in Starr county.

Shot Himself.

Northfield, Minn., Special, Feb. 27.—Eugene Blood committed suicide to-day by shooting himself through the heart. A young lady to whom he was engaged is sick and not expected to live. Young Blood went to see her this afternoon, and on returning went at once to his room and shot himself. He was twenty years of age and a son of Horace Blood, a retired farmer of this city.

Work of Brigands.

Rome, Feb. 27. — Brigands entered the postoffice in Misterbianco, Sicily, last night, stabbed to death the postmaster, Perinis, and his family, and carried off all the money and much of the mail.

Sister Ernesta Appointed.

Milwaukee, Special—Official announcement is made here that Sister Ernesta of Milwaukee will succeed the late Mother Caroline as commissary general of the Order of Notre Dame. Her installation will take place on a date to be appointed by Archbishop Katzer. As the head of the Sisters of Notre Dame in the United States, Mother Ernesta will direct the work of 2,000 Sisters, who are in charge of 70,000 children.

Edwin Von Der Ahe Fatally Injured.

St. Louis, Special—While waiting for a car at the corner of Easton and Baird avenues last night Edwin Von Der Ahe, son of Chris Von Der Ahe, the well known base ball man of this city, and himself a stockholder and treasurer of the St. Louis club, was run over by a grip car and probably fatally hurt.

A LIFETIME IN PRISON.

Sentenced One Hundred Times.

Detroit, Mich., Special, Feb. 27.—Della Miller, an habitual drunkard, is now serving out her hundredth sentence at the house of correction on the charge of drunkenness. She is a quiet, submissive and kindly woman of fifty or more years of age, a seamstress by trade, thoroughly reliable, honest and industrious—when she is not in drink. She is the daughter of an old French family in the city, thoroughly respectable and respected. Several of her brothers, half-brothers and sisters in the city hold responsible positions in the community. She has never been accused of anything worse than drunkenness. And yet during the past thirty years this woman, as the records and her own story show, has lived three-fourths of her life in prisons. She began drinking whisky when she was a little girl. She used to steal it from her father's jug when she was not more than seven years old. She says she did not like the taste of the liquor and used to steal it first just for fun, but afterwards she got to like the warming effect. She is a neat and tidy old lady, a trifle gray, with a gentle and kindly face, slender, withered little body, very small hands, pink finger nails, delicate and slender wrists, very much wasted, gray eyes, a cheerful smile, not without a sense of humor of her situation, and old-fashioned spectacles, which she pushes back on her forehead when she talks. The records show a most remarkable lack of ability to keep out of the clutches of the law.

Universal Suffrage.

Brussels, Feb. 27.—The referendum instituted by the Liberal societies to learn the sentiment of the people on the suffrage question was taken to-day throughout the kingdom. The greatest enthusiasm prevailed, especially in the quarters occupied by the workingmen, although there was no disorder. In Brussels some 25,000 votes were cast. A large majority favored M. Jansen's proposal of universal manhood suffrage. The socialists voted for it to a man. The Catholics and the more moderate Liberals abstained from voting. In the smaller cities and in the towns the majority for the Jansen proposal is still greater than here. Although the opponents of universal suffrage are trying already to break the force of the verdict by making charges of bribery, there is no doubt that the opinion expressed by the people to-day will have strong influence upon the suffrage in the chamber on Tuesday.

In this city and the suburbs 111,700 men were requested to vote. Of this number 48,060 voted for universal manhood suffrage, 7,064 for suffrage for men of more than twenty-five years, and 5,985 for less radical plans. The rest abstained from voting.

Very Useful to Mexico.

New Orleans, Feb. 27.—The Times-Democrat City of Mexico special says: The public announcement received here last night in a press dispatch from San Antonio says that Hon. Matais Romero, who is on his way to Washington, is to remain the minister of Mexico, cause much surprise, as it was supposed his visit was merely for the purpose of attending Mr. Cleveland's inauguration. Mr. Romero during his brief term as secretary of the treasury of Mexico inaugurated many financial reforms since his entrance into the department, less than a year ago. He made some very much needed modifications in the Mexican tariff, revised several important and just tax laws, amended others and practically reorganized the treasury department. He has by means of the new laws added several millions to the government's annual revenue, and by the economies introduced saved the nation an annual expense of several million dollars, and he has performed the hitherto impossible undertaking of negotiation of a small loan at par, thus placing the nation's credit on the highest level ever attained.

No Complication Expected.

Washington, Feb. 27.—There is no danger of an international complication between this country and France arising out of the complaint of the Abbe de la Croix de Castries, referred to in a dispatch from Seattle, Wash. The matter has been laid before the state department by M. Patenotre, the French minister in Washington. It was presented verbally and he was told that an investigation into the action of the customs officers complained of would be made. This investigation is now in progress. The French minister says that while it was doubtless true that the abbe had been badly treated, he thought the Seattle telegram exaggerated matters. No demand will be made on the United States government until the result of the investigation is made known. It may be that none will be necessary. M. Patenotre has been informed by the French consul at San Francisco, where Abbe de la Croix de Castries formerly resided, that the abbe there bore an excellent reputation, being a man of large benevolence.

Will Leave the Federation.

St. Louis, Feb. 27.—The Brewery Workers' National union is about to leave the American Federation of Labor. It is composed of seventy-five local unions, and has about 11,000 members. The headquarters are in this city, and the national secretary is Ernest Karzenknobe. The proposed secession from the federation originated about six months ago in Cleveland, and has been conducted with secrecy. It is in line, so the Knights of Labor people say, with the general growth of sentiment in favor of the Knights. A vote has been taken in the local unions composing the Brewers' association throughout the United States on the matter, and the majority voted in favor of seceding from the federation and affiliating with the Knights of Labor. The question is expected to come up for a final decision at the next convention of the Brewers' National union.

A Youthful Murderess.

Collingwood, Ont., Feb. 27. — Jennie Wouch, a sixteen-year-old girl, murdered her mother and cousin, a boy five years old, Thursday night, in a shanty in which they lived near Craigleith. The girl used an ax, and the bodies of her victims were horribly mutilated. Jennie's brother brought the news of the murder to this place to-day, and says his sister wanted her mother out of the way so she could marry her lover. The girl has not yet been arrested.

Dangerous to Slander This Woman.

Gainsville, Tex., Feb. 27.—At Bermuda School house, fifteen miles south of here, yesterday, Mrs. John Stewart, a farmer's wife, gave Jeff Masten 100 lashes with a horse whip. She drove up to the school house with her husband, and calling Masten out, gave him a terrible whipping while her husband covered him with a revolver. Masten was terribly bruised and blood is said to have flowed from sixty places. The cause of the castigation was some talk reflecting on the character of Mrs. Stewart. Both have been arrested.

Seven Men Drowned.

Laurel, Del., Feb. 27.—Intelligence of a very harrowing nature has been received from Tangier sound, the disputed oystering beds of the Chesapeake. Four boats were wrecked—the Maggie Smith, Thomas Massick, Benjamin Harrison and George Thomas. Seven oystermen—Harry Smith, Benjamin Walker, Martin Van Dyke, Howard Clendanel and Charles Hammersley—and two unknown dredgers were drowned.

Formed a Federation.

Wichita, Kan., Feb. 27.—The employes of the Santa Fe railroad formed a federation here to-day. About sixty delegates were present at the conference and they represented all labor organizations whose members are employed on the road. The men have no grievance, nor is any strike contemplated.

Daughters of the Revolution.

Washington.—At the closing meeting of the Daughters of the Revolution Mrs. Stevenson, the wife of the vice president-elect, was elected president general, and Mrs. H. V. Boynton, the present incumbent, was re-elected vice president, in charge of organization.

Bernard Green of Boston, from the Sons of the Revolution, was present at one session and showed the ladies' building plans which that organization proposes to build in that city. They also contemplated erecting a building here, and it may be that the two will unite, thus insuring the construction of a more elaborate edifice.

HIS WIFE WAS TOO GOOD.

A London Man Had Planned a Speculation, But His Wife Spoiled It.

"Your world's fair souvenir half-dollar reminds me of a singular incident," said Ralph C. Watson of London in the hearing of a Globe-Democrat reporter. "During the queen's jubilee all England was flooded with jubilee coins. The largest denomination was a £5 gold piece, and from that down to a farthing. After the jubilee all those coins that found their way back to the Bank of England were taken out of circulation, and before it was generally known that this was being done 90 per cent of the coins, I fancy, had found their way into the maw of the old lady of Threadneedle street.

"I was among the few who had sense enough to keep a set. I had a £5 piece, a soverign, a half-sovereign, a crown, a four-shilling piece, a half-crown, a two-shilling bit, one shilling, a sixpence, a four-pence, a three-pence, a penny, a half-penny, and a farthing. They lay idle in a box in my dressing case for nearly four years. I thought nothing of them until one day last summer, having business in Glasgow, went there. Here the jubilee coins were a great rarity; and I found that my collection, which amounted to £7 5 shillings and 6 pence, ha'penny, farthing would bring something like £12.

"Now! thinks I, I'll just make that £5 like a wink, so I telegraphed my wife to forward the box of coins to me by express at once. The next day I got a letter from her inclosing a postal note for £7 6 shillings, and a note from the dear woman saying that as long as I was in need of the money, she thought the letter post quicker than the package post, and had had my coins exchanged for a postal order, and added the change herself to make it even money. Mad? I was. I not only lost my £5 speculation, but I lost my jubilee coins as well, but, I say, it was rather thoughtful of her, you know, and under any other circumstances would have been very gratifying.

Evolution.

Who doubts that knowledge—some kinds of knowledge, at least—is largely a matter of intuition?

Little Sarah, three years old, came running into the house the other day in a state of great excitement.

"O mamma," she said, "Mrs. Taylor has killed an old hen to make a chicken of!"

And yet Sarah has never lived in a boardinghouse.

There are Knowing Rats in Maine.

A farmer in Madrid found a muskrat down in a barrel of sweet apples in his cellar, unable to crawl out, and with a tender and compassionate heart took his ratship by the tail, pulled him from the barrel and let him go. The following day the episode was repeated, and for a few days was continued, till the muskrat had become so well educated that when he heard his benefactor coming he would stick up his tail to be lifted out.—Phillips (Me.) Willie's Dream.

His Mother—No Willie.

"Then if you dream you're havin' a fight you ain't to blame for it, are you?"

"No, but if you have been a good boy you are not likely to have such dreams."

"Still they ain't wicked, are they, if you can't help it?"

N-no, I suppose not. Did you dream last night you were doing so wicked a thing as fighting.

"Yep! And it would 'a' done you good to see how I licked that yaller-haired, freckle-faced, good-for-nothin' Bob Stapleford till he couldn't stand up, dog-on him!"—Chicago Tribune.

CLEVELAND

For the Second Time Grover Cleveland Is Inaugurated President.

The Ceremonies Conducted in the Presence of a Vast Audience.

Wind and Snow Make the Day Disagreeable But Does Dampen the Ardor.

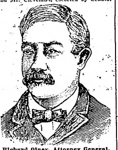
Cleveland's Inaugural Address Delivered in a Blinding Snow Storm.

Washington, March 4.—Grover Cleveland, thrice nominated for president of the United States and twice elected, was to-day successfully inducted into that high office for his second term, with all appropriate ceremonies, and the gathering of a mighty multitude and with the accompaniment of a blinding snow storm, but notwithstanding every dis advantage of weather, the last occasion was greater than the first. Had the atmospheric conditions been anything like favorable, instead of being as bad as could possibly be, there would have probably been 60,000 men and a number of ladies marching or riding in the parade, as against 25,000 in 1885. They were all here waiting to fall in line, but at the last moment some of the organizations were compelled to desist from participating. Nevertheless the occasion was made memorable by the vast attendance. To-day, also, the governors of eleven great states, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts in the North and East; of Pennsylvania and Maryland, among the Middle states; of Georgia, North and South Carolina and Louisiana in the South; and of Wisconsin in the far West, participated in the national ceremonies and thereby emphasized the complete restoration of national unity. More interesting and significant even than this, perhaps in the eyes of other nations and the historian, were the manifestations of the marvelous growth of the country in population and power, and in fact that this momentous and majestic change in the government of 65,000,000 of people was accomplished according to a cut and dried formula, every step of which was planned and publicly announced beforehand, and without noticeable disturbance of public interests or the creation of any excitement except that naturally accompanying a great national pageant and the influx of two or three hundred thousand sightseers into the capital.

It was shortly after 11 o'clock when President-elect Cleveland and Vice President-elect Stevenson, accompanied by the senate committee on arrangements, entered the executive mansion. They were received by President Harrison in the blue room. Five minutes later the president and his successor reappeared, and, entering an open carriage, the march of the procession to the capitol began.

Meanwhile in the senate at a quarter before 12 (senate clock) the speaker and house of representatives were announced. The speaker was escorted to a chair at the secretary's desk, and the representatives who followed him were crowded in wherever space could be found for them. But as to finding seats for them, that was entirely out of the question. At this time the general spectacle was magnificent. The galleries were filled with elegantly dressed ladies, with a few gentlemen scattered among them. The senators from forty-four states were all in their places. When the senate clock indicated 11:50, but when the actual time was 12:50, the vice president-elect was announced, and Mr. Stevenson, escorted by Senator McPherson, took his chair to the right of Vice President Morton. Immediately afterwards the president of the United States and his cabinet were announced, and President Harrison and the members of his cabinet entered the chamber. Mr. Harrison was escorted to one of the chairs standing in front of the clerk's desk. Immediately afterwards the president-elect was announced, and Mr. Cleveland, escorted by Senator Ransom, took the chair next to Mr. Harrison. His entrance into the chamber was greeted with applause.



Richard Olney, Attorney General.

A New Vice President.

Then Vice President Morton administered the oath of office to his successor, and yielded to him the chair of the presiding officer. The special session of the Fifty-third congress was then formally opened with prayer by Chaplain Butler. Vice President Stevenson arose and addressed the senate. He said:

"Senators: Deeply impressed with a sense of its responsibilities and of its dignity, I now enter upon the discharge of the duties of the high office to which I have been called. I am not unmindful of the fact that among the occupants of this chair during the 104 years of our constitutional history have been statesmen, eminent alike for their talent and their tireless devotion to public duty. Adams, Jefferson and Calhoun honored its incumbency during the early days of the republic, while Arthur, Hendricks and Morton have at a later period of our history shed luster upon the office of president of the most august deliberative assembly known to man. I assume the duties of the great trust confided to me with no feeling of self-confidence, but rather with that of grave distrust of my ability satisfactorily to meet its requirements. I may be pardoned for saying that it shall be my earnest endeavor to discharge the important duties which lie before me with no less of impartiality and courtesy than of firmness and fidelity. Earnestly invoking the co-operation, the forbearance, the charity of each of its members, I now enter upon my duties as presiding officer of the senate."

The Party Appears.

At about 1:35 o'clock the doors leading into the rotunda to the central portico of the inaugural stand swung open, and Marshal Dan Ramsdell of the District of Columbia and Marshal Wright, of the United States supreme court, appeared, heading the procession. Ex-Vice President Morton and Chief Justice Fuller and the justices of the supreme court, except Judges Blatchford, Field and Harlan, came next. Then came the sergeant-at-arms, Valentine, and Senators Teller, McPherson and Ransom, of the committee of arrangements, preceding President Harrison and President-elect Cleveland, who walked side by side. Behind the incoming and outgoing president followed members of the senate and an unusually large contingent from the diplomatic corps, members of the house of representatives, governors of states and other official persons.

The president and president-elect, Vice President Morton, Chief Justice Fuller and the committee of arrangements were shown to the front of the platform, where, within a railed enclosure, had been laid a bright green carpet, upon which had been placed large leather-covered chairs, several tables, a writing desk and other furnishings, which gave a bright touch to the scene. Mr. Cleveland was warmly greeted by the patient throng gathered about the stand, and after a few minutes of delay stepped to the front and began the delivery of his inaugural address. He followed the same course pursued by himself eight years ago of delivering his address first and taking the oath afterwards. This was the course pursued by Buchanan and Lincoln. On the other hand, Pierce, Grant, Hayes, Garfield and Harrison took the oath first and delivered their inaugural afterwards. A curious compromise between these opposing customs was made by President Harrison's grandfather, who stopped in the middle of his inaugural and took the oath and then resumed and finished the reading of his address. Notwithstanding the exceedingly inclement weather Mr. Cleveland removed his silk hat, and with bared head

Addressed the Multitude.

My Fellow Citizens: In obedience to the mandate of my countrymen, I am about to dedicate myself to their service under the sanction of a solemn oath. Deeply moved by the expression of confidence and personal attachment which has called me to this service, I am sure my gratitude can make no better return than the pledge I now give before God and these witnesses of unreserved and complete devotion to the interests and welfare of those who have honored me.

I deem it fitting on this occasion, while indicating the opinions I hold concerning public questions of present importance to also briefly refer to the existence of certain conditions and tendencies among our people, which seem to menace the integrity and usefulness of their government. While every American citizen must contemplate with the utmost pride and enthusiasm the growth and expansion of our country, the sufficiency of our institutions to stand against the rudest shocks of violence, the wonderful thrift and enterprise of our people, and the demonstrated superiority of our free government, it behooves us to constantly watch for every symptom of insidious infirmity that threatens our national vigor. The strong man who in the confidence of sturdy health, courts the sternest activities of life and rejoices in the hardihood of constant labor, may still have lurking near his vitals the unheeded disease that dooms him to sudden collapse. It cannot be doubted that our stupendous achievements as a people and our country's robust strength, have given rise to a heedlessness of those laws governing our national health, which we can no more evade than human life can escape the laws of God and nature.

The Question of Finance.

Manifestly nothing is more vital to our supremacy as a nation and to the beneficent purposes of our government than a sound and stable currency. Its exposure to degradation should at once arouse to activity the most enlightened statesmanship, and the danger of depreciation in the purchasing power of the wages paid to toil should furnish the strongest incentive to prompt and conservative precaution. In dealing with our present embarrassing situation, as related to this subject, we will be wise if we temper our confidence and faith in our national strength and resources with the frank confession that even these will not permit us to defy with impunity the inexorable laws of finance and trade. At the same time, in our efforts to adjust differences of opinion we should be free from intolerance or passion, as our judgments should be unmoved by alluring phrases and unvexed by selfish interests. I am confident that such an approach to the subject will result in prudent and effective remedial legislation. In the meantime, so far as the executive branch of the government can intervene, none of the powers with which it is vested will be withheld when their exercise is deemed necessary to maintain our national credit or avert financial disaster.

Closely related to the exaggerated confidence in our country's greatness, which tends to a disregard of the rules of national safety, another danger confronts us not less serious. I refer to the prevalence of a popular disposition to expect from the operation of the government especial and direct individual advantages. The verdict of our voters, which condemned the injury of maintaining protection for protection's sake, enjoins upon the people's servants the duty of exposing and destroying the brood of kindred evils which are the unwholesome progeny of paternalism. This is the bane of republican institutions and the constant peril of our government by the people. It degrades to the purposes of wily craft the plan of rule our fathers established and bequeathed to us as an object of our love and veneration. It perverts the patriotic sentiment of our countrymen and tempts them to a pitiful calculation of the sordid gain to be derived from their government's maintenance. It undermines the self-reliance of our people and substitutes in its place dependence upon governmental favoritism. It stifles the spirit of true Americanism and stupefies every ennobling trait of American citizenship. The lessons of paternalism ought to be learned and the better lesson taught that, while the people should patriotically and cheerfully support their government, its functions do not include the support of the people.

Pensions.

The acceptance of this principle leads to a refusal of bounties and subsidies which burden the labor and thrift of a portion of our citizens, to aid ill-advised or languishing enterprises in which they have no concern. It leads also to a challenge of wild and reckless pension expenditure, which overleaps the bounds of grateful recognition of patriotic service and prostitutes to vicious uses the people's prompt and generous impulse to aid those disabled in their country's defense. Every thoughtful American must realize the importance of checking at its beginning any tendency in public or private station to regard frugality and economy as virtues which we may safely outgrow. The toleration of this idea results in the waste of the people's money by their chosen servants, and encourages prodigality and extravagance in the home life of our countrymen. Under our scheme of government waste of public money is a crime against the citizens, and the contempt of our people for economy and frugality in their personal affairs deplorably saps the strength and sturdyness of our national character. It is a plain dictate of honesty and good government that public expenditures should be limited by public necessity, and that this should be measured by the rules of strict economy, and it is equally clear that frugality among the people is the best guaranty of a contented and strong support of free institutions.

One mode of the misappropriation of public funds is avoided when appointments to office, instead of being the rewards of partisan activity, are awarded to those whose efficiency promises a fair return of work for the compensation paid to them. To secure the fitness and competency of appointees to office, and to remove from political action the demoralizing madness for spoils, civil service reform has found a place in our public policy and laws. The benefits already gained through this instrumentality and the further usefulness it promises entitle it to the hearty support and encouragement of all who desire to see our public service well performed or who hope for the elevation of political sentiment and the purification of political methods.

Trusts.

The existence of immense aggregations of kindred enterprises and combinations of business interests formed for the purpose of limiting production and fixing prices is inconsistent with the fair field which ought to be open to every independent activity. Legitimate strife in business should not be superseded by an enforced concession to the demands of combinations that have the power to destroy, nor should the people to be served lose the benefit of cheapness which usually results from wholesome competition. These aggregations and combinations frequently constitute conspiracies against the interests of the people and in all their phases they are unnatural and opposed to our American sense of fairness. To the extent that they can be reached and restrained by federal power, the general government should relieve our citizens from their interference and exactions.

Loyalty to the principles upon which our government rests positively demands that the equality before the law which it guarantees to every citizen, should be justly and in good faith conceded in all parts of the land. The enjoyment of this right follows the badge of citizenship wherever found, and, unimpaired by race or color, it appeals for recognition to American manliness and fairness. Our relations with the Indians located within our borders impose upon us responsibilities we cannot escape. Humanity and consistency require us to treat them with forbearance and in our dealings with them to honestly and considerately regard their rights and interests. Every effort should be made to lead them, through the paths of civilization and education, to self-supporting and independent citizenship. In the meantime, as the nation's wards, they should be promptly defended against the cupidity of designing men, and shielded from every temptation or influence that retards their advancement.

Tariff Reform.

The people of the United States have decreed that on this day the control of their government in its legislative and executive branches shall be given to a political party pledged in positive terms to the accomplishment of tariff reform. They have thus determined in favor of a more just and equitable system of federal taxation. The agents they have chosen to carry out their purposes are bound by their promises, not less than by the command of their masters, to devote themselves unremittingly to this service. While there should be no surrender of principle, our task must be undertaken wisely and without vindictiveness. Our mission is not punishment, but the rectification of wrongs. If, in lifting burdens from the daily life of our people, we reduce inordinate and unequal advantages long enjoyed, this is but a necessary incident of our return to right and justice. If we exact from unwilling minds acquiescence in the theory of an honest distribution of the fund of governmental beneficence treasured up for all, but insist upon a principle which underlies our free institutions. When we tear aside the delusions and misconceptions which have blinded our countrymen to the condition under vicious tariff laws we but show them how far they have been led away from the paths of contentment and prosperity. When we proclaim that the necessity for revenue to support the government furnishes the only justification for taxing the people we announce a truth so plain that its denial would seem to indicate the extent to which judgment may be influenced by familiarity with perversions of the taxing power, and when we seek to reinstate the self-confident and business enterprise of our citizens by discrediting an abject dependence upon governmental favor, we strive to stimulate these elements of American character which support the hope of American achievement.

Party Pledges.

Anxiety for the redemption of the pledges which my party has made and solicitude for the complete justification of the trust the people have reposed in us, constrain me to remind those with whom I am to co-operate that we can succeed in doing the work which has been especially set before us only by the most sincere, harmonious and disinterested effort. Even if insuperable obstacles and opposition prevent the consummation of our task, we shall hardly be excused; and if failure can be traced to our fault or neglect, we may be sure the people will hold us to a swift and exacting accountability.

The oath I now take to preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States, not only impressively defines the great responsibility I assume, but suggests obedience to the constitutional commands as the rule by which my official conduct must be guided. I shall to the best of my ability, and within my sphere of duty, preserve the constitution by loyally protecting every grant of federal power it contains, by defending all its restraints when attacked by impatience and restlessness, and by enforcing its limitations and reservations in favor of the state and the people. Fully impressed with the gravity of the duties that confront me and mindful of my weakness, I should be appalled if it were my lot to bear unaided the responsibilities which await me. I am, however, saved from discouragement when I remember that I shall have the support and the counsel and co-operation of wise and patriotic men who will stand at my side in cabinet places or will represent the people in their legislative halls. I find also much comfort in remembering that my countrymen are just and generous and in the assurance that they will not condemn those who by sincere devotion to their service deserve their forbearance and approval. Above all, I know there is a Supreme Being who rules the affairs of men, and whose goodness and mercy have always followed the American people; and I know He will not turn from us now, if we humbly and reverently seek his powerful aid.

The Inaugural Ball.

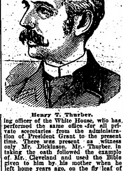
The Usual Thing.

Washington, March 4.—In the house today the usual resolution of thanks to the speaker was offered by Mr. Reed with a complimentary speech and adopted. Speaker Crisp replied in a felicitous manner, and when the hands of the clock pointed to the hour of noon, although a chronometer might have challenged the correctness of the time, declared the house adjourned sine die.

'LIGE'S SUCCESSOR.

Private Secretary Thurber Takes the Oath of Office.

During the afternoon Private Secretary Thurber took the oath of office in the room lately occupied by President Harrison and formerly occupied by Private Secretary Lamont. The oath was administered by Col. Crook, the disbursing officer of the White House, who has performed the same office for all private secretaries from the administration of President Grant to the present time. There was present as witness only Mr. Dickinson. Mr. Thurber, in taking the oath followed the example of Mr. Cleveland and used the Bible given to him by his mother when he left home years ago, on the fly leaf of which she had written after his name the Master's injunction: "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life."



Henry T. Thurber.

INAUGURATION DAY.

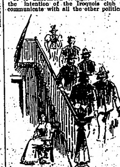
A Movement to Have It Occur Later in the Spring.

The inclemency of the weather to-day is likely to add to the popularity of the propositions of Congressman Springer and others to change the date of the presidential inauguration to a later period in the spring. The Iroquois club of Chicago, which was only one of the many crack political organizations which shivered for hours in the icy winds today, held a meeting this afternoon and unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

"Whereas, the inclement weather of this present March 4, 1893, has demonstrated that so early a period of the year is unsuitable for the manifestation of the respect felt by the American people for their chief magistrate upon the occasion of his induction to the great office of president of the United States; therefore,

Resolved, by the Iroquois club of the city of Chicago, that the congress of the United States be respectfully memorialized to take such steps as will provide that the inauguration of all presidents elected by the people after this date shall take place at such date during the month of May as in their wisdom may be deemed best."

It is announced to-night that it is the intention of the Iroquois club to communicate with all the other political organizations of the country, of both parties, and endeavor to secure unity of action in the demand for this reform.



After a Handshake With the President.

Argumentum Ad Hominem.

Friend—Your client is certainly guilty of bigamy. How do you expect to clear him?

Lawyer—Very easily. There will be none but married men summoned on the jury.

"How will that help you?"

"In this way: I shall appeal to their sympathies. I shall say to them, 'Gentlemen, you are all married and know what it is to live with one woman. Don't you think my client has already suffered enough by having to live with two?' then the jury will shout 'not guilty.'"

He—I can see your ankle in the pier-glass.

She—So can I; but I don't think it quite proper of you to mention it. You ought to reflect a little more before you speak.

He—That's logical. They say the ankle of coincidence is equal to the ankle of reflection—or something like that.—Truth.

Fosston, Minn, March 6.—An exciting scene occurred on Saturday night Two Indians named Dick Big-Bird and Soloman blue who gave evidence against a citizen of this place before the U. S. commissioner at Crookston returned Saturday. After they had gone to bed the hotel was surrounded by a mob of about 200 men and the two Indians were taken out and given a dose of tar and feathers, The Indians are said to have been in the employ of the U. S. marshalls, their work being to induce saloon men to sell liquor to the Indians and then act as witnesses against them The feeling against these men and the U. S, marshalls has become very bitter and terminated as above stated, The two Indians were stopping at the Commercial hotel and the mob battered down the doors, which Samuel Sutor the proprietor had barred when he learned what was going on and at once rushed up stairs after the Indians who had gone to bed. Blue who heard the mob coming endeavored to escape by jumping from an upper window but he was discovered by the crowd below and quickly captured. After the two men had been tarred and feathered the crowd of men formed in two ranks and they were compelled to run the gauntlet and while doing so were kicked and beaten unmercifully. Some of the crowd wanted to hang them and ropes were placed about their necks and they were dragged to the nearest telegraph pole and they would undoubtedly have been strung up had not some of the wiser heads interfered and prevented it. As it was the Indians were both badly injured, and Blue, it is feared will be unable to survive. He is an old man of 60 years and during the stirring times of '61 and '62 he was a United States scout and did some good work for the government. The mob was composed principally of lumbermen who had just come down from the woods. The police endeavored to rescue the Indians, but were powerless to cope with the mob of infuriated men.

Word comes from Marshall county that the bones of a man was found near Mud Lake recently, the body having been eaten by wolves. Seven dead wolves were found showing that the man had fought bravely for his life. It is thought that the remains are those of Ole Dahlberg who was hunting in that vicinity and is now missing.

As soon as it was known here that an effort was being made to resubmit the vote on prohibition in North Dakota our citizens irrespective of party displayed their well known temperance proclivities and raised several thousand dollars to aid the friends of temperance in North Dakota to defeat resubmition The money was intrusted to Dan Sullivan, one of our most prominent business men, Mr. Sullivan left for Bismark Sunday evening and how well he fulfilled his mission is amply set forth in the following dispatch received here late Wednesday night:

"Resubmission defeated." Jud LaMoure on the band wagon." The amount of money raised here is variously estimated at $2,500 to $5,000, Mr. Sullivan has a keen insight into human nature. As soon as he reached Bismark he sized up his men, arranged the money details, pressed the button, and East Grand Forks did the rest. Prohibition in North Dakota is the mainstay of East Grand Forks. In former years while the liquor traffic was licensed in Grand Forks, people from this city did not feel perfectly safe in crossing the Ruby. Now, under prohibition, there is no occasion for alarm. The saloon is a thing of the past in the Forks and the traffic in liquor is now entirely confined to the drug stores, and the business in the hands of the druggists is so restricted that all outward appearances of its existence have disappeared.—East Grand Forks Courier.

If the rage for legislation to cure all the ills that exist, legislators would bear in mind that all that any class of men want and all they ought to have is fair-play, much costly experimenting and tinkering would be saved. The question now generally asked about proposed legislation is, "How much harm will it do?" There is scarcely a bill offered which does not bode mischief to some interest, and this is true of many bills that are offered in good faith by well meaning legislators, to say nothing of those offered purely for blackmailing purposes, for the purpose of inducing interested parties to buy off the backers of the mischievous bill, and legislation which is intended to make business for lawyers. The danger to litigitimate business from over legislation is becoming every year greater, and all classes give a sigh of relief when legislatures adjourn and go home, thankful that the harm done has been so slight.—Northwestern Agriculturist.

The bill of fare for March weather is prognosticated in the following fashion by Rev. Irl R Hicks in Word and Works:

One of the most dangerous storm periods for the month begins about the 10th. We name the 10th, 11th, 12 and 13th as composing a period of general and violent disturbances. This period is at the eletric crisis of the earth's vernal equinox, It is a regular storm period intensified by the equinoxes of Mars, earth and the moon's last quarter on the 10th, Threatning storms and destructive gales, especially on all the southern seas and coasts, may almost certainly be expected. A very warm wave, attended by heavy clouds and thunder will appear with heavy rain in southern and central sections, turning to violent blizzards and snow blockades in northerly regions. Wherever the disturbances are ushered in with warm sultry weather, south winds and electric displays, it will be prudent to watch cyclonic movements, which, should they appear, will break into tornadoes along the south the south side of the low barometer. Ample time and unmistakable indications will be given to all in case of dangerous developments Be prepared for the general perturbations to end in cold the cold setting in quite early in the period in the northwest. As we approach the 17th warmer weather will be advancing from the west, and reactionary storms of marked intensity will be gathering. The new moon falls on that day and whatever the theories and criticisms to the contrary will greatly aggravate the tendency to active storms and earthquakes. Under the existing circumstances we lay down the 16th, 17th and 18th as reactionary days of more than ordinary promise for disturbances. Watch for them and for the cold wave which will follow.

FRANK MEAD KNEW THIS REGION IN ITS EARLY DAYS.

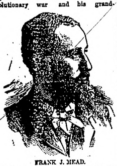
Stories About an Old Newspaper Man, Who Decided, in His Boyhood Days, That He Could Learn More in a Printing Office Than in the Village School.

Frank J. Mead, whose letters from Washington have been published during the past winter in a large number of Northwestern newspapers, by special arrangement with the American Press Association of St. Paul, is one of the pioneer newspaper men of the Northwest, having commenced writing for a Minnesota newspaper in 1858. He was born in Indianapolis in 1839 and his 54 years of life have been crowded with countless events of almost wonderful variety.

When I recently asked Mr. Mead to tell me something about his ancestors and his early experiences in the Northwest, about all I could get him to say was:

"My ancient though ignoble blood
Has flowed through idiots ever since the flood,"
—"I rather suspect."

But that is not true, because Mr. Mead comes from old Puritan ancestry, all of whom were prominently identified with the early history of New York and many eastern states. His great-grandfather was a colonel in the revolutionary war and his grandfather was a noted figure in the war of 1812, while Mr. Mead is proud to class himself with the Minnesota soldiers "who shot to kill and were always out for business" during the War of the Rebellion.



FRANK J. MEAD.

When 13 years of age, young Mead thought a printing office afforded better facilities for learning than the public schools in Greensburg, Indiana, where he then lived, and before his 18th year had passed he had absorbed about all there was to learn of the printing business in that little village office. Then he started on a tour, as old-time printers say, that carried him into every part of the American continent.

In June, 1858, Mr. Mead arrived in Minnesota, about co-incident with the admission of the State into the Union. The next month he commenced work on The Northfield Journal, and his duties were so varied that he was considered the general utility man of the establishment. One year later he was a journeyman printer employed on The Daily Pioneer, of St. Paul, owned and edited by Earl S. Goodrich. Afterwards he worked for a period for R. M. Wright, on The Shakopee Argus, and finally became a permanent fixture on The Weekly Democrat, published at Hastings by Dr. (afterward General) C. P. Adams.

Here the outbreak of the war found him a law student in the office of Nash & Huddlestone. In 1861 he enlisted as a private among the first recruits after the firing on Fort Sumpter, and served as an enlisted man in Company H, First Minnesota Infantry, which organization served with the Army of the Potomac.

After nearly two years' service in the First he was discharged for disability received in the line of duty and returned to Hastings where he established The Northwestern Democrat, a weekly newspaper. This publication survived but one year. The war was still in progress, and in the summer of 1864 Mr. Mead recruited Company "F," Independent Battlion Minnesota Volunteer Cavalry and was elected Second Lieutenant thereof. With this organization he served until April, 1866, and was mustered out because of the close of the war.

I was at Harper's Ferry with Mr. Mead, some years after the war, and he was out one afternoon looking at the country that he had tramped over years before, when Phil Sheridan was so active in the Shenandoah Valley. Mr. Mead was explaining to a party of ladies and gentlemen how the Northern men and Southern men fought so many times and fiercely, up and down the valleys and heights around Harper's Ferry. As his story went on, he became so thoroughly aroused with that peculiar excitement known so well to old soldiers, that forgetting himself and surroundings, he gave one of the men a vigorous slap on the shoulder and shouted:

"And we licked them every time—when they didn't lick us."

For 35 years his name has been familiar to readers of newspapers throughout the Northwest. At present Mr. Mead is a regular employe in the United States Senate.

J. S. PINNEY.

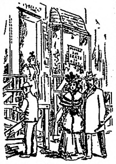
Mr. Cleveland will pay $475 a day for the parlors which he occupies at the Arlington hotel. At least that is said to be the price which he is to pay, but some people doubt if he is to pay anything more than the usual price of $6 or $7 a day for each person in his party.

Eight years ago Mr. Cleveland stopped at the same hotel when he came to Washington to be inaugurated, and thus gave the inn such a reputation that its proprietor has since made a fortune. It fixed that hotel as the leading caravansery of the capital and brought such a large volume of gilt edged trade that since Mr. Cleveland was here before the capacity of the house has been doubled. It would scarcely be right, after Mr. Cleveland had made the fortune of the owner, to be required to pay $475 a day for his accommodation, nor is it likely that he is to pay any such sum.

The proprietor of another good hotel made a desperate effort to capture the presidential party. He went to the expense of fitting up special parlors for the use of the president and his wife and invited Mr. Cleveland to be his guest without charge or at a mere nominal price. He brought a great deal of political influence to bear for the attainment of his purpose, but all unavailingly. Mr. Cleveland decided to make his headquarters at the same place where he stopped before, and the enterprising but unlucky owner of the other house will have to find some other way to popularize his hostelry.

Rivalry for the presidential patronage is already active in this city. Not only the hotels, but the physicians, the florists, the grocers, the butchers, the plumbers and even the churches, are eager to number the boss of the White House among their customers. To be the White House physician, the White House druggist, the White House butcher or the White House spiritual adviser is considered almost as desirable as to be "hatter to the Prince of Wales" or "bootmaker to her majesty the queen" on the other side of the water.

Curious crowds surround all the places in the city where arrangements are being made for the great event of next Saturday. For instance, at the pension office, where a big gang of workmen are completing the magnificent decorations, policemen are always on hand to keep the crowds moving. The scenes to be witnessed in that gigantic hall are indeed interesting. Workmen climb to dizzy heights, draping and festooning the timbers and steel rods, causing the spectators below to hold their breath in fear of accident. The entire ceiling of the big hall has been covered with a canopy of white and gold, forming in itself a most gorgeous spectacle. Ten thousand yards of material were required, and to hoist it into position 35,000 feet of rope were employed. Silk banners, innumerable flags, the coats of arms of all the states in silver and gold, decorate the galleries and doorways. Nothing prettier than the electric arches at either end of the hall was ever seen. Each is 65 feet high, decorated with plants against a background of pure white, and bearing the words "Cleveland and Stevenson" in letters formed of thousands of electric lights.



EVERY SHOP WINDOW FOR SALE.

At the capitol another crowd is always present watching the decoration of the huge platform which has been built in front of the rotunda. It is from this platform that the president is to deliver his inaugural address. Probably the grandest audience ever faced by an American is that which will assemble at this spot next Saturday. There will be on the platform behind Mr. Cleveland all the dignitaries of the government, congress, the supreme and other courts, the diplomatic representatives at this capital, the army and navy and thousands of distinguished men from all parts of the country—in front literally hundreds of thousands of the brawn and sinew of the land.

While these inauguration occasions are made great events, involving months of hard work and the expenditure of untold thousands of dollars, officially an American coronation is a very simple thing. The most important part of the ceremonies is that which takes place at the capitol at noon. The Fifty-second congress will be in session till almost noon. Very likely the hands of the clocks in the two houses will be moved backward in order to steal a few moments in which to finish up some important legislation. Then the president and his cabinet, the president elect and vice president elect, having been escorted to the capitol by a detachment of police and military, the president elect being also guarded by detectives in citizens' clothing, will assemble in the senate chamber. There both houses of congress and the other great people will be waiting more or less patiently.

After everybody has been seated and the necks of the spectators have been nearly twisted out of joint in the process of catching a glimpse of the big men of the nation, it will take the retiring vice president about two minutes to administer the oath of office to his successor and to declare the Fifty-second congress adjourned without day. The new vice president will announce the call of an extra session of the senate, and that body will meet at once, simply for the purpose of administering oaths to the new senators who may be present.

A recess is then taken, and a mighty procession moves out the doors of the chamber through the rotunda to the platform already spoken of. There the oath of office is administered to the new president by the chief justice of the supreme court, and the inaugural address delivered. Eight years ago Mr. Cleveland stood on this platform facing a spring sun. Four years ago Mr. Harrison stood in a pelting storm of rain. In the betting odds are always on having a stormy 4th of March, but Cleveland's luck may again save him a drenching. So far as the inauguration of the president is concerned, the taking of the oath and the customary address are all there is of the official ceremony, but it is no sooner over than the real show of the day—the great parade down the avenue—begins.

This year the parade is to be a monster. Among the interesting features is to be the presence of a large company of young women from Prince George county, Md., mounted. There are no better horsewomen in the world than these young girls of Maryland and Virginia, in the neighborhood of the capital.

The stomach is the reservoir. If it fails, everything fails. The liver, the kidneys, the lungs, the heart, the head, the blood, the nerves all go wrong. If you feel wrong, look to the stomach first. Put that right at once by using August Flower. It assures a good appetite and a good digestion.

COLDS.

Contrary to the prevalent opinion that colds and coughs are due entirely to the severity of the climate or to some unexpected change in the weather, they really arise in very many cases, from pure carelessness and want of thought. When you take cold, get a bottle of Reid's German Cough and Kidney cure and take it according to directions. It contains no poison. There is no danger from an overdose, but it will instantly relieve the worst case. If your druggist does not have it, send your address to the Sylvan Remedy company, Peoria, Ill., and get a trial bottle by mail free. Mention the name of this paper.

Life Is Worth Living.

Trying as its vicissitudes are, by those unvexed by chronic disease. Mainly because Hostetter's Stomach Bitters fortifies the system against disease by promoting a vigorous performance of the functions of the system, it possesses a wide, general utility. It promotes strength through improved digestion. This is the first, the most essential step. Subsequently the Bitters insure regularity of the bowels, liver and kidneys. Malaria, rheumatism and nervous trouble yield to it.

DOINGS OF THE LEGISLATURE DAY BY DAY.

Routine Report of the Proceedings of Both Branches of the Minnesota Legislature During the Past Week.

SATURDAY, Feb. 25.

SENATE.

Senator Davis' bill relating to the conditions of the standard fire insurance policy was defeated after debate.

Senator Dedon's bill reserving to the state the mineral rights in all state lands, was lost by a vote of 17 to 18, and Senator March's bill for a verdict of ten jurors in a civil case met the same fate, the vote being 24 to 21.

The following bills were agreed to without objection:

To authorize corporations to refund their bonded indebtedness; relating to testimony in justice court; relating to pledges and mortgages of personal property; relating to time of payment and rate of interest on deferred payments for state lands.

The following bills were introduced:

To amend the law relating to education; to provide for the creation and organization of new counties; to amend the law relating to the appointment of the state board of health.

HOUSE.

The house did most of its work in committee of the whole when it recommended for passage Mr. Sullivan's bill prohibiting the sale of liquor to minors, and also Mr. Ives' bill making indemnity insurance companies parties to actions for damages for personal injuries. Strong opposition was manifested to the passage of both measures, and as the attendance of members was very light, only a little over one third being present, another sharp contest may occur over the bills when they come up on the calendar.

The following bills were introduced:

To repeal the law relating to corporations; to reduce the penalty on delinquent taxes on real estate; for the appointment of a state mineral land agent; to regulate the sentencing of persons convicted of felony and their subsequent release on parole; to amend the law relating to cruelty to animals.

To committee on judiciary; providing for a state land commission to inspect the state capitol lands in Kandiyohi county. Referred to the committee on public lands; relating to trust deeds. Rules were suspended and bill was placed on general orders; an act to amend the statutes relative to new trials.

HOUSE.

The following bills were introduced:

Making a liquor license personal property and allowing it to be mortgaged and subject to attachment; to provide for the transference of moneys collected from insurance companies from the state treasury to municipalities to be used in support of the fire depratment; placing building and loan associations under the direct supervision of the public examiner; relating to actions involving the validity of assessments against railroad companies; authorizing county commissioners to appropriate money for building and repair of roads in adjoining counties; to provide for public watering places outside of incorporated villages and cities; allowing aliens to own real estate in Minnesota; providing for the government of express companies, declaring them common carriers and bringing them under jurisdiction of the railroad and warehouse commissioners; making a time check a lien on logs or lumber after it has been sold;

TUESDAY, FEB. 28.

SENATE.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill providing for a verdict by five-sixths of a jury in civil actions was lost, was carried and the bill placed on the calendar.

LORD BUTE'S HOME.

Probably the Most Palatial Residence in Britain.

The rebuilding of Mount Stuart, Lord Bute's palace near Rothesay, Scotland, makes it the most magnificent residence in Great Britain. The base of the building covers a fraction more than an acre, and is built in the medieval Gothic style of the thirteenth century. The walls, turrets and balconies are built of the beautiful variegated granites and sandstones from Kirkcudbrightshire, the floors and arches being of clouded Italian marbles. The main hall is constructed entirely of alabastar, the supports being columns of oxidized brass and bronze.

The gallery and grand staircase are of marble brought from Sicily and Carrara. The drawing-rooms are paneled with alternate stripes of cherry, walnut and ebony, all from America. The main dining-room which was built so as to accommodate 280 guests, is finished after the style of the drawing-rooms, with the exception of relief figures and mosaics of fish, game, animals, etc. The ceilings and chimney pieces of these rooms are most artistic, and so, also are the windows, mantels and doors, the work of which is extremely elaborate.

There are three immense libraries and a billiard room, all with carved stone fireplaces of antique design. In one wing there are Turkish and swimming baths, large conservatories, aviaries, aquariums, etc.

The whole palace is heated throughout with steam and hot-water pipes, and lighted both by gas and electricity. The pictures in the gallery alone are worth $500,000 and the books in the libraries as much more. The building, decorating and furnishing of this palace, which is without doubt the finest private residence on the globe, entailed an outlay of £1,000,000—nearly $5,000,000.

A Petrified Man.

Des Moines, March 4.—R. L. Dahlberg, a traveling salesman for an implement house, returned to this city from Northwestern Iowa to-day, bringing with him a petrified man. The box containing the specimen was shipped in an express package, although it weighed about 400 pounds. The body is that of a perfectly formed man, and is six feet two inches in height. It is calchreous stone of a yellow cast. The specimen is fully 300 years old, and it is probably the petrified body of a Caucasian. The curves of the body are naturally maintained, as are also the wrinkles and configurations of the skin, together with the hair. Four perfectly white teeth can be seen between the partly open yellow lips. The owner of the man bought it of a company of exhibitors in Carroll, Iowa. The company was composed of two Western cowboys, who gave a detailed history of the man and swore to their statements. They discovered the body beneath the soil of Custer county, South Dakota. In walking across the prairie they stumbled against the limestone big toe of the ancient specimen and later, with the aid of a spade and derrick, unearthed him entirely.

Wayward Girls Return.

Eau Claire, Wis., Special, March 4.—Maggie Siha and Anna Muellershon, who ran away from home Wednesday and were caught at Fall Creek, were brought into court to-day. The parents paid the costs which had been incurred; the complaint charging larceny was dismissed, and the girls were taken back to their homes. Ninety-nine dollars of the missing money was found in their possession. They had only spent $3. After leaving home they walked to Altoona, where they boarded a train and went to Fall Creek. They slept in a woodshed at Fall Creek Wednesday night. They said they intended to come back. They are only fourteen years of age.

A Great Mistake.

Newspaper Office Boy—Oh, there's been an awful time in the editorial room to-day.

Buiness Manager—Eh, what's the trouble?

Office Boy—The hall porter made a mistake, and put the "No Admittance" sign at the subscription office, and the "Welcome" doormat in front of the editor's room.

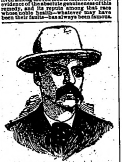
Proof From The Plains.

Story of a Government Scout and Interpreter.

Kickapoo Indian Sagwa, a Valuable Remedy Known to the Indians for Years and Highly Prized.

Many of our readers have probably heard of Capt. Frank D. Yates, whose exploits on the frontier have given him a national reputation.

The testimony of such a man who has lived among the red men is incontrovertible evidence of the absolute genuineness of this remedy, and its repute among that race whose noble health—whatever may have been their faults—has always been famous.



CAPT. FRANK D. YATES, GORDON, NEB.

His endorsement of it is still further proof of its effectiveness. Capt. Yates writes as follows:—

GORDON, Nebraska, July 26.

I take great pleasure in recommending the Kickapoo Remedies, and have known of them among the Indians, as I have lived on the extreme western frontier for the past 30 years and am at present a Sioux Indian interpreter for the government.

My personal experience with Sagwa—which in Indian tongue means "THE BEST"—has been considerable, but one of the most wonderful effects from personal knowledge in my own case was the curing of Chronic Catarrh with which I became afflicted, owing to the great altitude of the country in which I had been living.

It did not at first occur to me to take Kickapoo Indian Sagwa for this trouble; and it was not until I had visited the Hot Springs, and I failed to obtain relief, and the disease had become so very alarming that I was afraid it would get the best of me and develop into consumption that I concluded to take Sagwa. I got one bottle of it and a bottle of Indian Oil. The effect was so marked that I immediately ordered twelve bottles of each, and now bless the day that the thought occurred to me, for I am entirely cured of that most disagreeable and distressing of all diseases.

I am satisfied I was cured owing to the perfect manner in which "Sagwa" purifies the blood; and I claim that Sagwa, taken in connection with Indian Oil, will positively cure the worst cases of catarrh ever known; and so far as the use of Kickapoo Indian Remedies as general family medicines are concerned, there is nothing on earth which can equal them.

With Good Reason.

The introduction in our cities of apartment houses, in which a considerable number of families live under one roof, has given rise to many amusing occurrences. In an Eastern city, recently, two physicians were walking together on the street when one of them lifted his hat to a lady whom they met.

"A patient?" asked the other.

"Oh, in a way," answered the first doctor. "I treated her the other day for a small difficulty."

"What was it?"

"A wart on the nose."

"And what did you prescribe?"

"I ordered her to refrain absolutely from playing the piano."

The other doctor was astonished. "Ordered her to leave off playing the piano—for a wart on the nose! Well, I can't understand your treatment."

"If you knew the circumstances you would," said the first doctor. "She occupies the flat just under mine, in the apartment house."

"Ah—now I understand!" said the other.

THE FIFTY-SECOND CONGRESS

What is Being Accomplished by our National Lawmakers.

THURSDAY, MARCH 2.

Senate.

The postoffice appropriation bill, which had been partly considered yesterday, was completed today—the paragraph in relation to the Southern fast mail having been modified so as to leave the whole question to the discretion of the postmaster-general.

The postoffice appropriation bill was followed by the Indian appropriation bill, which passed.

The senate then proceeded to the consideration of the deficiency bill, and at 6 p. m. took a recess till 8 p. m.

The senate resumed its session at 8 p. m., and the reading of the deficiency bill was proceeded with, occupying about an hour. All the amendments reported from the committee on appropriations were agreed to without question, except the one to pay to the assignees of John Roach $23,160 for the labor and material furnished in completing the dispatch boat Dolphin, which was excluded on a point of order, and the bill was then passed.

House.

The sundry civil appropriation bill consumed the time of the house today. There was a fight over the New York custom house provision and over the World's Columbian Exposition amendment. After considerable debate and amid much confusion the conference report was agreed to—yeas, 131; nays, 101, but it is a disagreeing report. The bill was again sent to conference.

FRIDAY, MARCH 3.

Senate.

The conference report on the postoffice appropriation bill has been agreed to, yeas 35, nays 25. The senate then agreed to the conference reports on the agricultural bill and the naval appropriation bill, and then took up again the McGarrahan bill which was finally passed after long and tedious discussion.

Mr. Aldrich (Rep.), of Rhode Island from the finance committee, submitted the report of the majority on the wholesale and transportation features of the committee's investigation of the tariff question, leave being given Mr. Harris (Dem.), of Tennessee, to file a report for the minority.

House.

Mr. Holman submitted the disagreeing conference report on the sundry civil appropriation bill and the report was agreed

SATURDAY, MARCH 4.

Senate.

The day was taken up with business connected with the inauguration. The house met with the senate and witnessed the swearing in of the vice president and senators-elect.

When Vice President Stevenson took his chair the message calling the senate in special session was read.

MONDAY, MARCH 6.

Senate.

President Cleveland transmitted the following nominations in a message to the senate:

Walter Q. Gresham of Illinois to be secretary of state.

John G. Carlisle of Kentucky to be secretary of the treasury.

Daniel S. Lamont of New York to be secretary of war.

Richard Olney of Massachusetts to be attorney general.

Wilson L. Bissell of New York to be postmaster general.

Hilary S. Herbert of Alabama to be secretary of the navy.

Hoke Smith of Georgia to be secretary of the interior.

They were confirmed in executive session.

Senator Sherman presented a joint resolution, which proposes that the terms of office of president and vice president of the Fifty-fourth congress shall continue until noon of the 30th of April, 1897; that the senators whose terms would expire on the 4th of March, 1897, shall continue in office until noon of the 30th of April, and that that time shall hereafter be substituted for the 4th of March as the commencement and termination of the official terms of the president, vice president, senators and representatives in congress.

On motion the resolution was laid on the table for the present.

A Wonderful Shot.

During the recent severe weather in Scotland a very extraordinary shot was made by Sir Charles Ross' puntsman. A large number of birds were seen sitting on the ice, and the puntsman succeeded in getting within about sixty yards of them. Some of the birds rose as the gun was fired, but the total number killed by the discharge was 149. They included several species, but the majority were plover. The gun was 1 1-2 inches in bore, and the charge 4 ounces of powder and 14 ounces of No. 3 shot. The shot was doubtless rendered much more destructive than it would otherwise have been owing to the pellets skidding along on the flat surface of the ice.—London Field.

The Bonaparte Name Losing Charm.

The Bonaparte family is said to be losing its charm in the eyes of the French people. With the death of the youthful son of Napoleon III. the dynasty, if it can be designated by that term, virtually came to an end and its influence on French men has since been on the decline. There is no prominent figure left to represent it, and, according to one of the society journals of Paris, the Bonapartist section of fashionable life is passing into oblivion. There are Bonapartists in the legislative assembly and adherents of the cause in the country, but the drawing room existence of the party is gradually disappearing.—Boston Journal.

A Devonshire, England, landowner, who has a large sheet of water in his park, threw the skating open to all comers during the late frost, at the charge of sixpence or one shilling (on different days) for entrance employed a large number of men all the time in keeping the ice clean, gave universal satisfaction, and at the end of a week

Ex-President Hayes did not carry a watch. The experience of having his chronometer twice stolen from him made him so much trouble that he declined to tempt another thief.

The pretty custom of drinking to the health of loved ones is still kept up in the ward-rooms of the vessels of our navy. At 9 o'clock in the evening the captain or commander will cause glasses to be filled, and, rising, will deliver this sentiment: "Gentlemen, I ask you to drink to sweethearts and wives. May the sweetheart become the wife. May the wife always remain the sweetheart." The assembled officers drink this toast in silence.

Washington, D. C., March 9.—Representative Springer, of Illinoise, who was one of the president's caller today, asked him if the rule of not appointing men who had held office under him four years ago was to prevail as reported. The president replied in the affirmative, and when asked if the rule was inflexible, Mr. Cleveland responded that it would be so substantially; there might be exceptional and extraordinary circumstances which might cause some departure from it but he could not call to mind any possibilities to justify a change from the policy decided upon. Mr, Springer asked if the rule was also to apply to fourth-class postoffices.

Mr. Cleveland's response was that he had not thought about it, but he gave the decided impression that it would prevail to as great an extent as possible with the small postmasterships.

The postmaster-general is accredited with the announcement that no local businessmen need apply for postoffices under his administration. He objects to commissioning local business men as postmasters for the reason that the actual duties are performed by irresponsible and often incompetent clerks and substitutes. The postmasters under Mr, Bissel must promise to devote their entire time to the work and personally keep strict office hours.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Though many suits are no doubt brought by attorneys under the law that allows them to contract to take a part of the judgement for the fee, which should not be, but on the other hand if this privilege did not exist there would unquestionably be many prevented from bringing suits that are justly entitled to recover for especially in personal damage suits, the victims are frequently poor and by their injuries are rendered penniless. Such men have no money to retain attorneys and pay costs of commencing suits, and unless they can make agreements with attorneys to take their cases on conditional fees they are virtually robbed of their remedy in addition to having been broken in health or maimed for life. All corporations want to see the pending bill pass, so that they can then settle with their victims on their own terms and it looks as if they would succeed, as they did in cutting down the amount to be recovered in case of persons being killed, from ten thousand to five thousand dollars.—Crookston Times,

OBSERVATION.

"Gentlemen, you do not use your faculties of observation," said an old professor addressing his class. Here he pushed forward a gallipot containing a chemical of exceedingly offensive smell. "When I was a student," he continued, "I used my sense of taste," and with that he dipped his finger in the gallipot and then put his finger in his mouth.

"Taste it, gentlemen, taste it," said the professor, "and exercise your perceptive faculties."

The gallipot was pushed toward the reluctant class one by one. The students resolutely dipped their fingers into the concoction, and with many a wry face sucked the abomination from their fingers.

"Gentlemen, gentlemen," said the professor, "I must repeat that you do not use your faculties of observation, for had you looked more closely at what I was doing you would have seen that the finger which I put in my mouth was not the finger I dipped in the gallipot."

SHE GAVE HIM A HINT.

A lady had been ill and under medical treatment for a long time. As she grew no better all the while, she became distrustful of her physician's skill and did not wish to see him, and yet was not bold enough to tell him so. She communicated her state of mind to her maid.

"Lave 'im to me, mum; lave 'im to me," said the girl.

By and by the doctor came to the door, and Bridget opened it about an inch.

"Sorry, sir," said she, "but ye can't come in the day, docthor."

"Can't come in. How's that?"

"The mistress do be too ill for to see ye the day, sir!"

HOW HE TOLD.

When Coleridge was staying among the Quantox hills, he was fond of riding over to Taunton whenever he could find a sober steed. One day on a familiar route his horse cast a shoe, and he stopped at a village to have it replaced.

"What time is it?" he asked the smith, chiefly with the desire of making conversation.

"I'll tell 'ee present, sir," said the man. Then he lifted a hind foot of the horse, looked across it attentively and added: "Half past eleven."

"How do you know?" asked Coleridge.

"Do 'ee think as I've shoed horses all my life, and don't know by sign what o'clock it is?"

The poet went away puzzled, but he returned that evening and offered the blacksmith a shilling to show him how he could tell time by a horse's hoof.

"Just you get off your horse, sir," said the smith, with a twinkle in his eye. "Now do 'ee stoop down and look through the hole in yon pollard ash and you'll see the church clock!"

NOTICED A CHANGE.

When a man alters the cut of his whiskers all his friends notice a difference in him, but many of them are at a loss how to account for it. "What have you been doing?" they say. "You look like another person."

Something like this happened, according to an exchange, when a woman returned home after a few days' absence and heard her daughter playing on the piano.

"Where did you learn that new piece, Mariar?" the mother asked.

"It isn't a new piece, mother. The piano has been tuned."—Youth's Companion.

How the Case Stood.

The prisoner at the bar was charged with assault and battery by his wife. She was a little woman, but wiry and energetic. He was a strapping big fellow and on him the judge frowned fiercely.

"So," said the court, "you have been assaulting your wife?"

"Yes, yer honor," admitted the prisoner doggedly.

"Well, you ought to be ashamed of yourself."

"I am, yer honor."

"The very idea, sir, of a great, big fellow like you whipping a little woman like that!"

The little woman flushed up, but kept still, with her eyes fixed on her husband expectantly.

"I didn't whip her, yer honor."

"Didn't whip her!" exclaimed the judge. "Don't lie to me, sir. You did whip her."

Again the little woman turned her eyes on her husband.

"Beg yer pardon, yer honor, but I didn't whip her. She licked me in about three minutes, and that's why I'm ashamed of myself, yer honor."

The judge fairly gasped.

"That's right, yer honor," put in the little woman. "Henry gets ugly sometimes, but he won't lie when I'm watching him."

The judge took a good long look at both of them and dismissed the case.—Detroit Free Press.

The Power of Observation.

The Bank Clerk—It's a shame the way some men rob their employers by loafing when they're paid to work. There's a bricklayer on that new building across the street who hasn't done a stroke for an hour—I know it, because I've done nothing but watch him.—London Tit-Bits.

CHIMMIE AND DE DUCHESS.

They Create a Sensation at the Roseleaf Social Club Dance.

"Say, what de'ye tink I done? I took de duchess t' de Roseleaf Social Outin an Lifesavin club's dance. Sure! Don't ye know dat club? Say, youse otter get 'quainted in 'siety. Dat's one er de swellest clubs down where I uster live, but I never taut I'd get er invite ter its dance. I'm gettin up in de world, sure, an I'll be outter sight if I keeps on. De Roseleafs in winter dey dances, an in summer dey has picnics on dose barges what gits towed up de river, wid mixed ale. Dat's wot makes it social, an' dat's wot makes it outin. See? Wot makes it lifesavin is 'cause no gents can pack no gun nor no knife t'de dance nor t'de outin. Dat's right, ain't it? De club is high toned, an I'm givin it t'ye straight.

"Well, I was tellin ye: I met er mug wot's er barkeep on de Bow'ry, wot I uster know before 'e got high toned, an now 'e knows me again 'cause I got high toned, an 'e says t' me, 'e says, 'Chimmie,' says 'e, like I was er old pal, 'e says, 'Chimmie, would yuse like er invite t' de Roseleaf dance?' 'e says. See?

"'Why, sure,' I says, 'sure. Wot's de damage?'

"'Fifty cents fer hat check,' 'e says, 'an mixed ale 5 cents er glass fer wot ye order.'

"'Does one hat check take in er loidy?' I says, 'cause I'm onto dem mugs. See?

"'Sure,' says 'e, an I says dat goes, t'inkin I'd take de duchess an paralyze does mugs dead.

"Well, dat's wot she done. Lemme tell ye. De duchess an me was dead sore 'cause of me stringin 'er dat time wot I took Maggie t' de teayter. 'Member? When I says t' 'er, says I, 'Duchess, will ye go' t' de Roseleaf dance wid me?' she says, 'Do ye mean me, er de ye mean Madmosell Maggie?' which is wot she calls Maggie, bein forn.

"So I jollies 'er, an tells 'er dat de Roseleafs was a corker wot Maggie wasn't good 'nough fer, an she says she'd go, an promises t' borry de vally's spiketail coat fer me.

"Say, yer otter seen me! I was up t' de limit, only de coat fitted me too much. De sleeves was over me fists, an de tails was outter sight.

"But, hully gee! I wasn't in it 'longside de duchess. Ye'd had er fit ter seen 'er. It was like dis: Miss Fannie had 'er dress made wid dem hoops wot mebbe yuse heard tell of, an she wored it onct, but 'is wiskers, dat's Miss Fannie's fadder, 'e near died 'er laughin when 'e seed it, an 'e strings 'er so dat she never wored it no more, but gives it t' de duchess. See?

"Say, when the duchess snook outter de house dat night an met me 'round de corner I taut er balloon was chasin me.

"'Duchess,' I says, when I could talk fer laughin. 'Duchess, dere'll be er riot at de Roseleaf if yer goes in dem togs,' I says.

"'T'ell wid de Roseleaf,' says she, only not in dose words, but in 'er forn words wot means dat. 'Wot t'ell,' she says, 'if dose Roseleaf don't know wots der fashion, I'll learn 'em,' she says.

"Dere's some style 'bout de duchess, I'm tellin ye, an I was stuck on 'er grit, so we chases ourselves down t' de hall where de dance was. Dey was all dere when we got dere, an' say, if de king an queen of England had er waltzed in de Roseleafs couldn't been no more paralyzed. Dey was dead paralyzed, I'm tellin ye.

"De band, wot was er planner an er fiddle, had just started when me friend, de barkeep, wot was goin ter lead de march, 'e stopped de music, an 'e says: 'Loidies and gents,' says 'e, 'dis is Mr. Chimmie Fadden and 'is loidy frien: Mr. Fadden and loidy, de Roseleaf, loidies an gents,' 'e says.

"Wid dat de duchess she gives 'em er bow wot killed 'em dead.

"Say, ye otter seen it. It was like er loidy out on top er de stage. Sure.

"Den me friend, de barkeep, 'e says, 'Mr. Fadden an 'is loidy frien will lead,' 'e says.

"Say, I taut I'd go tru de floor, but de duchess she gives me er brace, an we chases off wid de band er playin an all de gang chasin after us, an de duchess steered 'em 'roun like dey never was steered, an 'stid er stringin de duchess, like I taut dey would, dey gives 'er de greatest game er jolly ye ever seed. Wese was in it, and dat's straight.

"I can't dance dose dinky dances wot dey dance in games like dat—only jigs I can dance, dat's all. So me friend, de barkeep, waltzes off wid de duchess after de march an I takes er glass er mixed ale wid de barkeep's loidy frien. Den de duchess an de barkeep comes up, an he sets 'em up, an de whole gang er mugs chases up dere an nods t' de duchess fer de nex' dance, like dey do, but she wasn't on ter wot t' ell dey meaned, an she jess nods back. See? Dat's wot made trouble. Well, den dere was er riot, sure. Every mug she nodded ter taut dat he'd collared de nex' dance, an when de band started de music all de mugs helds out der hands, an de duchess was paralyzed, bein forn an not tumblin. In er minute dey was all scrappin beautiful, and de duchess made me make er sneak outter de hall wid 'er, dough I wanted ter take er hand in der scrap de worse way, so as I wouldn't seem stuck up."—New York Sun.

Departing Relatives.

Fond Mother—Ethel, did you kiss young Mr. Jones again last night?

Ethel—Yes, mamma, he has just lost an uncle, and I was so sorry for him.

Fond Mother—Well, Ethel, let this be the last. I'm afraid if you keep on encouraging him with your sympathy he won't have a relative left in the world.—Brooklyn Life.

Getting Rich.

"I thought you said Simes was a banker."

"He was, but he took a notion that he wanted to make a fortune in a few days."

SLIPS OF THE TONGUE.

Some Very Amusing Mistakes Made by Speakers.

That is a queer and most embarrassing faculty which we all possess at some time in our lives—of meaning one thing and saying another.

When a rather dapper young man was introduced to a very distinguished lady, he bowed low and said:

"I think, madam, you have had the pleasure of meeting me before."

Such mistakes are very frequent on the platform of the amateur performance. A regular attendant at these places noted the following absurd mistakes, some of which were either unobserved by the audience or supposed to be the proper thing in the proper place. A charming young lady thus rendered a climax in a celebrated poem:

"Go, your liver, loves," said Cromwell, "Curfew shall not ring tonight."

In another recitation the reader "clasped to her heart the throbbing boy."

An orator made an unexpected effect by thus reversing matters, "He jests at wounds who never felt a scar."

The pet of the family, having been duly instructed in his part, goes on the platform and begins boldly:

I wish I had a little pat
To dog him on the head.

This is equaled by a recent small hero who, with all the confidence in the world, approached the audience and began:

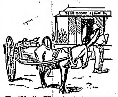
Under the spreading blacksmith tree
The village chestnut stands.

A confusion of memory caused an elocutionist to change a line of Barbara Freitchie rather surprisingly:

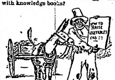
When Lee marched over the garden wall.

—Detroit Free Press.

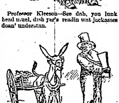
He Understood.



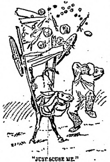
The "Muel"—What that fool nigger doin with knowledge books?



Professor Kleeson—See dah, you lunk head muel, dish yer's readin wat jackasses doan' understan.



The "Muel"—Ha, ha, ha-a-a! Don't understand, eh! Well, well, well! Raise, raise vegetables?



"JUST SCUSE ME."

—Scribner's Magazine.

Pleasant Surprise.

An amusing instance of the simplicity of a little negro boy is told by a lady in whose family the lad lived for several years. When he was about 7 years old, he was set to learn words in an old spelling book.

He at once became interested in watching a race between a small boy and old Father Time as represented by an engraving, and every spare moment he had during the day he devoted to the contemplation of this chase, which was to him both real and exciting.

When bedtime came, he reluctantly laid aside the book, and his study of "dat ol' feller wid de mowin scyve" had to be given up for that day. The next morning the first thing he did was to get the old speller and turn its pages eagerly until he came to the exciting picture.

He gazed intently at the figures for an instant and then exclaimed, with a scream of delight as he capered joyfully about the kitchen, book in hand:

"He ain' kotched 'im yit; no, sah! Cracky; he ain' kotched 'im yit!"—Youth's Companion.

Had Set the Example.

Sourboy—Sir, you are on my feet!

Gailey—Well, it seems to me that you are the last person to complain.

Sourboy—And why, pray?

Gailey—Why, you've certainly been on them yourself for the past 40 years.—Boston Courier.

Bright.

Wiggs—What a lot of bright things Dobson always has to say!

Diggs—Yes. Dobson must be a great reader, and remembers pretty much everything he reads.—Somerville Journal.

Appropriate.

Customer—Why do you refer to this folding bed as "she?"

Clerk—Because, sir, there is no danger of it's shutting up.—Detroit Free Press.

Too Lazy to Be Rich or Poor.

A lazier man than the average Burman it would be extremely hard to find. When it is absolutely necessary for him to work he generally hits upon some method which will save him a lot of exertion. If he wishes to cultivate a piece of ground he sets light to the brushwood as a cheap, easy and efficacious method of preparing the soil. For two or three years he cultivates that piece of land, and then sets light to another spot, allowing the jungle to grow in the old place, which will be ready for reburning when the other ground wants a rest. Rice growers dispense with plows, turning loose instead a number of buffaloes, which cut up the saturated soil with their hoofs. When a Burman has earned a little money he immediately proceeds to spend it all, for the Burmese have no ambition to be rich and never hoard. Consequently there are no large landowners, and there being no aristocracy the people are as near being on an equality as possible. Poor people are about as rare as rich people, and the only beggars to be met with are the lepers, who sit on the steps of the pagodas.—Current Literature.

Small Men.

A mill owner not long ago issued the order that the girls in his employ should not wear laced shoes. The reason he gave was that each one's boots became untied at least five times a day, and took at least five seconds to retie. When these twenty-five seconds were multiplied by 3,000—the number of girls in his employ—the loss of time was, he said, too serious to submit to. Another mill owner, talking over this case, said that he had forbidden visitors because each of his "hands" turned her head to look at him. Computing twenty visitors a day and two seconds for the head's turning to each of his 600 employes, made over six hours daily wasted in that gesture. Statistics are inexorable things.—New York Times.

This Was a Long Time Ago.

A most remarkable thing is reported to have occurred at Naples in the year 1531. Antonio Lazzetti, a beggar who had formerly resided at Tarentum, but who, on account of age, had been sent to a home for the aged at one or the other of the places mentioned, experienced a complete renewal of life. At the beginning of the transformation he was little less than ninety years of age. The first thing noticed which suggested that something extraordinary was about to take place was in his skin, which cracked and came off like that of a toad or snake, leaving a soft, new skin in place of the wrinkled cuticle that had been worn for four score years and a half. Within a surprising short time his flaccid old muscles became strong and plump, the white hairs fell from his head and curly black hair, similar to that which had so delighted the maidens seventy-four years before, appeared. His eyesight also returned with all the vigor of youth; his complexion seemed fresh and rosy; in fact, he was a new man from the soles of his feet to the crown of his head. He lived sixty years after this transformation, and then died at the age of 150—Philadelphia Press.

Odd Names of Postoffices.

A new postoffice in Iowa has been named Unique. One in Kentuck has been named Piano, which is not a musical designation in such a case. Other odd new names in Kentucky are Cyclone, Gertie, Nipp, Susie and Wheel. Mississippi has a new postoffice named Finger and others called Pack and Zero. Missouri has new ones named Pepsin and Quote. Smoot and Tonic are now Nebraska names; Ohio has one called Uno; two Oklahoma offices are Moral and Tum; three in Tennessee are called Cemetery, Let and Tag.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Virtue of Promptitude

Is in nothing more forcibly shown than in the escape from disease of those who heed its warnings. By so doing they avoid Bright's disease and other destructive renal maladies. Chills and fever, indigestion, constipation, liver trouble, rheumatism should be nipped in the bud by the Bitters.

DOINGS OF THE LEGISLATURE DAY BY DAY.

Routine Report of the Proceedings of Both Branches of the Minnesota Legislature During the Past Week.

SATURDAY, MARCH 4.

Senate.

House File 40, Representative O'Neill's bill to make insurance policies continue whether premium notes are paid or not, came up when the calendar was reached. It met with objection by Senators J. D. Smith and Sanborn, who amended it so as not to apply to marine insurance or installment notes. Senator Sanborn moved to strike out the words in line 2 "or from any other cause" and to exempt marine policies. Carried. Senator Craven moved to further amend by exempting policies on the installment plan. Objected to. Several other attempts to amend were made and objected to. After a desultory discussion the bill was passed by a vote of 30 to 9.

House.

Mr. Winston offered a resolution that in recognition of the fact that it is inauguration day and as a token of respect for the respective out-going and in-coming administration, the house take a recess for one hour, 11 to 12 o'clock. Mr. Winston said there were other reasons for this. The sessions of the house had been characterized by the generous, nonpartisan conduct of its members in the transaction of business, free from serious differences and acrimonious debate. The time proposed could well be spent in personal, fraternal interchange, and in short addresses by the members. The resolution was adopted.

Sundry petitions were presented and referred.

Committee reports were made from the judiciary committee, with the exception of H. F. 582, to prohibit the giving of free passes to state officers, which was reported without recommendation. Also for H. F. 256, relating to inspectors of boilers and pilots, for which a substitute was reported. H. F. Nos. 231, 256 and 259, on the same subject, were reported to be indefinitely postponed. The reports were adopted.

The following bills were introduced and referred:

H. F. — to provide for the destruction of grasshoppers and other destructive insects and worms; H. F. 734, to abate nuisances; H. F. 735, to authorize boards of park commissions to issue certificates of indebtedness; H. F. 736, relating to weights and measures; H. F. 737, to provide a deputy state insurance commission; H. F. 738, relating to work on roads; H. F. 739, to prohibit the publication of testimony and the details of trials; H. F. 740, to provide for the construction of Canada thistles, wild mustard and other noxious weeds; H. F. 741, relating to terms of office of county auditors and treasurers, terms are increased to four years; H. F. 742, relating to clerk of court of Hennepin county; it repeals the special law of 1891 regarding fees; H. F. 613, recalled from the governor to be corrected, was, on motion, amended under suspension of the rules and repassed.

The house then went into committee of the whole on general orders.

MONDAY, MARCH 6.

Senate.

The following bills were introduced: Repealing chapter 101 of the General Laws of 1879; prohibiting the lowering or widening of inland lake outlets; to prevent the making of contracts for the payment of money in one metal to the exclusion of the other; repealing chapter 181 of Laws of 1881, relating to timber culture; regulating Lloyd or individual insurance organizations; providing that county printing shall be let to the lowest bidder; amending the law relating to the preservation of life and protection of passengers; joint resolution favoring the pending sixteenth amendment to the federal Constitution; proposing an amendment to the constitution expunging the amendment adopted last fall prohibiting special legislation.

The senate then went into committee of the whole.

House.

The entire morning was consumed in committee of the whole.

The following bills were passed at the afternoon session: To legalize conveyances of married women. This is a Duluth title corrective bill, and is designed to clear up the cloud of title against some 500 valuable lots in the celebrated case where a woman's deed was given on power of attorney from her husband; sheriffs to complete mortgage sales after term of office; relating to the duties of justices of the peace; amendatory of the penal code. This law relates to the state reform school and contemplates releases of the young sentenced there when their conduct warrants; relating to civil actions against receivers, requiring them to be brought in the counties where the cause of action was laid; conferring the same powers on corporations organized under special acts as those organized under general laws; on the qualifications of teachers, and making a system of teachers' certificates; requiring railroad companies to make their round-trip tickets good in either direction; to provide for county teachers' institutes; creating a bureau of labor and labor statistics, and defining its duties; to provide for the poor by counties; relating to clerks to probate judges—they are empowered to call the calendar and take testimony of witnesses in certain cases; to provide for the organization of new counties.

TUESDAY, MARCH 7.

Senate.

The following bills were introduced:

To amend section 149, chapter 36, General Statutes of 1878, relating to state high school; to limit the time for opening streets and alleys, except by condemnation proceedings; to amend sections 77 and 78, chapter 10, General Statutes of 1878, relating to county finances; to amend section 98, chapter 11, General Statutes of 1878, relating to the assessment and collection of taxes; to provide a punishment for the crime of incest by amendment to the penal code.

Senator O'Brien's bill declaring electric light and gas companies to be manufacturing companies was passed.

Mr. Fletcher's H. F. No. 9, relating to the establishment of boundary lines, was passed.

The senate concurred in the house amendments to S. F. 130. The seed grain loan bill was then taken up, and, after some discussion, passed.

House.

Mr. Jacobson called up his joint resolution of March 2, providing that the legislature shall adjourn sine die April 10, at noon, and, after some discussion, it was adopted.

Mr. Lockwood moved a reconsideration of the vote by which H. F. No. 60 was recommended for indefinite postponement, and the motion was carried. Mr. Greer asked that the same action be taken with regard to H. F. 470, relating to the appointment of a state highway commissioner, which was lost Saturday. The request was granted and the bill sent to the committee on roads and bridges.

Mr. Wacek gave notice of a motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution for final adjournment was carried.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 8.

Senate.

The following bills were introduced:

A joint resolution instructing the railroad and warehouse commissioners to exercise their lawful power to revise railroad freight rates now in force.

To amend chapter 13, General Laws of 1889, an act to punish drunkenness.

The house memorial to congress for pensions for three scouts who rendered valuable services during the Indian outbreak, two living in Meeker county and one in Wright county at the present time, was also passed under suspension of the rules.

When the calendar was reached the first bill was that of Senator Keller's amending the banking law so as to allow the incorporation of state banks with less than $25,000 capital in small villages. Such bills require a two-thirds vote to pass, and considerable time was spent under a call of the senate to get enough members in their seats. When this was accomplished the bill was passed by a vote of 43 to 1.

The next bill was Senator Davis' bill relative to limitation of actions, which has once been beaten. Senator Donnelly desired to speak against it, but was not paying attention, and the roll call was well under way when he discovered what was going on. He was then allowed to make his objections, however, and this opened up the whole question for debate, which lasted until Senator Stevens moved the previous question. The roll call gave the bill its passage by a vote of 33 to 14.

House.

The house spent the greater part of the time this morning in debating the two reports of the elections committee upon the Winston election bill. There was a difference of opinion in the committee as to what form the ballot should be. The majority, composed of Messrs. Cairns, Boxrud and Underleak, favored the form used last fall, while Mr. Boggs and Mr. Bruels preferred the Winston form with the square at the head of each party ticket stricken off. This groups the tickets, but requires the voter to place a cross opposite the name of the man for whom he wishes to vote, as in the old form. The majority report was finally adopted, and if the bill passes, the old form of ballot will be adopted. Party lines were not drawn in the vote, but a majority of the Republicans favored the old form.

THURSDAY, MARCH 9.

Senate.

The following bills were introduced:

To amend section 2, chapter 70, General Statutes 1878, relating to fees of clerk of district court. To provide for the better protection of mechanics and material men. Relating to sessions of the legislature. Relating to the crime of incest. To amend section 25, title 2, chapter 66, General Statutes 1878, relating to municipal corporations. To repeal chapter 273, Special laws 1889, relating to care of poor in Grant and Stevens counties; passed under suspension of the rules. To provide for the trial of an alleged claim of Eugene Guilbault against Alfred McCarger and William Barnard. To fix the amount of bond and salary of state treasurer. To amend section 19, chapter 67, General Statutes 1878, relating to security for costs.

The incest bill, declaring marriages within the prohibited degrees to be incestuous and void, opened up the whole question which was fought over once before on a bill of Senator J. D. Smith. After considerable discussion it was placed at the head of general orders.

House.

The following bills were introduced:

For the protection of lighthouses, buoys, etc., on the navigable waters. To amend the law of 1885 and 1887 by requiring payment of certain insurance fees to fire department relief associations. Authorizing corrections of errors in town plats. Amending the law of 1889 relating to fees of clerk of the district court. To legalize village subscriptions to aid county fairs or educational institutions; passed. To provide for the blocking of frogs and guard rails in railroad yards. To amend the law of 1878 relating to notaries public and requiring the fee of $3 be paid to the secretary of state and turned over to the state treasurer. Relating to attorneys' fees in certain cases. To amend section 24 of the constitution by providing that senators shall be chosen in single districts at the same time and in the same manner as representatives; providing that at the election in 1896 the senators from the odd numbers shall be elected for two years; after that all shall be elected for four years. Authorizing the secretary of state to make a new index bill.

The house then took up the calendar. H. F. No. 56, Mr. Maguire's bill to compel railroad companies to construct side tracks to elevators, mills and factories adjacent to the right of way, as amended in the senate, was the first bill taken up. The bill passed by a good majority.

Transcontinental Rates.

Santa Barbara, Cal., Special—The transcontinental meeting has adjourned to meet at Monterey. The officials wish to confer with with R. H. Countiss of Chicago, who has been appointed to the secretaryship of the transcontinental rate committee, before proceeding with other business. The principal business of this conference has been completed and the object of the meeting has been accomplished. The California lines in session here have agreed to adopt to California terminal points only practically the same rates as put in force to North Pacific coast points by Northern lines from Chicago points west, the new tariff to go into effect about April 1. The rates made are as low, the officers say, as the road can afford and practically cut off clipper ship competition. World's fair exhibition rates have not been touched, but will be brought up probably at Monterey, together with other minor issues.

The Strike May Spread.

Toledo, Ohio, Special—There is imminent danger of the Ann Arbor strike spreading to connecting lines. A meeting of the engineers of all the railroads entering the city was held this afternoon, at which Assistant Chief Youngston presided. It was decided not to handle any freight received from the Ann Arbor, so that as soon as that company has any to offer its connections, the engineers on those lines will probably go out.

Women Fuddled on Cologne.

The other afternoon a New York Globe reporter saw a fashionably dressed woman staggering along Fifth avenue. Suddenly she fell. A policeman recognized her as the wife of a well known financier who lived in the neighborhood. A cab was called and the woman was driven home. "She's a customer of mine," said a druggist, "and I know her to be a victim of the cologne habit. I suppose she drinks about eight ounces of it a day. Anyhow, she buys that much. You've no idea how many of my women customers drink cologne. It's an expensive drink and I often wonder why they don't try whiskey, for its far cheaper and a good deal less dangerous. Were it not for the fact that my trade would be ruined if I did not close my eyes to some things, I should certainly refuse to sell cologne to customers whose appearance indicates that they wanted it for bibulous purposes. The wrecks women make of themselves by drinking cologne are something awful."

Street car drivers and others who are constantly exposed to all kinds of weather, and cannot find time to lay by, should ever bear in mind this plain fact that Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup cures coughs and colds. It is unequaled.

The grand jury of Franklin county has returned an indictment against William Darrow for forgery. At present Darrow is serving out a two years' sentence at Aramosa for robbery, but as soon as he is released he will be tried on the above indictment. A year ago Darrow was tried by the Franklin county courts for the murder of Peter Larson. The principal evidence against the defendant was a note he held against Larson for all his personal effects. It was proven in the course of the trial that Darrow had forged Larson's name to this note and it would have doubtless led to the conviction of the former for murder had the body of Larson been found, but it was not and has not to this day. As it is there are enough charges against him to keep him a long time in the penitentiary.

Novelties of Crime.

A dentist's showcase was recently smashed by a thief, who carried off a quantity of false teeth. It was placed near the front door to attract notice, and the question naturally occurs, What can the thief do with his booty?

Another curious feature in crime is found in Henry Villard's butler, who had been for several months stealing the silver, and yet was only recently detected. He stole only that which could the most easily be spared, and thus the loss was not noticed until at last he made a final haul, intending to abscond, but was caught.

It may be added that the pillage by servants in New York is really frightful. Many of this class, indeed, hire out for this purpose, only remain in a family long enough to make a sufficient swoop, and then disappear with the plunder. Nurses also steal habitually, and a number of this kind is now under arrest for robbing their patients. Larceny, indeed, permeates society to such an extent that bolts and bars are of but little avail, for it is not the outside, but the inside thief that is to be feared.—Yonkers Statesman.

Sensational Methods Adopted by a Mexican Lover to Secure the Attendance of His Betrothed at Their Wedding.

Finesse d'Amour.

New Orleans, March 20.—The Times-Democrat's City of Mexico special says: A sensational elopement with remarkable circumstances attending it has been brought to light by the police of this city. A few nights ago the residence of Refugio Martinez, a wealthy and prominent citizen living near Chapultepec, was entered by several masked men. Mr. Martinez and his wife were severely beaten by the supposed brigands. The house was searched and a few hundred dollars in money taken. The robbers then departed, carrying off with them the beautiful young daughter of Martinez, who made a great show of resistance. The police were notified and detectives were put to work on the case. Mr. Martinez and wife were stricken by the loss of their daughter. The detectives traced the bandits to this city and after a prolonged search located one of them at a fashionable hotel. They were surprised on further investigation to learn that the criminal was Luis Salazar, a prominent young man, and that he was living with the abducted daughter of Mr. Martinez and that her parents opposed his suit and forbade her seeing him. In order to gain possession of his sweetheart he arranged for the attack with a party of friends disguised as bandits. They raided in the house and carried off the prize, who says she was not taken against her will. They were married on the day following the abduction. The daring young lover and his companions must answer to the charge of robbery and assaulting Mr. and Mrs. Martinez unless the latter refuses to prosecute them. They are in jail.

An examination of his books revealed a shortage of nearly $25,000 and small amounts received by Mordaunt during the past year were unaccounted for. Mordaunt says he is innocent. He will be taken to Chicago.

The arrest of another Chicago criminal has also been made here. His name is Richard Sims, alias George Randolph, alias Col. McDonald, a bunco steerer. WAS THRICE BURNED.

A Luckless Boston Institution.

Boston, arch 20.—Fire broke out about 7 o'clock this morning in Tremont Temple on Tremont street, opposite the Tremont house, and before noon the entire structure was gutted, entailing a loss roughly estimated at $375,000. Fireman Patrick Dunn of engine 20, had a leg broken, and another man, name unknown, is reported to have been seriously injured. The fire was discovered by one of the guests on the fourth floor of the Parker house adjoining. He thought it was the hotel, and, smashing the glass on one of the signal boxes on his floor, sent in the first alarm. The hotel guests proceded to remove themselves and their effects, and no mishaps are reported.

The Temple was a firey furnace twenty minutes after the first alarm. The blaze poured from all the upper windows, threatening the Burnham building, placing the Parker house and the Park hotel in danger in the rear and alarming the firemen lest it should get down among the rookeries of Province court. The firemen ran lines of hose up through the Parker house and the Park hotel, and both buildings were damaged by water.

At 9:30 o'clock the fire was well under control, the 1,000 occupants at the Parker house and Park hotel were returning to their rooms and the insurance brigade were busy covering goods, guarding as much as possible from the water that damaged more or less all the adjoining buildings and contents. The loss on the Temple was variously estimated at from $325,000 to $375,000, while the Parker house is believed to have been damaged by water to the extent of $50,000. Besides the Union Temple church there were a number of offices in the building, including the American Baptist Missionary mission, Home Mission society, the business and editorial departments of the Watchman and the Baptist Social union, office of Woman's Voice and Loyal Women of America. Under the Temple was the store occupied by Festerhu & Sons, opticians, and Mrs. S. A. McDonnell, gloves. This store was badly flooded and the stocks much damaged. Numbers 90 to 98 Tremont street is the building occupied by William S. Butler, dry goods, etc. This building was not damaged by fire, though some of the stock was damaged by water. The Burnham building was occupied on the ground floor by S. A. Beckard, gents furnishing goods, and at No. 76 by Lubin, trusses; both damaged by water.

Twenty-One Perish.

Madrid, March 21.—At 3 o'clock this morning fire broke out in a pastry cook's shop in Saint Sebastian. A keg of spirits exploded and spread the fire to the adjoining houses, which were densely tenanted. All the occupants were sleeping and the flames were around them before they could be warned. Two families on the top floor of a four-story house were suffocated in their beds. Fifteen persons jumped from the windows. Ten of them were killed and three received mortal injuries. Twenty-one persons are known to have perished and several others, whose fate is unknown, are believed to have been burned or crushed in the ruins.

He belongs to the famous Alabama family, which has many members here.

An Insane Man Hanged.

Washington, March 20.—The result of the autopsy upon the body of Howard J. Schneider has been made known. The Schneider case has excited keen interest in medico-legal circles. Articles will appear in leading journals devoted to medical jurisprudence discussing his sanity, both at the time of the murder and of his execution.

The Markham bill, to tax railroad lands, was gently put to sleep by the state senate last week. This was one of the very few bills introduced this winter that would have benefitted the people of the state. If the bill had passed it would have cost the railroads thousands of dollars annually and they preferred to spend some to defeat the bill. Lobbyists were as thick as bees and the bill was defeated. There is not the least doubt but that money and lots of it, was used to defeat the bill. In justice to our members from this part of the state we will state that they all voted for the bill, Every member of the Peoples party in the senate voted for the bill with but one exception, Senator Hompe, and he can hardly be termed a member of that party. Every man who voted against the bill should be spotted by the people and if they ever run for office again they should be promptly shot with a paper bullet about the size of an Australian ballot.

Washington March 17—Congressman Boen, of the Seventh district left for home the evening after spending nearly two months at the national capitol. During all this time he worked from ten to twelve hours a day, delving into the departments and observing the workings of the two branches of congress when in session. These two months were worth more to him than six months commencing next December in learning the workings of the various branches of the government. He will know where to go and the proper thing to do whenever his constituents have need of his services in Washington. Before leaving for the west Mr. Boen said:

"I have been away from home longer than I could well afford at this time but I feel well repaid for the time I have spent in Washington and am glad I came when I did. Had I waited until after the adjournment of congress, or next fall I can see at what disadvantage I would have been obliged to labor all next session."

Congressman Boen has made the acquaintance of all the new heads of departments as well as a large number of the men who will serve in congress with him during the next few years and the Minnesota colony feel that he will make a valuable member of the great Red river valley district.—Globe.

A well defined rumor has it that about April 15th the Great Northern will add another passenger train to its new line to the coast. The new train will be a "flyer," with a time schedule of forty five miles an hour. The only stops on the Dakota division will be at Barnesville, Crookston, Grand Forks, Larimore, Devils Lake and Minto. The equipment will be new throughout and will be equal to any in the world. Heavy locomotives will be used and such a thing as a train behind time will of course not be tolerated.—Grand Forks Herald.

St, Louis Post Dispatch. Mary Belle Freely says that the emblem for the World's Fair Woman's Building should be an apple, and she adds:

"But for Eve men would be to this day, I suppose, idle, naked, sun-burned loafers, like Adam, no better than the beasts, the serpents and the insects. But she courageously took the apple rescued the world from sloth, indifference and stupidity, and lifted the human race to a level little lower than the angels." Good for Mary Belle! Put the apple right there and let it be a Belleflower,

FARMERS ATTENTION,

James A. Dainard.

The price of No. 1 hard wheat struck fifty cents in this market last week, the lowest in a good many years. It is discouraging but there does not seem to be any prospects for much better prices in the near future at least.

The following is a set of game laws which should be passed by the legislature:

Book agents may be killed from October 1st to Sept. 1st; spring poets March 1st to July 1st; scandal-mongers April 1st to December 1st; umbrella borrowers August 1st to November 1st and February 1st to May 1st; while every man who waits until the editor is gone from home and then sneaks in and throws half a cord of elm snags in the editorial wood house for a years subscription as well as the man who accepts a paper for two years and when the bill is presented says he never ordered it, may be killed from January 21st, without recourse or any recourse or any relief from valuation of appraisement laws, with interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum from date of death until their respective towns shall have entirely recovered from depression and prostration consequent from their ever having been on earth. —Winona Herald.

We would think Attorney General Childs would begin to feel like saying to the senate when called for opinion, "please excuse me gentlemen," for they asked him whether the Markham bill if it became a law would endanger the three per cent gross earnings tax on railroads, and he answered that in his opinion it would not, and yet they defeated the bill for fear it would. Then they asked him for an opinion as to their rights to hold the books of the coal combine, and he said emphatically that they had no right to do so, and yet they did it all the same. Men often ask for legal advise, and if it is just as they wanted it to be they will accept it, but if it is not they will not abide by it because they never intended to. This seems to be somewhat the case with the senate.—Crookston Times,

The Minnesota Legislature is devoting much time to legislating with reference to street cars. That's good. We know of no subject of more vital interest to the great bulk of Minnesotians than street cars, Every farmer is interested in knowing that the street car, as it goes whizzing past his farm is all right And we who live in the smaller towns take a deep and lasting interest in street car improvements. The entire state with exception of St. Paul, Minneapolis Winona, Duluth and Stillwater is watching and praying for street car laws. We can't do without it. We don't care much about tax laws or railroad laws, or warehouse, elevator and election laws, but give us good street car laws and we will be happy. Many of us have never seen a street car but maybe we will some day.

The street car fad, the great and burning question, what to do with ex-presidents, the subsidies for dat silver, and a few other things like these go to show what great minds can do when turned out to play.—Watseka Herald,

A FREE PAIR OF SHOES.

How a Bari Man Got Ahead of Two Italian Shoemakers.

It is said among business men that it requires 12 Jews to cheat a Genoese, but 12 Genoese are not enough to cheat a Greek. Only one person that I ever heard of enjoys the not very enviable distinction of having cheated not merely one Greek, but two.

He was a Bari man.

He was returning to Italy, but had no boots—or rather the things he had were no longer boots. He carefully counted up his money, found he had not enough to buy a new pair, and so quieted his conscience. Then he went to a shoemaker's in the street of Athens.

"I want a pair of shoes by Monday morning to fit me exactly, with round toes," etc. In short, he gave the fullest directions.

"Certainly, sir. You shall have them without fail. They shall be sent to your house at 10 on Monday morning."

In the street of Æolus he entered another shoemaker's shop and ordered a precisely similar pair of shoes on the same terms.

"Have I made myself understood?"

"Perfectly. Let me have the address, and on Monday at 10"—

"I shall not be in at 10. Don't send them before 11."

"At 11 you may count on having them without fail."

On Monday at 10 the first victim appeared. The gentleman tried on the shoes. The right was a perfect fit, the left was fearfully tight over the instep. It wanted stretching a little.

"All right," said the obliging tradesman. "I will take it away and bring it back to you tomorrow."

"Very well, and I will settle your account then."

The shoemaker bowed himself out with the left shoe.

At 11, punctual as a creditor, arrived the second predestined victim. The same scene was repeated, but this time it was the right shoe that did not fit.

"You will have to put it over the last again, my friend."

"We'll soon set that right, sir." And this shoemaker, more knowing than the other, was about to take both shoes away with him.

"Leave the other," said the Bari man. "It's a fancy of mine. If you take them both, some one may come in and find that they fit him, and you will sell them to him, and I shall have to wait another week."

"But I assure you, sir"—

"No, no, my friend; I know how things go. I want this pair of shoes and no other, and I insist on keeping the one."

The shoemaker bowed his head, with a sigh, and went away to stretch the right shoe.

An hour later the Bari man and his shoes were already on board the Piræus steamer, and on the following day the two victims met on his doorstep, each with a shoe in his hand, and looked into each other's rapidly lengthening face.—Spare Moments.

Before and After.

"Next Monday evening," wrote the editor of the Pigeonville Cyclone, "our people will be favored with a treat such as we seldom enjoy in our little city. The world famous Yellerby Dramatic combination, presenting the sparkling comedy, 'Wooed and Won; or, The Lost Latchkey,' will appear at Hecker's hall, on the north side of the public square, with a company of artists whom it is a pleasure to commend to the favorable notice of all lovers of pure and refined comedy.

"Wherever the Yellerby Dramatic combination has played this season it has been greeted with packed houses, and the enterprising proprietor of Hecker's hall is entitled to the thanks of the community for giving us the opportunity of welcoming so eminent a company of stars and specialty artists to our midst."

About a week later the editor of The Cyclone sat down again and wrote as follows:

"Last Monday night a tenth rate gang of barn stormers calling themselves the Yellerby Dramatic combination held forth to a slim and suffering audience at Hecker's hall. They performed, or rather murdered, what they called the sparkling comedy of 'Wooed and Won,' a dreary collection of old and moldy chestnuts, baldheaded conundrums, and gags that wore whiskers when Noah went into the ark. There wasn't a 'sparkling' feature in the entire performance. It was a nightmare all through, and the 'acting' was worse than the 'play.'

"If there is a member of the 'combination' who could earn one dollar a week drowning out woodchucks or possesses enough dramatic ability to turn a grindstone without the aid of a prompter, he didn't appear last Monday night. The only wonder is that when so palpable a fraud as this cheap aggregation of snide actors comes to town anybody can be found who cares to waste half a dollar to help the pestilent humbugs on to the next town," etc.—Chicago Tribune.

How He Was Saved.

Reporter (excitedly)—Is it true, sir, that you fell from a fifth story window of this hotel today?

Stranger—Such is the fact, young man.

Reporter—And you were not injured?

Stranger—Well, you can judge for yourself. I am walking yet.

Reporter—How do you account for your marvelous escape from death?

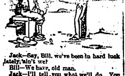
Stranger—Now, look here, I don't care for any newspaper notoriety in this matter, but I don't mind telling you confidentially that I happened to have in my pocket at the time a biscuit made with Puffem's Geyser baking powder.—Detroit Tribune.

News to Her.

Mrs. Shattuck—So you knew all about the Deddam scandal and never breathed a word to me about it. I don't think that is at all fair.

Mrs. Gazzam—Why, bless your life, I did not know it was a secret or I would have run over with it right away.—Browning, King & Co.'s Monthly.

An Investment.



Jack—Say, Bill, we've been in hard luck lately, ain't we?

Bill—We have, old man.

Jack—I'll tell you what we'll do. You insure your life in my favor for $10,000, and I'll do the same for you.

Bill—Well, what good'll that do us?

Jack—Why, we'll just load up our guns and step off 30 paces somewhere and see who gets the money.—Life.

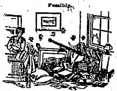
Confused.

An exchange says that an excursion steamer which plies back and forth between Boston and Nantasket Beach was lying at the wharf when a fussy little man, short of breath, came on board over the gangplank.

Probably he wished to secure a seat in the bow of the boat, but he was too much in haste to express himself clearly. He hurried up to one of the few passengers already on board and said:

"Can you tell me which end of this boat goes first?"—Youth's Companion.

Possibly.



"I must have been hunting for a match when I got home last night."—Life.

At His Own Game.

He was a book agent, and apparently a thrifty one, for his clothes were good and he had the bearing of a man who knew his business and did it successfully. He knocked at the door of a house on Second avenue, and upon being admitted sent up his card. The lady of the house of course didn't know who her visitor was and came down to see. As soon as she stepped into the room where he sat expectant she spotted him for what he was and made up her mind.

"Ah, Mr. Blank," she said so cordially that he lost his balance, "how do you do? I am real glad you came in. You know it was very kind of you. So many men have a way of trying to escape, and it is such a rare thing for one to be brave enough to come right up that really I am charmed."

By this time the agent was clear off his feet and tried to say something, but she went right on.

"You know, of course you must know, that the ladies on this street are doing all they can to raise money enough to buy an organ for our church, and we only need now $100 to complete the full amount necessary. Of course we expected you would give us $10, but as you have been bold enough to beard the lion in his den"—and she laughed merrily—"why, you know, I am going to let you off on only $5. It's such a small amount that I'm sure you will not hesitate to give it to us, though of course if you wish to make it $10 we will not refuse it."

By this time he had in some manner fished out the only $5 bill he had and handed it over.

"I'm sure"—he began.

"Oh, don't mention it," she went on. "You are too kind, and now I won't detain you a moment longer from business, for I know how busy you men are in the daytime."

He began to say something again.

"No, no," she interrupted, "I won't listen to a word. You must go now, and some other time you may come in and tell me how glad you are to help us," and she fairly hustled him out of the front door and shut it after him.

Then she laughed.

"Well," she said, "I guess he won't come back again," and he from the other side of the door didn't ask her to guess again.—Detroit Free Press.

A Chicago Fairy.

He loved her more than tongue could tell.

At least more than his tongue could tell, for he had been telling her of it for months and is still at it seven nights a week.

He was sweet and musical as bright Apollo's lute, strung with his own hair, and when he spoke the voice of all the gods made heaven drowsy with the harmony.

Naturally, under such circumstances, the girl liked to listen.

Yet she had lived in Chicago so many winters that she had some doubts about love keeping the cold out better than a cloak and serving for food and raiment.

Spareribs and sealskin she knew were more comfortable from a practical standpoint.

Yet she loved to listen to this lover's love.

It's a weakness women have, even in Chicago.

On this occasion he had been talking to her of his love and his hopes for the future.

"I have so much to live for," he whispered tenderly as he took her in his great strong arms.

She looked up into his face trustfully.

"I should say you did, George," she said with charming naivete. "I weighed 200 pounds today on papa's hog scales."

"Birdie," he murmured joyously and kissed her.—Exchange.

Red Tape.

A government clerk entered the private office of the head of his department to ask for a fortnight's holiday. The official received him with his usual affability and told him to hand in his request in writing.

"Oh! I did not think that was necessary if I applied to you in person," said the clerk.

"Oh! yes. In fact, it is indispensable."

"Then I will go back to the office."

"No need to do that; see, here are pens, ink and paper; sit down and write."

The clerk obeyed. The petition was written out, signed and folded.

"Now," said the functionary, "you have only to present it."

"To whom?"

"To me, forsooth!" And taking the petition, he wiped his glasses, carefully adjusted them, read the document from beginning to end, placed it on a file along with a number of similar applications and then remarked with the utmost gravity, "I have read your petition and regret exceedingly that I am compelled to inform you that I cannot accede to your request."

Imagine the feelings of the poor clerk!—Figaro.

Broke It Up.

"I thought the Miltons were going to give a large party?"

"They were, but a water pipe broke in the house."

"Couldn't it be mended?"

"Yes, but the plumber took the house as part pay."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Big Jump.

Hardacres—You say that Whipple's horse jumped that ditch? That was a wonderful jump.

Huntley—Yes; but it was nothing to the one Whipple made. He landed at least 90 feet farther than the horse did.—Tit-Bits.

They Can Settle.

Great Traveler—The Chinese make it an invariable rule to settle all their debts on New Year's day.

American Host—Y-e-s; but the Chinese don't have a Christmas the week before.—New York Weekly.

Decay of the Indians.

Much melancholy literature, prose and verse, has been indulged in about the decay of the Indians; how they are fading away like the mist on the mountain, the snow on the plain; a mere handful left of once mighty nations, and this feeble remnant the white man is driving into the Gulf of Mexico, the Pacific ocean or some other deep water. This diminution of the Indian census is a sad truth; but there remains the consolation that, with the disappearance of the Indians, will disappear the worst lot of scoundrels, white and mixed, that ever cursed the earth. It was noticed that at a recent payment of the government money to Indians at Anadarko, the Indians came many miles in the bitter weather and suffered indescribably in their camps to draw their money, and that whisky peddlers and gamblers reaped nearly every cent of it in a few hours. So it was in the beginning, and so it will be as long as the Indian lives a "ward" of the government. When the last Indian is laid in his grave it would be a boon if the last Indian robber were hung above the humble sepulcher.—Kansas City Star.

The use of Ely's Cream Balm, a sure cure for Catarrh and Cold in head, is attended with no pain, inconvenience or dread, which can be said of no other remedy.

I feel it my duty to say a few words in regard to Ely's Cream Balm, and I do so entirely without solicitation. I have used it half a year, and have found it to be most admirable. I have suffered from catarrh of the worst kind ever since I was a little boy and I never hoped for cure, but Cream Balm seems to do even that. Many of my acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Oscar Ostrum, 45 Warren Ave., Chicago.

Dusty Places.

Gen. Grant's quick perception and prompt action in moments of exceeding danger are graphically described by Theodore R. Davis in the Cosmopolitan. One afternoon during the siege of Vicksburg he came sauntering on foot toward the naval battery on Logan's front.

The place was known as the "shell-basket," from the number of ten-inch mortar shells dropped into the earth, which exploded and raised clouds of dust that obscured everything in the vicinity for some moments.

In this instance a few of us had watched the flight of a shell, but the general saw the bomb only the moment before it struck, and its windage threw him to the ground. He was unhurt, and conscious that time was precious, before the explosion he had rolled himself sufficiently away to escape the shock, but not the earthy shower—from the dust of which he presently emerged, intently considering an unlit cigar.

"Logan," he said cheerily to that general, who in the bloom of a clean white shirt hastened to him, "how can you keep so clean in such a dusty place?"

This escape was followed by another a few afternoons later, when a shell landed by the front pole of the awning before Logan's tent; and eight generals, Grant among them, rolled hastily out of the shelter to meet uninjured when the dust cleared away from the recent place of conference.

A Local Application.

"How did the 'Merchant of Venice' take out West?"

"All right everywhere except Utah; but there, when Launcelot Gobbo declared that 'it is a wise father that knows his own child,' the people all took it as a personal insult and left the house."

To Believe the Truth

About the efficacy in obstinate cases of dyspepsia of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, requires no stretch of credulity. Are you troubled with indigestion? If so try it, not occasionally, spasmodically. Take a regular, persistent course. Prompt relief, ultimate cure will be the result. The dyspeptic, the bilious, the nervous, the rheumatic, the malaria and kidney-troubled attest its efficacy. A wine glassful before meals.

The United States supreme court decides that letter carriers are entitled to extra pay when they work over eight hours a day.

THEY'RE NOT ALL ALIKE—blood medicines. There's only one that is so far-reaching and so unfailing in its effects that it can be guaranteed to do all that's promised for it. That is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. If that doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back.

It's not like the sarsaparillas or ordinary Spring medicines. They claim to do good in March, April, and May. All the year round, and in all cases, the "Discovery" purifies the blood as nothing else can. Every blood-taint and disorder, Eczema, Tetter, Salt-rheum, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Enlarged Glands, Tumors and Swellings—the most stubborn Skin and Scalp Diseases, and the worst forms of Scrofula, are completely and permanently cured by it.

Buy of reliable dealers. With any others, something else that pays them better will probably be urged as "just as good." It may be, for them; but it can't be, for you.

For colic, cramps, and pains in stomach, nothing equals Dr. Pierce's Smart-Weed Ext.

MINNESOTA LAWMAKERS

DOINGS OF THE LEGISLATURE DAY BY DAY.

Routine Report of the Proceedings of Both Branches of the Minnesota Legislature During the Past Week.

SATURDAY, MARCH 11.

Senate.

The following bills were introduced: To amend section 2, chapter 175, General Laws of 1885, relating to service fees of domestic animals. To create a board of state examiners of teachers. To repeal chapter 43, Special Laws of 1891, creating the office of weigher of coal and inspector of wood for the city of St. Paul. To repeal chapter 42, Special Laws of 1891, creating the office of inspector of gas and gasoline lamps for the city of St. Paul. To amend section 1, chapter 220, General Laws of 1889, relating to corporations. To regulate the construction and regulation of county jails.

The senate spent the greater part of the day in committee of the whole.

House.

The following bills were introduced: To consolidate the general laws of the state, and appointing D. A. Williams and C. D. Vanderburgh as a commission. To repeal the law of 1878 relating to supervisors of the town of Markham, in Freeborn county. To regulate the construction and maintenance of county jails. A bill to regulate the appointment of officers of state institutions in the State of Minnesota. A bill to authorize the register of deeds of the several counties in this state to record the deeds executed by the State of Minnesota to the several railroad companies without first having noted thereon or thereto by the county auditor taxes paid and transfer entered. A bill relating to making abstracts of title to real estate. A bill to determine heirship to real estate in certain cases. A bill to amend section 18, chapter 9, of General Laws of 1891. A bill to amend chapter 16, General Statutes of 1878, relating to intoxicating liquors.

MONDAY, MARCH 13.

Senate.

The only bill introduced to-day was one by Senator Craven to prevent fraudulent sales of goods by itinerant venders and to provide for licensing the same.

The senate then went into committee of the whole and spent the greater part of the day on general orders.

House.

The entire day was given over to the discussion of new bills in committee of the whole.

TUESDAY, MARCH 14.

Senate.

The following bills were introduced: To secure an equitable division of the money received from the tax on gross earnings of railroads; to provide for municipal elections in cities of less than 3,000 inhabitants; to prevent a contractor from assigning his interest in a contract without the consent of his sureties; to amend section 8, chapter 1, General Laws of 1878, relating to taxes; to amend section 59, chapter 64, General Laws of 1878, relating to terms of district court in Anoka county; regulating the use of highways by certain vehicles; to amend chapter 145, General Laws of 1885, relating to incorporation of villages; to allow the city of Minneapolis to issue bonds for $75,000 for a city hospital; to amend section 7, chapter 208, General Laws of 1887.

When the order of third reading was reached Senator Leavitt's bill to prevent champerty was first on the list, and was voted down by a vote of 15 to 20. S. F. 45, committee on judiciary's bill relating to suits against receivers, was passed by a vote of 33 to 1.

S. F. 451, committee on judiciary, allowing surety companies to become obligors on official bonds, was passed—37 to 0.

A good many bills on the calendar were in the hands of the engrossing committee and could not be acted upon.

Senator McHale's bill continuing in the judges of the district court official trust imposed upon their predecessors met with no objection, and was passed.

House.

The following bills were introduced: To fix the maximum fare for passengers on mixed trains at 2 cents per mile; to provide for municipal courts in villages of 1,000; to provide for the registry of paupers, insane and feeble-minded persons; to provide for municipal elections in villages of less than 3,000 inhabitants organized under special charters; to enable honorably discharged soldiers to carry on shows without paying license; to establish a district court of appeals in Minnesota; relating to appeals to the supreme court.

Senator Davis' bill appropriating $38,000 to complete the new wing at the Fergus Falls asylum. Passed.

Senator Kelly's bill increasing the bounty for killing wolves. Passed.

Senator Keller's bill legalizing the action of the reformatory board in paying interest on money borrowed to construct cells. Lost.

Senator Comstock's bill relating to the incorporation of villages. Passed.

Senator Stevens' bill relating to the vacation of streets and alleys. Passed.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 15.

Senate.

The following bills were introduced: To authorize the city of Minneapolis to issue $500,000 bonds to build a bridge across the Mississippi river at Sixth avenue south; to amend the act governing the park board of Minneapolis; to provide for an equitable adjustment of prices in selling grain by grade; to authorize cities of the state to aid in the construction of railroad and wagon bridges.

A petition was received from John J. Rhodes, manager of the Minnesota bureau of coal statistics, praying that his books, which had been seized by the coal combine investigating committee, be returned to him. The petition was referred to the coal combine committee. The senate then went into committee of the whole to consider the Markham bill.

House.

By all odds the most important petition that has come before the house this session was one from John J. Rhodes, manager of the Minnesota bureau of coal statistics, setting forth the circumstances connected with the seizure of his books and asking that they be returned to him. On motion of Mr. Walsh the petition was referred to the coal investigating committee.

The house might as well have been on general orders, for the entire morning session, with the exception of a very few moments, was occupied in debate. The first discussion took place over the disposition of the majority and minority reports of the logs and lumber committee on the Wyman bill to change the system of scaling and make the office of surveyor general a salaried position instead of paying him fees. The majority of the committee favored the indefinite postponement of the bill and the minority reported a substitute which makes the surplus fees of the office payable into the state treasury instead of refunding them to the men who paid them in. The motion to indefinitely postpone both of them was a tie—47 to 47.

The capitol bill was under discussion and consumed the rest of the day.

THURSDAY, MARCH 16.

Senate.

There was but one bill to be introduced:

By Senator Crandall—To provide for a state board of immigration and appropriating money therefor.

Senator Dedon secured the passage of [illegible] a bill to appropriate money for the selection of swamp lands for state institutions.

The finance committee reported back the house bill appropriating $15,000 for a monument to the Second Minnesota regiment and Second battery, with an amendment striking out the name of W. A. Spalding from the list of commissioners and inserting the name of Maj. W. A. Hotchkiss, who commanded the battery. In the debate which followed it appeared that the name of Maj. Hotchkiss had been in the original draft of the bill, but owing to the fact that one of the house members was unfriendly to him his name was stricken out. The senate not only put his name in the bill again, but passed the bill under suspension of the rules. Senator Sanborn and Senator Donnelly paid high compliments to Maj. Hotchkiss as a brave soldier and one deserving of more than this slight recognition.

House.

Mr. Greer moved that H. F. No. 170, which is No. 180 on general orders, be given the place of H. F. No. 616, which is No. 32 on general orders. H. F. No. 170 is Mr. Wacek's bill providing for a commissioner to investigate the Torrens and other systems of land transfer, while 616 is to provide for the inspection of pressed meats. The motion prevailed.

Mr. Abbott sent up a resolution asking that H. F. 674, a bill to tax the gross earnings of express companies, be recalled from the judiciary and placed at the head of general orders for Friday. The motion went over under notice of debate by Mr. Greer. The clerk had started to read the bill when Mr. Fletcher threatened to create a sensation by asking how the bill came to be in the possession of the house. Mr. Abbott's explanation was cut short by the notice of debate.

Mr. Walsh then introduced the resolution upholding the coal combine committee in its retention of J. J. Rhodes' books. The resolution was passed.

Mr. Anderson introduced a concurrent resolution inquiring why the lands of the St. Paul & Duluth railroad, acquired while the road was known as the Lake Superior & Mississippi road, and afterward transferred to the present company, have not been on the tax list for the last fifteen years, as the United States district court decided they should have been in 1877, and also why they should not now be placed on the tax list.

FRIDAY MARCH 17.

Senate.

The senate met this morning with no special business to confront it, and with nothing to anticipate from the coal combine.

The following bills were introduced: To regulate fishing in the waters of Lake Superior and other waters forming part of the international boundary line. To cede civil jurisdiction to the State of North Dakota over an elevator site at Duluth or West Duluth. Relating to the establishment and care of cemeteries.

Senator Stevens moved that the rules be suspended and that H. F. 608, the bill designing to tax sleeping cars, be given its second and third reading and be placed on its final passage. Senator Morse raised an objection to such speedy action, and after the bill had had its third reading it was referred to the judiciary committee. The same action was taken with reference to H. F. 316, another bill on the same subject.

Senator Day's fish and game law was carried on its third reading by a vote of 38 to 11.

Senator Donnelly's bill putting farmers' mutual insurance companies under the control of the state insurance commissioner was also passed, the vote being 41 to 0.

Senator Lienau's bill allowing free employment agencies to be established in cities of more than 30,000 inhabitants was indorsed, 30 to 0.

Senator Dean's corrupt practice act met with a little opposition. Senator Houpe thought it was a useless piece of legislation. Senator Donnelly thought it was a step in the right direction.

The bill was defeated by the lack of one vote. It received 27 votes to 13.

House.

The house committee on legislative expenses this morning recommended that $68.75 be allowed for expenses of the members of the committee which investigated the charges of whipping at St. Cloud. Adopted.

A bill for $3.95 due a St. Paul firm for repairing locks in the hall was also paid.

Resolutions calling for an additional clerk for the appropriation committee, a watchman and an assistant file clerk were recommended for indefinite postponement.

Mr. Cairn's resolution to pay Miss Cora Wing, stenographer for the charter commission, until March 19, was recommended to pass. Adopted.

Mr. F. M. Wilson's resolution to pay the cloak room and gallery keepers of the house the same salaries as the senate paid from the beginning of the session, was recommended for indefinite postponement.

The committee on legislative expenses recommended the indefinite postponement of the resolution to reimburse R. C. Hinrichs, R. C. Talboys, R. A. Walsh, Dr. Williams and D. M. Sullivan for expenses incurred in the contests for their seats in the house, and recommended the passage of a substitute allowing the successful contestants the following sums: R. A. Walsh, $203.25; R. C. Hinrichs, $260; Dr. Williams, $125, and D. M. Sullivan, $208.95. Mr. Talboys' bill was disallowed altogether.

Dr. Williams declined to accept the sum awarded him and said if the house did not see fit to allow him the whole sum he had nothing to say.

Mr. Young said he did not believe any of the accounts should be allowed any more than the house should pay the campaign expenses of the members.

Mr. Sullivan said the amount allowed him by the committee was wholly out of proportion to the actual expenses incurred, and he declined to accept the sum tendered.

Mr. Walsh said he might be compelled to accept the amount tendered him, but he was strongly disinclined to do so.

Mr. Cairns, chairman of the committee on elections, stated that in many cases the amount asked for in the original resolutions did not cover the actual expenses of the members.

While William Parker, a resident of Laurel, Del., was dredging for oysters the other day, he caught an old stove which had been on the bottom so that mud had collected, and to this oysters were attached, the oven being full of bivalves.

A Playwright Wants a Divorce.

Yankton, S. D. Special—Herbert Hall Winslow, the dramatist, is now suing for separation from his wife, Daisy Edna Winslow. The trial of the case began in the circuit court here to-day. Mr. Winslow took the stand in his own behalf as the first witness and detailed the story of the summer of 1890, when he went with his wife to live at Asbury Park, a summer resort. In June of that year, he says, she exhibited a violent temper and a most versatile disposition and was little less than a shrew, and before the case is finished he will tell how she attempted his life with a pair of scissors, and how she flew into a passion when there was no earthly cause for it. On Oct. 5, 1890, he alleges, she deserted him when they returned from Asbury Park. He provided a home for her at his father's house, but she refused to go there and live. She defends herself by swearing that in the subsequent months he condoned her offenses by calling upon her at her father's house and passing the night there.

Must Answer for Contempt.

St. Paul, Minn., Special Telegram—The officials of the legislature, Messrs. [illegible], Wells and Shaefer, against whom a replevin was issued at the instance of J. J. Rhodes in his desire to recover his tell-tale books and papers, will appear before Judge [illegible] this morning in answer to proceedings requiring them to show cause why they should not be fined for contempt of court. The summons is based on their refusal to obey the replevin and turn the books over to the sheriff. Attorney General Childs will be assisted by Judge Flandrau in conducting the case for the defense.

LOCKED IN A SAFE.

Horrible Predicament of a Man in a Chicago Hotel.

Paul Gore, of the Grand Pacific hotel, was locked in a fireproof vault in the hotel office for half an hour Wednesday afternoon. It all came about, as Paul Gore himself explains, "through trying to be too gay."

Late in the afternoon a telegram was received from Col. Frank Barrett in Helena, Mont., which requested that his mail be forwarded, and ending with these words: "Thermometer 50 deg. below zero here to-day." Mr. Vidal read aloud the end of the dispatch, and there was a turning up of coat collars and audible shivers from the people who heard it. Paul Gore was standing near.

"I'll just fix myself now for this cold wave," he said, and, seizing a small gas stove, he carried it into the fireproof vault and slammed the inside door behind him. There was a click as the door swung shut. A minute later there was a pounding on the steel door. Mr. Vidal ran over to the vault and he heard faintly: "For heaven's sake, get that door open and let me out."

Mr. Vidal tried to open the door, but it was locked securely. "Who has the key?" he called through the door. "I have one and Col. Parker has the other," came through the door. Col. Parker's desk in the private office was locked and a search through the hotel failed to find him. Half a dozen bell boys were dispatched in as many different directions, but one by one they returned with word that he could not be found. Finally Col. Parker came strolling in, and he was surprised at the warmth of his greeting. It was like getting back from a transatlantic voyage. The situation was explained, he got out his bunch of keys, and Paul Gore was restored to the arms of his loving friends.

"Is this Saturday or Sunday?" Paul asked, as he dropped some sugar in his glass.—Chicago Tribune.

Keeping Iron and Steel from Rusting.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: A simple method of keeping iron and steel from rusting is to coat them with a solution of rubber in benzel made about the consistency of cream. It may be applied with a brush and easily rubbed off when desired. A coating of more use where the "tooth" imparted by rubber would be disadvantageous is prepared by dissolving two parts of crystals of chloride of iron, two of antimony chloride and one of tannin in four of water. Apply with a sponge or rag and allow to dry. As many coats can be given as are deemed necessary. When dry it is washed with water, again allowed to dry and polished with linseed oil. The antimony solution should be as neatly neutral as possible.

It is by all odds the best liniment. Mr. Charles Metzger, 217 Geyer avenue, St. Louis, Mo., is of the same opinion. He says: "Salvation Oil is the best remedy we have ever used in our family. It is the best remedy on earth."

New regulations for the admission of immigrants are issued by Secretary Carlisle.

A number one cough cure. Mr. James H. Barnet, 243 Cedar street, Buffalo, N. Y., writes thus: "I am using Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in my family and deem it a number one medicine for coughs and colds, and my house shall never be without it."

CONSUMPTION

A Soldier's Story.

"Given up to Die" by the Doctors.

He Thanks God for Sagwa and Prays for its Success.

LEAVENWORTH, KAN., Aug. 15.

I deem it my duty to tender this my testimonial as an offer of gratitude for what "Kickapoo Indian Sagwa" has done for me. I came out of the army in the fall of '65, broken down by chronic dyspepsia in its worst form, and was also suffering enlargement of the heart. I consulted the best physicians, and visited institutions in the East, and one and all told me the same thing—I never could get well.

By suggestion of an old comrade I took "Kickapoo Indian Sagwa," and thank God for it. Sagwa has changed my life from misery and pain to one of health and gladness, and I can now eat anything without distress. My heart is all right and my friends are astonished.

The physician who knew of my case and heard of my cure said that a medicine that is capable of making such a cure, he not only endorses but cheerfully recommends to anyone.

If this testimonial comes under the notice of any soldier who is suffering, let him take the word of an old comrade—buy a bottle of Indian Sagwa at once, and may God prosper you with the success of this remedy is the grateful prayer of

The United States consul at Rotterdam informs the state department that there has not been a case of cholera in Rotterdam since November, 1892, or in the whole Netherlands since Jan. 12, 1893.

Ex-Sheriff Ceedy of Three Rivers, Mich., has been appointed head usher at the White House, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Capt. E. Densmore.

Secretary Hoke Smith is making preparations to carry into effect the act ratifying the agreement with the Indians, ceding to the government the Cherokee strip in the Indian Territory. In a letter to Principal Chief Harries the secretary advises him as to what steps are necessary to be taken on the part of the Indians and suggests that he call the national council together.

The statement that J. Pierpont Morgan, the New York banker who sailed on the Majestic, is to act as a representative of this government to negotiate for a loan of $50,000,000 in gold from foreign nations, is stamped as a fabrication by the treasury department. As on all other subjects affecting the treasury department, Secretary Carlisle refuses absolutely to discuss the question. Mr. Morgan's mission, if there be any, is probably in behalf of New York bankers who desire to have European firms prepared to become a part of a syndicate to take bonds should circumstances demand their issuance.

Accidental Happenings.

Several business houses burned at Honesdale, Pa., causing a loss of $30,000.

E. J. W. Morse & Co.'s cotton thread factory at North Easton, Pa., burned. Loss, $200,000.

At Long Island City, N. Y., Patrick Pidgeon, thirty-two years of age, and Martin Heymer, twenty-three years old, both switchmen, lost their lives in the Long Island railroad yard there.

Fire at Seconsville, Ind., destroyed five business blocks: Funk, Houser & Nash, hardware; Charles Swain, harness; G. Peters, meat market; John A. Peck, law office; A. Larimore, shoe store; Dye & Byers, milliners.

At the Chicago & Northwestern depot at Rochelle, Ill., Mrs. Mary Mulcahy, her daughter Josie and Mrs. Kate Herleby, all of Rock Falls, Ill., were crossing the tracks, when Mrs. Mulcahy fell in front of the engine and was run over, being literally cut in pieces. The daughter was struck by the pilot, her head being badly mashed and her arms and three ribs broken.

The most disastrous freight wreck on the middle division of the Pennsylvania railroad for years occurred near Barre, involving the destruction of three locomotives and twenty-five loaded coal cars and delaying all traffic for four hours. A fireman on one of the engines was buried under the wreckage, but he was rescued with only slight injuries. After the accident Brakeman Jacobs of Lewiston and a teamster whose name could not be learned were killed by shifting trains.

THE COAL COMBINE.

THE COAL COMBINE INVESTIGATION INDORSED.

A Mass Meeting Held in St. Paul at Which Senator Donnelly and others Made Addresses—Sweeping Resolutions Adopted.

St. Paul, Special.—A monster mass meeting was held in Market hall the other night, being an outcome of the investigation by the joint committee of the legislature into the alleged combination of coal dealers to keep up the price of coal. This committee was appointed in compliance with a resolution introduced by Senator Donnelly and passed by both houses. In the course of their investigation, the committee called several witnesses, the principal ones being John J. Rhodes, manager of the Minnesota Bureau of Coal Statistics, and E. N. Saunders, manager of the Northwestern Fuel company. Mr. Rhodes' books were seized by order of the committee, and were found to contain very damaging testimony. An action in replevin was brought in the district court of Ramsey county before Judge Egan by Rhodes to compel the return of the books. Judge Egan decided that the court had no jurisdiction. It was this action that aroused the bitter feeling between the legislature and the court. The sergeant-at-arms and his assistants were called into court, as was also Representative Walsh, in violation of the law granting members and officers of the legislature immunity from arrest and summons in certain actions. Considerable feeling was aroused in both branches of the legislature, and the feeling was strongly in favor of bringing articles of impeachment against Judge Egan, but when the decision of the court was rendered showing that as soon as the court was informed that the witnesses were officers and members of the legislature that the case had been dismissed, the matter of impeaching Judge Egan was dropped.

The Mass Meeting.

The mass meeting was called to order by Hon. J. Ham Davidson, who acted as chairman.

Short addresses were made by Senator Donnelly, Representatives Ives, F. L. Maghee and others.

Donnelly Warmly Greeted.

Senator Donnelly was greeted with a great ovation. He said:

"I need not say I am exceedingly gratified by this very kind and hearty reception. It almost forces me to the conclusion that I am the most popular man in this state—that is, between elections."

This was greeted with great applause.

"For twenty-three months out of two years you approve of what I do, and then vote me down—on the twenty-fourth month."

Calls of "next time."

"You are a splendid set of fellows on dress parade, but when I lead you into action you dissolve like Falstaff's regiment. I cannot help but think that the curse of our country is its party politics.

"There are two kinds of free government, one the pure democracy they had in ancient Greece, where the people made their laws in mass meeting. We cannot bring the 1,500,000 people of Minnesota together, so we must adopt representative government to make and execute our laws. The trouble in government is that the people get too far away from their representatives. They delegate the power to them and then subside. It is only on rare occasions like this, when some grievance occurs, that they rouse up in their wrath and indignation.

"You present a spectacle here to-night that will be felt not only in this state, but in every part of the United States. I think that this struggle has already yielded the most magnificent results. It has helped to educate the whole people to their rights. It has helped to elevate and dignify your legislature. The other day a judge in the courts of this city sat still and listened to an attorney denounce that legislature as thieves and anarchists, and he had no word of objection or interruption. (Hisses.) Another judge drags a member of the legislature over the coals for acts done on the floor of the house of representatives. (Cries of, "Fire him.") The legislature represents the dignity and majesty of this whole people and the right of a free people to make the laws that govern them. There are three branches of the state government: Legislative, executive and judicial. Nevertheless, the great bulk of the power rests with the legislative branch.

"I say to-day, for the first time in many years, it is an honor, and a great honor, to be a member of the legislature. Rarely has there been assembled in the capitol a nobler or abler body of men.

"I doubt if a lawyer would enter the kingdom of heaven unless there was a precedent for it in the Minnesota reports."

Chairman Davidson—Lawyers all expect to go in on a mandamus.

Mr. Donnelly—They are more likely to be taken out on a mandamus. (Applause.)

Mr. Donnelly continued in this strain:

"The house of representatives has done the State of Minnesota proud. Every bill and resolution that was presented in this matter in that house went through, not only without a dissenting vote, but without an opposing voice. My friends, what is the extent of this robbery and what is the remedy for it? There are received at Duluth each year 1,800,000 tons of coal. Anthracite coal can be placed on the docks at Duluth at $3.50 per ton and pay every interest a living profit."

He referred to the coal rates between Duluth and St. Paul and Minneapolis, and hoped that the legislature would pass a law reducing the rates to 50 cents per ton, then the people of these cities could get coal at say $5 a ton.

Mr. Donnelly intimated that John J. Rhodes would be in the hands of the sheriff within twenty-four hours. He continued:

"We are about to inaugurate proceedings to prosecute this entire coal combine. We propose to put the hand of the law on the shoulders of E. N. Saunders, the chief of this great conspiracy."

Mr. Hawthorne, secretary of the citizens' committee, read the resolutions prepared by the committee:

"Whereas, The legislature has undertaken an investigation into the abnormally and unusually high price of coal and has prosecuted the investigation vigorously up to the present time; and

"Whereas, It appears from the evidence before the committee and otherwise that a monstrous and infamous combination exists for the purpose of raising, and that it has raised the price of coal to the consumer to the extent of about $2 per ton, and above any legitimate profit, and that such profit does not accrue to the benefit of the retail dealers in coal; and

"Whereas, It is mete that the citizens of the State of Minnesota, in mass meeting assembled, should strengthen the legislature in its efforts to destroy this colossal and unprincipled conspiracy; and

"Whereas, a sound public sentiment is valuable, and necessary in the enforcement of all law, and it is the duty of all law-abiding and honest citizens to take no uncertain stand in this crisis.

"Now, therefore, we, the citizens of the State of Minnesota, in mass meeting assembled,

"Resolve as follows: That we heartily commend the legislature of the State of Minnesota in the action it is taking in this matter, and pledge our loyal support to every practical and honest effort tending to the relief of the people from the evils following the iniquitous combination and trust of the "railroad kings" and "coal barons" of Pennsylvania and elsewhere, which has spread its evil influence all over this country, bringing misery and poverty to the homes of the widow and orphan, and discontent and hardship where naught but peace, prosperity and happiness should be found.

"Resolved further, That the legislature be and it is hereby requested to pass a resolution calling upon the governors of all the states and territories to each appoint a commission of ten persons who shall, on the first Monday in June, meet in a convention to be held at the capitol of this state to take such action as may be necessary to mold future legislation everywhere and to call more emphatically the attention of the state legislature and congress to the matter in view of the inability of any one state to alone contend successfully against this gigantic interstate conspiracy, and to devise some legitimate means for effectually and forever relieving the people of the United States from the burdensome results of the unlawful combination.

"And that the legislature is further requested to make an appropriation sufficient to cover the expenses of such commission and convention.

"Resolved further, That the legislature be and it is hereby requested to pass the most stringent laws possible against any direct or indirect attempt to form or perpetuate any such infamous combination in this state, And making all who participate in such combination guilty of state's prison crime and making absolutely void any contract which may be made with reference thereto.

"Resolved further, That the chairman of this meeting be and he is hereby requested to appoint within the next thirty days a standing committee of fifty citizens, of all political parties, who shall represent the sentiments of this meeting, and who shall help the authorities in the prosecution of the members of the said coal combine and bring them to condign punishment by imprisonment or otherwise.

"Resolved further, That the said committee shall meet from time to time during the coming summer, and take all necessary steps to prevent the re-establishment of the coal combine in any new form or disguise for the purpose of controlling the price of coal next winter."

Before putting the resolution to a vote, Chairman Davidson dwelt upon the fact that the main fight was not between the legislature and the courts, but between the consumer and a gigantic conspiracy to increase his cost of living.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted, and, with a rising vote and three cheers for the work in hand, the meeting adjourned.

GOING TO FIX HIM.

The Story That Mr. Allen of Mississippi Told to Mr. Cleveland.

Politicians are to-day in a position to appreciate the moral of a story which Congressman Allen of Mississippi once told to Cleveland. The representative had been to the White House several times in behalf of some applicants for offices, and each time he had been sent away empty handed. One day, after a fruitless errand, he turned toward the door, and as he did so he began to laugh.

"Come back," said the president, "and tell me why you are laughing."

"No," said Mr. Allen, "I don't think you want to know."

The president insisted, and then Mr. Allen told this story:

"Down in my district," he said, "I had a client who died suddenly. I was the executor of the estate. About six months after his death his son came to me and said that he was awfully hard up, and he would like to get a little money if he could out of the property. I told him that he would have to wait until the year was out, and then, if all the indebtedness was straightened out, the estate would be settled up. Six months later he came to see me. 'Well,' I said, when he came in, 'I cannot do anything for you today. There is some litigation over the estate, and I have to go into court and defend the suits. Come around when the cases are settled.' After another long wait he heard that a decision had been given, and he came again. 'Very sorry,' I said, 'but the plaintiffs have taken the cases to the court of appeals.' I did not hear any more of him for two years, and then he appeared. 'I am terribly hard up,' he said to me, 'and I certainly would like to get some of that money.' 'Sorry,' said I, 'but the court of appeals hasn't even heard the cases yet, and I don't know when it will.' Then," added Mr. Allen, looking the president straight in the eye, "he turned to go. As he reached the door he looked back and, weary of the long delay and many disappointments, he said to me: 'Mr. Allen, sometimes I am almost sorry the old man died.'" —Washington Post.

JACOBITES IN ENGLAND.

Trey Won't Rebel, They Just Go On Hoping.

The Jacobite movement continues to flourish in England after a certain fashion. Although in the public view it has not got beyond the stage of ridicule, its advocates, or some of them, appear to be terribly in earnest.

They do not propose to initiate a rebellion, but they cling with fervor to their claim that Queen Victoria does not represent the direct and only original Stuart line.

A meeting of Jacobite clubs has been held at St. Ives, the Marquis de Ruvigny presiding. The marquis announced that he had been on a visit to New York, where no little enthusiasm was displayed in behalf of the Jacobite cause.

Branches of the league had been founded in New York, Philadelphia and Boston. The marquis severely censured Rt. Hon. J. G. Shaw-Lefevre for his harshness in having recently forbidden the Jacobites to decorate the Whitehall statue of Charles I.

The marquis also described in eloquent language the sympathy felt by the Jacobites for the cause of the Carlists in Spain. The meeting sang Jacobite songs with great enthusiasm, and adjourned after earnest expressions of loyalty to the ancient and direct line of Stuart.—New York Times.

Had Forgotten His Own Poems.

A bright woman, a favorite with the autocrat, quoted to Oliver Wendell Holmes lately verses published in his first book of poems. He had as completely forgotten them, as though he had never heard them before. He gave to his listener this interesting explanation of the recognized fact that an author can never remember his own work as he can that of other writers. It is because he is always retouching and remodeling his lines and to him they are not completed. Consequently no perfect form arises in his mind at the thought of them.—New York Times.

A Boy's Inquiring Mind Grasps a Broad Assertion as a Fact.

Parents cannot be too careful how they answer the apparently trivial questions of their children. It would almost seem as if a child's dictionary were a necessity of the age. Here is an illustration.

"Pa," said a little chap to his father, "what does a man mean when he says 'I'll fix you?'"

"Means that he'll do him up," answered the father, briefly.

"But then, what does 'do him up' mean?"

"Bother! You ask too many questions, child. It means that he is going to kill him."

The little fellow was silenced for the time, but, as events proved, he thought over the subject. Soon after he was taken ill and, the family doctor being absent, a strange physician was summoned. Left alone with him for a few moments the little fellow began to ask questions.

"Going to cure me, doctor?" he inquired.

"Yes, yes, my little man," said the doctor, who was preparing a dose, "I'm going to fix you."

What was the doctor's surprise to see a small white-robed figure dart from the bed and make a bee line for the door, through which he disappeared. The astonished medical man followed him and found him sobbing in his mother's arms. To her he was relating his fears that the doctor intended to "fix" him in the sense that his father had defined the word a few weeks before.—Detroit Free Press.

SLANT-EYED CELESTIALS.

SLIPPERY MONGOLIANS EVADE THE GEARY ACT.

Sixty-Seven Natives of the Flowery Kingdom Are Permitted to Land at Portland—The Government to Enforce the Law.

Tricks That Are Not Vain.

Portland, Or., March 27.—Customs officials to-day confirmed the truth of the telegram from Washington stating that sixty-seven Chinese were illegally landed at this port last Thursday night from the steamer Hatien Republic. The steamer arrived here from Vancouver, B. C., Thursday evening with 122 Chinese on board. Acting Collector of Customs Pike instructed Deputy Collector Cardinall not to recognize any of the certificates that might be presented, but to let the Chinamen be subject to habeas corpus proceedings. At 10 o'clock at night Cardinall and Inspector Armstrong permitted sixty-seven of the Chinese to land. Acting Collector Pike was not notified of the action until next morning. Cardinall in explanation of his action said his instructions had always been to land Chinese whenever they presented proper certificates. Acting Collector Pike then suspended Deputy Cardinall and Inspector Armstrong pending an investigation, which will be undertaken as soon as Collector Lotan, who is now in San Francisco, returns. William Dunbar, of the Hatien Republic, said: "We have an arrangement with the Canadian Pacific by which we get $6 for every Chinaman we bring to Portland, and if they are denied permission to land we get $6 each for returning them."

The remaining fifty-five Chinese are still on the steamer awaiting the result of habeas corpus proceedings which have been commenced. All have certificates but they are somewhat irregular.

San Francisco, March 27.—Information from Washington strengthens the fact that the United States proposes to enforce the Geary act as passed by congress. Chinese not registered will be deported. Further confirmation of the report that this plan will be carried out was gained to-day. Spreckels & Bros. have been communicated with by the treasury department officials and asked if they are in a position to furnish accommodations for a large number of Chinese on any of the steamers controlled by the firm. What reply Spreckels & Bros. have made is not known, but the opinion prevails that inquiries have been made and the question is now under consideration.

This Week in the Senate.

Washington, March 27.—The indications are that this week the senate will undertake the discussion and perhaps the decision of one of the most important constitutional questions that has arisen in that body in late years, namely: The right of a governor of a state to fill a vacancy in the senate which occurred while the legislature was in session. The report of the two factions of the committee will be presented to-morrow, and as the disposition is, when once these cases are before the senate, to push them to conclusion as rapidly as possible. It is probable that, instead of taking a three days' recess, the senate will sit almost daily. It is expected that the Democrats, through Mr. Gorman, will present the caucus nominations for senatorial offices early in the week, probably in executive session, and, if a serious controversy threatens to follow, the matter may be brought before the public through proceedings in open session.

Taking Electricity.

New York, March 27.—Among the guests at the Gilsey house are Mrs. Russell Harrison, ex-President Harrison's daughter-in-law, her child Martena, five years old, and a nurse. They are here to have the child treated for nervous prostration, brought on by recent illness. Every one will remember how the child was quarantined in the White House recently because of a severe attack of scarlet fever. The result of the attack is a severe case of nervous prostration. It was decided that treatment by electricity would be the most advantageous method of effecting a cure. As soon as a cure is effected the party will start West.

A Ruined Life Ended.

Cheyenne, Wyo., March 27.—James Monohan, "The Educated Section Hand," wandered off into the hills near Clearmont, this state, after a spree and was frozen to death. The body was found last evening, after a search of a week. Monohan was a Wyoming character. He was educated for the priesthood, but fell through drink. At the time of his disappearance he had started for home with a party and insisted on returning alone for one more drink. He was quite a gambler and at one time had an establishment of his own, and bank rolls aggregating $10,000. Most of this was lost on horse races.

Champion Swimmers.

Boston, March 27.—James McCusker, the champion swimmer of America, has issued a challenge to Joe Nuttall, the English champion, and posted $500 with Capt. A. W. Cooke. He offers to swim a one-mile race over any acceptable course in England for not less than $5,000 a side and as much more as can be mutually agreed upon. McCusker asks for $500 expenses to go to England to swim. If Nuttall would prefer to swim in this country the $500 posted will be allowed him for expenses. McCusker wants the match to come off in the latter part of July or early part of August.

First Ball of the Season.

St. Louis, March 27.—The weather was cold and stormy here to-day, but in spite of this fact 2,000 dyed-in-the-wool crowd journeyed to Sportman's Park to witness the game between the St. Louis Browns and the Memphis team. Good fielding and batting on the part of the visitors won them the game by a score of 9 to 8. Whitrock attended to the delivery work for Memphis, and Breitenstein and Dolan were his opponents.

Demand for Our Harvesters.

Washington, March 27.—One result of the efforts to increase trade with the countries of South and Central America seems to be the increase in the exportation of American agricultural implements. Figures at hand in the bureau of American republics as to one country, the Argentine Republic, alone show an increase from $327,000 to $1,381,000 during the year.

A Horse on Garrison.

Cincinnati, March 27.—A Commercial Gazette special from Anderson, Ind., says: Butcher Garrison of that place was fined heavily yesterday for killing pork that had been fattened on the flesh of dead horses, and to-day Oren Munger, at whose slaughter house the hogs were fed, was arrested on complaint of the health officer.

Saraiva Defeated.

Valparaiso, March 27.—A correspondent in Rivers, and also the correspondent in Buenos Ayres, confirm the report that Gen. Saraiva, of the revolutionary generals, has been defeated. The battle took place near Alegrete. It is reported that when Gen. Saraiva was attacked by Col. Matta and his government troops he made little resistance and took himself and his army away as fast as possible.

Golden Wedding.

Rush City, Minn., Special, March 27.—Mr. and Mrs. Gustaf Rosenberg, pioneers in this locality, celebrated their golden wedding to-day. A large number of friends and acquaintances called and left appropriate remembrances of the occasion.

Several parties have been pulling up ice the past two weeks and a large amount has been secured. It is needless to state that the quality is excellent it being quite three feet thick. It would be a queer winter when our ice crop is a failure.

The weather seems to have taken a turn last week after the blizzard and we have actually had fine warm weather ever since. It has not been warm enough to melt the snow very rapidly and it will take some time yet to clear the ground if it does not turn warmer.

An exchange remarks that a man who does not advertise his stock is like a pretty girl who wears a vail and winks at the boys. She knows when she winks but the boys do not. A man who does not advertise may know that he has a good stock of goods but the people at large do not know it.

Mankato Free Press: It is proposed in the legislature to make the entering into a combine against the public welfare punishable by imprisonment. The move has been brought by the recent developments in the coal combine investigation. This move will no doubt be approved by the public. No one will object to the concentration of capital when it is concentrated for legitimate business purposes and leads to a better service for the public, County Commissioner M, E. Kirsch was in town a couple of hours last Monday and dropped in to tell ye editor what he knew about the weather. He is of the opinion that the weather will turn much warmer after the moon changes which will be on March 30th, and that the snow will go fast after that date, and that seeding will commence about fifteen days later with a good crop to follow. If this prediction does not come true it can justly be laid to the board of county commissioners or at least its chairman.

The re-apportionment committee of the state senate has agreed upon a bill which will divide the state into sixty-one legislative districts creating that number of senators and one hundred and thirty-four representatives, Under the terms of the new bill Polk county will form a district with one senator and three representatives. It is thought that the bill will have hard work to pass as the members from the southern part of the state are opposed to it because it decreases their representation giving all the increase to the cities and the northern part of the state.

The efforts of the present legislature to set on foot a means of purifying primary elections and nominating conventions is a movement in the right direction. It should receive the hearty support of every good citizen. The primary and the convention are too often made the tools of designing politicians and the will of the people is defeated. The bill before the house seems to be well framed and will, without doubt, come as near accomplishing the desired end as anything which can be devised. Unless some one can hit upon a better means, or the senate has a better bill, this one should certainly pass. The people are interested in good government, and under the existing system their will is too easily thwarted. It is high time for the professional politician and heeler to take a back seat. It is sincerely to be hoped that every member of the Ramsey county delegation will record his vote on the right side. The measure is Democratic, and will serve the best interests of Democracy. —St. Paul Globe.

The "green goods" man has opened his spring trade, and marks of his fine Italian hand are to be seen in the letter files of the lumber dealers hereabouts He evidently finds his trade a paying one as he has not changed the style of his goods nor his plan of work since his letters began to appear a year ago. He is still located in New York, he prints a bogus clipping from a bogus newspaper telling all about his scheme of selling a thousand dollars of fine counterfeit bills for a thousand cents. You telegraph the villian in cipher language; you go to a station near New York with $625 in your pocket; you see a man with a green necktie; you follow him. What happens between that time and the time you board the train for home is not noted in the letter, but you come back with a heap of experiance that is worth fully $625 to a fool. We have yet to find a lumberman green enough to bite the bait, The picking is too good in the lumber business to make the offer tempting.—Lumberman.

One of Polk county's school treasurers has been getting himself into trouble. His name is Jos. LaJambe, he lives in the town of Lambert and is treasurer of district 103. The other day a warrant was sworn out for his arrest upon the charge of embezzling the funds of the district. It is alleged that he collected $298 from the county treasurer for the use of his district, but instead, used the money for his own private purposes and refused to cash the orders drawn upon him, He had his preliminary examination at McIntosh and was held to the Grand jury under $300 bonds which he furnished..—Crookston Times.

Ole Olson who lives in south Crookston met with an accident in the Great Northern yard this morning which will cost him his life. The yard crew were switching a car upon the side track near the round house when Olson who it is claimed was intoxicated stepped upon the track when the car was within a few feet of him and he was thrown beneath the wheels. When he fell the car wheels passed over his right arm severing it from the shoulder. He was then dragged for some distance beneath the car and when taken out was badly cut about the head and his spine was dislocated. The injured man was at once taken to Dr. Dampier's office and everything done to relieve his suffering, At last accounts he was still alive but his injuries are fatal, Olson is a man about forty years of age and up to a short time ago was employed by the Great Northern company as a section band. —Crookston Times.

An exchange says: An editor recently married and gives his impressions as follows: "Like a horse without a bridle, a love without an idol; a cart without a wheel, a line without a reel; a home without a fire, a church without a spire; a stick without a candle a knife without a handle; a shoe without a sole, a fox without a hole; a ship without a sail, a kite without a tail; a court without a strife, is a man without a wife.

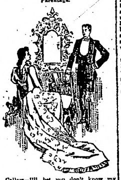
Parentage.



Callow—I'll bet you don't know my father's business.

Penelope—He's a bull in Wall street.

Callow—Heavens! How did you know?

Penelope—I supposed so because you're his son.—Truth.

Monotonous.

An amusing instance of the frequent recurrence of the surname Smith among the soldiers of the civil war is given in Berdan's "United States Sharpshooters." A stranger lieutenant, requiring a detail of 10 men for special duty, called on a certain company and took their names. The men were in line at attention when the officer began at the end of the column.

"What's your name?" he asked.

"Smith."

"And what is yours?" to the next man.

"Smith."

They were put on the list as Smith 1, Smith 2.

"Well, what's yours?"

"Smith," replied No. 3.

The officer looked queer and grumbled something about the peculiarity of the thing.

"What may I call your name?" to the next.

"Smith."

"Your name?" to the fifth.

"Smith."

The lieutenant's face was getting red. He looked the men over and said sternly:

"What do you mean?"

But it was no joke. The detail stood firm, like so many statues, and the officer proceeded.

"What on earth is your name?" he demanded.

"Smith," came the monosyllabic answer from No. 6.

The officer fairly jumped. Then he stormed and fumed and wanted to know if every man in the company was named Smith. By this time a crowd had gathered, and the officer began to cool down. The list must be made, so he hurried through.

"Your name?" to the next man.

"Smith."

"And yours?"

"Smith."

"And next?"

"Smith."

The officer was again becoming furious, and the crowd was laughing boisterously.

"Well, is your name Smith?" the lieutenant demanded of the tenth man.

"My name is Brown," replied the soldier.—Youth's Companion.

Sweet Ireland.

A lady in need of a servant engaged a "new arrival" named Mary Hoolihan. As her name indicated, she was from Ireland, and a more homesick girl never left that dear old country.

There was no returning, however, until she had earned the money for her passage, and her friends were sure that by that time she would like America well enough to remain here.

She came early in the spring, and one day a neighbor sent her mistress a great bunch of lilacs.

The flowers were taken into the kitchen to be arranged in vases, and the moment Mary saw them she threw her apron over her head and wept loudly and bitterly.

"Why, Mary," said her surprised mistress, "what is the matter?"

"Oh, dear, ma'am! Oh, dear; oh, dear!"

"What is the matter?"

"The matther, ma'am? Ye may well ask, for it's heartbroken Oi am wid the shmell av thim flowers, for oh, ma'am, all av ould Oirland shmells like that! Oh, dear; oh, dear!"—Exchange.

Order Countermanded.

Foreman (job office)—What are you working at now?

Boy—Runnin off some business cards of a young woman who wants to do mendin fer gents and families.

Foreman—Gee whiz! Didn't you get word not to print 'em? The order is countermanded. Quick as the boss saw that girl's card he rushed off and married her.—New York Weekly.

The Hard Part of It.

Cholly—Did you hear about Weggie? He was widing in the park, and his horse threw him, and Weggie came wight down on his head.

Chappy—Gwacious! Was he hurt?

Cholly—Yes. He bwoke his left arm. But that wasn't the worst of it. He had to wide home with his hat smashed in!—Harper's Bazar.

A Personal Application.

"Do you take the Texas Agriculturist?"

"I used to, but I don't any more. The editor insulted me."

"Really! In what way?"

"The other day I called on him and asked his opinion as to the best way of raising hogs, and he told me to pull myself up with a derrick."—Texas Siftings.

Keeping Up the Interest.

"I should think," she said, "that your husband would find it very stupid playing cribbage with you every evening."

"Oh, no," was the reply. "I manage not to beat all the time."—Washington Star.

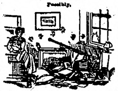
Confused.

An exchange says that an excursion steamer which plies back and forth between Boston and Nantasket Beach was lying at the wharf when a fussy little man, short of breath, came on board over the gangplank.

Probably he wished to secure a seat in the bow of the boat, but he was too much in haste to express himself clearly. He hurried up to one of the few passengers already on board and said:

"Can you tell me which end of this boat goes first?"—Youth's Companion.

Possibly.



"I must have been hunting for a match when I got home last night."—Life.

At His Own Game.

He was a book agent, and apparently a thrifty one, for his clothes were good and he had the bearing of a man who knew his business and did it successfully. He knocked at the door of a house on Second avenue, and upon being admitted sent up his card. The lady of the house of course didn't know who her visitor was and came down to see. As soon as she stepped into the room where he sat expectant she spotted him for what he was and made up her mind.

"Ah, Mr. Blank," she said so cordially that he lost his balance, "how do you do? I am real glad you came in. You know it was very kind of you. So many men have a way of trying to escape, and it is such a rare thing for one to be brave enough to come right up that really I am charmed."

By this time the agent was clear off his feet and tried to say something, but she went right on.

"You know, of course you must know, that the ladies on this street are doing all they can to raise money enough to buy an organ for our church, and we only need now $100 to complete the full amount necessary. Of course we expected you would give us $10, but as you have been bold enough to beard the lion in his den"—and she laughed merrily—"why, you know, I am going to let you off on only $5. It's such a small amount that I'm sure you will not hesitate to give it to us, though of course if you wish to make it $10 we will not refuse it."

By this time he had in some manner fished out the only $5 bill he had and handed it over.

"I'm sure"—he began.

"Oh, don't mention it," she went on. "You are too kind, and now I won't detain you a moment longer from business, for I know how busy you men are in the daytime."

He began to say something again.

"No, no," she interrupted, "I won't listen to a word. You must go now, and some other time you may come in and tell me how glad you are to help us," and she fairly hustled him out of the front door and shut it after him.

Then she laughed.

"Well," she said, "I guess he won't come back again," and he from the other side of the door didn't ask her to guess again.—Detroit Free Press.

A Chicago Fairy.

He loved her more than tongue could tell.

At least more than his tongue could tell, for he had been telling her of it for months and is still at it seven nights a week.

He was sweet and musical as bright Apollo's lute, strung with his own hair, and when he spoke the voice of all the gods made heaven drowsy with the harmony.

Naturally, under such circumstances, the girl liked to listen.

Yet she had lived in Chicago so many winters that she had some doubts about love keeping the cold out better than a cloak and serving for food and raiment.

Spareribs and sealskin she knew were more comfortable from a practical standpoint.

Yet she loved to listen to this lover's love.

It's a weakness women have, even in Chicago.

On this occasion he had been talking to her of his love and his hopes for the future.

"I have so much to live for," he whispered tenderly as he took her in his great strong arms.

She looked up into his face trustfully.

"I should say you did, George," she said with charming naivete, "I weighed 200 pounds today on papa's hog scales."

"Birdie," he murmured joyously and kissed her.—Exchange.

Red Tape.

A government clerk entered the private office of the head of his department to ask for a fortnight's holiday. The official received him with his usual affability and told him to hand in his request in writing.

"Oh! I did not think that was necessary if I applied to you in person," said the clerk.

"Oh! yes. In fact, it is indispensable."

"Then I will go back to the office."

"No need to do that; see, here are pens, ink and paper; sit down and write."

The clerk obeyed. The petition was written out, signed and folded.

"Now," said the functionary, "you have only to present it."

"To whom?"

"To me, forsooth!" And taking the petition, he wiped his glasses, carefully adjusted them, read the document from beginning to end, placed it on a file along with a number of similar applications and then remarked with the utmost gravity, "I have read your petition and regret exceedingly that I am compelled to inform you that I cannot accede to your request."

Imagine the feelings of the poor clerk!—Figaro.

Broke It Up.

"I thought the Miltons were going to give a large party?"

"They were, but a water pipe broke in the house."

"Couldn't it be mended?"

"Yes, but the plumber took the house as part pay."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Big Jump.

Hardacres—You say that Whipple's horse jumped that ditch? That was a wonderful jump.

Huntley—Yes; but it was nothing to the one Whipple made. He landed at least 20 feet farther than the horse did.—Tit-Bits.

They Can Settle.

Great Traveler—The Chinese make it an invariable rule to settle all their debts on New Year's day.

American Host—Y-e-s, but the Chinese don't have a Christmas the week before.—New York Weekly.

Frightened.

In the jungles along the banks of the Magdalena river in the Republic of Colombo, a traveler needs to be on the alert for poisonous serpents.

A French gentleman who went botanizing in one of these jungles relates that he [illegible] listened and trod cautiously, bearing in mind the solemn warning given by the natives when he left the fort. "Look out for serpents, as you value your life."

He eyed the thick tropical growth suspiciously, and moved forward only when he was satisfied that no venomous creature was lying in wait for him. Suddenly he heard a sound behind him, a hoarse, strange, ominous sound, and at the same time he saw the tall grass move.

Cold with horror, he sprang away and struck a fearful blow at the moving place in the grass. Then he picked up the body of his lifeless enemy. It was a bullfrog as large as a man's head.

Sheriff Ewing of Mercer county, Mo., attempted to arrest three prisoners who had escaped from the Princeton jail. They were J. L. Morrison, V. G. Edwards and John Hodge. When the sheriff and posse attempted to arrest them, they fired on the officers and attempted to escape. Morrison was shot dead and Edwards badly wounded. He will die. Hodge was captured.

The Modern Way

WOMAN-HOOD has its own special medicine in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. And every woman who is "run-down" or overworked, every woman who suffers from any "female complaint" or weakness, needs just that remedy. With it, every disturbance, irregularity, and derangement can be permanently cured.

It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine, and the only medicine for women so safe and sure that it can be guaranteed. In periodical pains, displacements, weak back, bearing-down sensations, and every kindred ailment, if it fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

Is anything that isn't sold in this way likely to be "just as good"?

Most so-called Catarrh cures only make matters worse. They drive it from the head to the lungs. But, by its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy permanently cures the very worst cases.

Methods for Secret Correspondents.

At a recent trial in France it was shown that the chemist, Turpin, who is undergoing five years' imprisonment for treason, made arrangements with a friend to carry on secret correspondence. A letter from the prisoner, giving the necessary directions to his friend was read in court. An official inquiry was made and some interesting information supplied by the convicts, from which it was shown that when private news was to be supplied to a prisoner, a formal letter apparently containing nothing of importance, was sent. This, being read by the governor, would be passed to the prisoner, who, understanding the missive, and that it was only necessary to read between the lines written in milk, he could make this perfectly decipherable by rubbing it over with a dirty finger or an old slipper. Another ingenious form of secret correspondence consisted in leaving letters out of words, as if the writers were illiterate. The omitted letters put together formed the requisite words and sentences.—Public Opinion.

Backward.

Little Peter is slow at school, though apparently bright enough everywhere else. The other day at table his mother alluded to him as a "backward boy."

The next morning in dressing he put his jacket on by accident the wrong side before, and instead of removing it and readjusting it, he had his sister button it up at the back, and went down to breakfast thus.

"Why, Peter!" his mother exclaimed. "What do you mean by coming down in that way?"

"Oh," he said, "I got it on that way, and as you said I was a 'backward boy,' I thought maybe that was the best way to go!"

Fruit Acids.

The grateful acid of the rhubarb stock arises from the malic acid and binoxalate of potash which it contains. The acidity of the lemon, orange and other species of the genus citrus is caused by the abundance of citric acid which their juices contain; that of the cherry, plum, peach, apple and pear from the malic acid in their pulp; that of the gooseberries and currants, black, white and red, from a mixture of malic and citric acids; that of grapes from a mixture of malic and tartaric acids; that of the mango from citric acid and a very fugitive essential oil; that of the tamarind from a mixture of citric, malic and tartaric acids; the flavor of asparagus from aspartic acid, found also in the root of the marshmallow; and that of the cucumber from a peculiar poisonous ingredient, called fungin, which is found in many species of fungi, and is the cause of the cucumber being objectionable to some persons.

SUGAR WEATHER.

When snow-balls pack on the horses' hoofs
And the wind from the south blows warm,
When the cattle stand where the sunbeams beat
And the noon has a dreamy charm,
When icicles crash from the dripping eaves
And the furrows peep black through the snow,
Then I hurry away to the sugar bush,
For the sap will run, I know.

With auger and ax and spile and trough
To each tree a visit I pay,
And every boy in the country-side
Is eager to help to-day.
We roll the backlogs into their place,
And the kettles between them swing,
Then gather the wood for the roaring fire
And the sap in pailfuls bring.

A fig for your arches and modern ways,
A fig for your sheet iron pan.
I like the smoky old kettles best
And I stick to the good old plan;
We're going to make sugar and taffy to-night
On the swing pole under the tree.
And the girls and boys for miles around
Are all sworn friends to me.

The hens are cackling again in the barn,
And the cattle beginning to bawl,
And neighbors, who long have been acting cool,
Now make a forgiving call;
For there's no love-feast like a taffy pull,
With its hearty and sticky fun.
And I know the whole world is at peace with me,
For the sap has commenced to run.

TAKE YOUR TIME.

A rule for kissing, in easy rhyme,
Is "Not to hurry, but take your time,"
For many a kiss has gone to waste,
Spoiled by too impetuous haste.

When you find her lips, then kiss her there;
Not on the edge of her golden hair.
A kiss of artistic merit should
Be placed to effect the greatest good.

The nervous tyro contrives to miss
The charm of a well directed kiss,
But constant practice will serve your turn,
So keep on kissing until you learn.

—Harry Romaine in Truth.

MRS. LINTON'S JEWELS.

Late in the afternoon of a pleasant winter day a young gentleman who had been standing before the parlor grate, watching the front door, suddenly left the rug and hastened out into the hall.

A young girl, not only pretty but elegant in appearance, was about opening the front door.

"Going, Miss Harcourt?" he asked, holding out his hand.

"Yes," she replied, "and I must hurry, for though I left the children in charge of Bridget Mulligan, I never feel sure that they are safe until I see them."

"Will you be at home this evening?" he asked.

"I am always at home, stitching away, nowadays," she answered.

"Then I may call?" he asked.

She looked up into his face, blushed beautifully, and whispered:

"Yes." Then she disengaged her hand and ran away.

She knew very well he was coming to offer her his hand and heart, and that made her very happy.

Cast suddenly down from the affluence to which she was born earning her own bread and that of her little brother and sister, by her needle, Laura Harcourt had hardly known how to face her trials. But now, if Frank Dayton really loved her—and did she not see his love in his eyes, hear it in his voice, feel it in his touch?—she could be happy again. She would have been more than human if she had not also remembered that, as Frank Dayton's wife, she should once more have a home replete with comforts and luxuries, and that her dear little charges would find in him another friend and protector. She loved him. She would have married him had he been as poor as herself. But she was glad to think that it was otherwise.

And so, with a lighter heart than she dreamed would ever beat within her breast again when she first knew herself an orphan, she tripped on homeward.

As for that young man, a moment after the door had closed upon Laura, he heard his name uttered in his sister's voice from the top of the stairs.

"Come up here, Frank," she said gravely. "I have something important to tell you, and just now I am alone. Come, now, won't you?"

He replied by running up stairs and entering the bright little sunny room full of the debris of dressmaking, of strips of bright woolen stuff and scraps of gay silk. His sister stood at the door looking rather serious, and, as soon as he entered, she closed it.

"Sit down, Frank," she said. "We'll have to have a long talk, I'm afraid; but there's no escape from it. Tell me, are you in love with Laura Harcourt?"

He answered very candidly:

"So much in love that I am going to propose to her this evening."

"You remember the little brother and sister?" Mrs. Liston queried.

"Yes," he replied, "they shall be mine."

"And there is no doubt in your mind?" she asked.

"None," said Frank, decisively, "I am determined."

"Very well," replied the young matron. "In that case I must tell you something that may alter your intention."

"Nothing can," he hastened to say.

"Perhaps not," Mrs. Liston replied. "But—"

"Sister Emmeline," the young man interrupted, "you used to like the idea, when Laura's people were better off than we are, and she was a belle—has the change in circumstances changed you?"

"Do me justice, Frank," said Mrs. Liston; "I've been a friend to Laura. When I knew she needed work, I sent for her, and actually made it for her. I pay her high prices for amateur dressmaking, when I could get skilled people for less; and did I not give her that beautiful black mantle, trimmed with such profusion of ball-fringe, when she came in that little thin basque, and lots of things Trot has outworn to the children? Oh, I'm not a cruel creature, cold and heartless, as you think, and I would not tell you if I did not know I ought."

"Go on," the brother answered, standing at the window with his hands in his pockets. "I thought I had a friend in you, Emmeline."

"You have," she answered. "And now, I'll tell you. Act as you please. But you must know, since I know it, that Laura Harcourt is a—well, as she is a lady, we will say a kleptomaniac. If it were the chambermaid, we'd say a thief."

"Emmeline! how dare you?" cried her brother.

"I suppose," said Mrs. Liston, "that it is because I must. I'll tell you about it; you can judge for yourself. I've no doubt she's been driven to it—but it was this way:

"When Laura first came to work for me, I cried over her and took pains to be nicer than I ever was, and when she went home I took my black mantle out of the wardrobe and said—just as I would to a sister, you know: 'You shan't shiver, dear while I am warm.' She'd had to sell her sealskin cloak, you know—and she took it so sweetly—and I just loved her—and when she was gone I no more connected the fact that a little pearl stickpin—a good pearl, you know—was gone with her than I would with you."

"I should think not," said Frank.

"But it was gone," said Mrs. Liston. "And the next time she came I took off my rings to wash my hands—my diamond engagement ring and the ruby Aunt Sarah left me, chained together. They were on the cushion all day—I saw them twenty times. And that evening, after Laura had gone, I could not find them."

"Sister Emmeline! I have never been seriously angry with you before," said Frank. "I do not like to feel so to you."

"I cannot help it, dear," said Mrs. Liston, her lips quivering. "Still, I did not think of Laura. I picked over the rug-bag and waste-basket. No servant had been in the room, neither had Trot. And after that, do you know, I told Laura, and we talked it over.

"Then nothing disappeared for some time. It was only to-day that the last blow came. She has taken one of my diamond earrings—she carried it away with her. There they were on the cushion when she was putting on the comfortable garment I gave her. I went out of the room to get her money and some pretty books to send to those children. And the door had closed upon her when I went to the cushion to get my earrings, and missed one. She is a kleptomaniac, dear—that is the mildest form I can put it in. But I should think that friendship and decency would have kept her from taking my keepsakes."

"She never took them!" cried Frank. "Never! Why do you not suspect our grandfather, the clergyman?"

"I should, under the same circumstances," said Mrs. Liston. "I should be sure poor grandpa was a kleptomaniac.

"You cannot blame me for telling you, for I am going straight to Laura's now. I cannot lose those keepsakes; in justice to my husband I must have back that earring, one of the pair he gave me last Christmas. I will not be hard with her, but kind, though she were my sister, and insane. But I must get them back."

"You will accuse her of theft!" Frank cried. "An angel—the girl I love and will marry, a lady and your intimate friend?"

"I will be very careful of her feelings," said Mrs. Liston. "But I must get my things back." She touched the bell. The servant appeared. "Call me a cab at once," said the young matron.

"This parts us forever," said Frank, rising.

"How unjust you are," cried his sister.

She was weeping, but brought her sealskin sack and bonnet from the next room, all the same.

As for Frank, he dashed down stairs, caught up his hat and overcoat, and left the house determined to propose to Laura Harcourt before she had received from his sister the hideous insult of an accusation of theft.

Never rode knight of old more gallantly to his lady, more utterly sworn to be true to her whatever might betide, than this young New Yorker, though, in place of a prancing steed, he took a horse-car, and though he halted at no castle gate, but at a common little street, where a few small houses still remained amongst great factories.

As he swung himself off, he found himself in the midst of a surging crowd, heard the cry of "Fire!" inhaled the odor of smoke, and, to his horror, realized the fact that the flames were issuing from the upper windows of the little frame house in which Miss Harcourt had taken up her residence—from the windows of her very rooms. There in the crowd, she herself struggled with two men, who held her.

"Let me go to them!" she screamed. "My little darlings! Let me save them!"

"It's no use," one of the men cried. "The stairs are on fire. Wait—the firemen will be here directly—listen, here they come."

"They'll have ladders," the other man shouted. "We couldn't get up them stairs."

Dayton did not wait to listen. The stairs were certainly in a bright blaze, but a water-spout, a shutter, a window-sill, were surely all he needed to scale the wall. In three minutes more he had accomplished that, and entered a room where a little girl, choking with smoke and weeping bitterly, still clutched the two babies entrusted to her care in a way that proved she had no intention of deserting them.

As yet they were in no danger of being burned, though they might easily have smothered; in less time than it takes to tell it he had carried the little ones to the street, returned for brave little Bridget, who remained perched upon the window-sill, where he left her, until she was taken off, and was searching for Laura.

He found her in a dead faint; but not in the street. Just as he entered the burning building, his sister's carriage had driven up, and in it she now sat, holding the insensible form of Laura in her arms.

"Thank God! you are safe," she said. "Put the children in and let us drive home as fast as possible. Throw her cloak over her, Frank, she's shivering."

Frank obeyed. As he did so a sharp point pierced his finger. And in the light of an electric lamp which they were just passing, he saw the gleam of jewels.

"My God!" he cried. "What does this mean, Emmeline?"

But neither Emmeline nor any woman who ever wore a garment trimmed with many overlapping rows of fine ball fringe, will have to ask how it was that all of Mrs. Liston's lost jewelry was found imbedded in that fringe, fastened as if woven in, and entirely hidden when the mantle was in its proper position. The things had simply caught to it as she fastened her cloak before the mirror of the dressing-table on which the cushion stood.

"And to think," said Mrs. Liston, "that I should not have remembered what tricks that dreadful fringe used to serve me, and how I carried ma's gold eye-glasses in it across the continent, and took a little string of bells from the Christmas tree with me to the theater. Poor darling, how dared I suspect her? But she shall never know a word of it."

And, in fact, Laura never did know, and could not understand what her little sister meant by looking in the fringe of her black mantle for "more shiny things." And to-day people say that never did sisters-in-law appear so fond of each other as do Mrs. Liston and Mrs. Frank Dayton.—By Mary Kyle Dallas.

Improved Process for Preparing Caustic Soda.

An improved process has been announced, the inventor of which claims to be able to prepare caustic soda from a solution of ordinary salt. This method is the simplest known, the caustic soda being obtained from brine in one operation, while the chlorine can be utilized in the production of bleaching powder. Many attempts have already been made to separate these elements electrically, but various obstacles have arisen to prevent the attainment of a commercial success. The main difficulties have been the destruction of the anodes by the chlorine, and the liability of the products to recombine after being separated. The inventor of the new process states that he has completely overcome the impediments by the construction of a compound, so treated as not to be attacked by chlorine, and a patent diaphragm which renders recombination impossible.

A Boy's Inquiring Mind Grasps a Broad Assertion as a Fact.

Parents cannot be too careful how they answer the apparently trivial questions of their children. It would almost seem as if a child's dictionary were a necessity of the age. Here is an illustration.

"Pa," said a little chap to his father, "what does a man mean when he says 'I'll fix you?'"

"Means that he'll do him up," answered the father, briefly.

"But then, what does 'do him up' mean?"

"Bother! You ask too many questions, child. It means that he is going to kill him."

The little fellow was silenced for the time, but, as events proved, he thought over the subject. Soon after he was taken ill and, the family doctor being absent, a strange physician was summoned. Left alone with him for a few moments the little fellow began to ask questions.

"Going to cure me, doctor?" he inquired.

"Yes, yes, my little man," said the doctor, who was preparing a dose. "I'm going to fix you."

What was the doctor's surprise to see a small white-robed figure dart from the bed and make a bee line for the door, through which he disappeared. The astonished medical man followed him and found him sobbing in his mother's arms. To her he was relating his fears that the doctor intended to "fix" him in the sense that his father had defined the word a few weeks before.—Detroit Free Press.

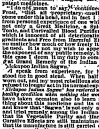
NOTED TEMPERANCE LEADER

The Forcible and Brilliant David Frost.

He Endorses Indian Sagwa.

The portrait of David Frost, the noted temperance lecturer, will be recognized far and wide.



DAVID FROST, BOSTON, MASS.

In a recent conversation with Mr. Frost, that gentleman said, with the convincing earnestness which characterizes his remarks: "One of the greatest evils with which the friends of temperance have to contend is the cheap whiskey decoctions and miserable rum mixtures by which the market is flooded under the guise of 'Bitters,' 'Sarsaparillas,' 'Gingers,' and other patent medicines.

"I do not mean to say," continued Mr. Frost, "that all proprietary medicines come under this head, and in fact I know from personal experience of one which is not only a Great Medicine, a Splendid Tonic, and Unrivalled Blood Purifier, but which is innocent of all deteriorating ingredients and Free from Harmful Effects, no matter how much or how freely it may be used. It is not my wish to appear as the exponent of any public remedy, but in this case I deem it my duty to commend that Grand Remedy of the Indian race, Kickapoo Indian Sagwa.

"I speak from experience, for it has stood me in good stead. When half sick, worn out, and my most rebellious stomach refused to longer act in its normal capacity, Kickapoo Indian Sagwa has restored me to a healthy condition when nothing else would. I have taken occasion also to learn something about this medicine and its origin, and know that 'Sagwa' is not only an old and tried remedy among the Indians, but that its Vegetable Purity and Harmless Curative Effects are still maintained, and that its manufacture is still carried on by modern methods exactly in accordance with the ways of the noble Red Man.

"Simple Roots, Barks, Leaves and Flowers from the Forest are all that enter into its composition, and the Strength which is gained from its use is not the false strength of the rum bottle but the Noble Exhilaration of Bounding Health, and the Purified Blood, cleansed of its poison, coursing through every Vein and Artery of the Human System."

Words fail to convey the earnest force of his remarks as expressed to the writer and the high regard he had for the remedy.

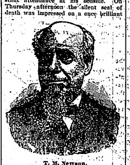
DEATH OF MAJOR NEWSON.

THE VETERAN EDITOR A VICTIM OF SMALL-POX.

While Performing His Duties as United States Consul in Spain the Dreadful Plague Singles Him Out—His Family Prostrate With Grief.

From the Pioneer Press.

Yesterday morning the sad news was received in St. Paul of the death from malignant small pox at Malaga, Spain, of Hon. Thomas McLean Newson, the United States consul there, an old resident of St. Paul and one of the pioneer newspaper men of the Northwest. One week ago yesterday the family received a cablegram from Malaga announcing the illness of Mr. Newson, and since then they have received short dispatches daily, stating the progress of the fatal disease which finally triumphed over the skill of the physicians, who were in constant attendance at his bedside. On Thursday afternoon the silent seal of death was impressed on a once brilliant mind, and the heart of a noble man was stilled forever. The members of the family are completely prostrated by the news of the death of the father and husband in that faraway country, and the family physician will allow no one to see them for the present.



T. M. Newson.

Maj. Thomas McLean Newson was born in New York city, Feb. 22, 1827, of Scotch-Irish parentage. His paternal grandfather was paymaster in the army during the war of 1812. His father, Capt. George Newson, commanded a military company in New York for seventeen years. Three uncles were in the war of 1812. His father removed to New Haven, Conn., in 1832, and both parents died there in 1834. The son, after his parents' death, was placed in a boarding school. When he left the school he and on arriving at his majority entered into partnership with John B. Hotchkiss in the publication of the Derby Journal, in Birmingham, Connecticut. During this period he wrote poetry, delivered lectures, and took an active part in political affairs. He was secretary of the first editorial association in Connecticut, and started and conducted for a year the first daily penny paper in the state. He was one of the originators of the reform school and an efficient promoter of its interests.

He came to St. Paul in 1853, where he was first associated with Joseph R. Brown in the editorial department of the Pioneer, but the following spring, in company with others, he started the Daily Times, which he edited until 1860 when he leased the material to W. R. Marshall. The Press was the outgrowth of this movement. He was one of the founders of the Republican party in the state and was sole delegate of his party in Minnesota to the Pittsburg National convention.

At the outbreak of the rebellion he entered the service of his country, was commissioned commissary of subsistence and subsequently appointed acting assistant quartermaster, with the rank of captain. At one time he was chief commissary at St. Cloud. He left the army with a splendid record for honesty and capacity, with the brevet rank of major, conferred for meritorious service, and the offer of a position in the regular army, which he declined. In 1866 he was commander and president of a company which explored the Vermillion lake region, prospecting for precious metals. He was the first to assay the iron ores, now so famous, in that region. In later years he prospected among the Black hills, enjoying the wild life of the frontier and devoting some attention to literature. While there he wrote a drama of "Life in the Hills," and delivered lectures at various times and places, achieving, in this line, an enviable success. Since that period he wrote and published an interesting work, entitled, "Thrilling Scenes Among the Indians," and experience; also "Pen Pictures and Biographical Sketches of Old Settlers of St. Paul from 1838 to 1857," a racy book of 732 pages, in which the driest biographical details are enlivened with amusing anecdotes and witty comments, in which naught is set down in malice, but every line glows with the genial spirit of the author. He had in contemplation, it is said, another volume on the same subject. He also published "Heleopa," "Indian Legends" and "Recollections of Eminent Men."

From His Own Observation

Maj. Newson was a man of varied and miscellaneous gifts. He was a ready writer, a fluent and eloquent speaker, a journalist, a historian and the oldest editor in Minnesota. He was at one time corresponding secretary of the National Editorial association, and the first and only honorary member of the State Fire association; he was a geologist, mineralogist and assayer, a member of the G. A. R.; a member of the Masonic and Odd Fellows lodges and of the Junior Pioneers. He was broad-gauged and popular in his views and positive in the expressions of his opinions. He was married to Miss Harriet D. Brower in Albany, N. Y., in 1857, and leaves a family of five girls and one boy—May, Hattie, Nellie, Jessie, Grace and T. M. Newson, Jr.

He was appointed consul at Malaga by President Harrison in the summer of 1891, since then he has lived in that sunny clime, performing his duties with great conscientiousness and in a manner highly satisfactory to his chief. A report made by him to the state department was mentioned in the Pioneer Press only a few days ago. At the time of his death, Maj. Newson was sixty-six years of age. He was a friend to all newspaper men, and many a poor reporter who suddenly found himself thrown out of a situation and minus his weekly stipend will remember Maj. Newson and his delicate way of appreciating the situation with a gratitude that will never die. And the flowers that are strewn on his sod-covered resting place will be no fairer than the thoughts that will ever be entertained for him by the newspaper men of the Northwest.

CUPID AGAINST MAMMON.

AND THE LITTLE GOD OF LOVE WINS IN A WALK.

A Young Man Offered a Fortune to Wed a Dashing Widow, but He Remains True to His Blue-Eyed Beauty.

He Must Have Winning Ways.

Detroit, Mich., Special, April 3.—Handsome Albert W. Ryerson is at the Hotel Cadillac dreaming of the sweet Detroit girl who, on Wednesday next, will be his wife, and thinking, perhaps, with a little sigh of regret of the fortune that might have been his had he submitted to the blandishments of Mrs. Hiller, the far from young widow of the Boston millionaire casket manufacturer of that name, before she, in a fit of pique at his coldness, dragged her Canadian coachman out of her handsome home and to the altar. When Mrs. Hiller had finally made the coachman her own she gave it out that Mr. Ryerson had most assiduously sought her hand and fortune, and, to escape him, she took the coachman. Mr. Ryerson branded the story and told of his engagement to a Detroit girl. The coming bride is Miss Vida Marsh and the wedding will take place at the home of her parents on Catherine street.

When the hero of this romance was seen this evening at his hotel he deprecated the notoriety given to himself and Miss Marsh but told the story in an even, well modulated voice. He says she offered him $100,000 in cold cash for his hand and further agreed to allow him the sum of $200 a month for spending money in case he became her husband. But Mr. Ryerson thought of his blue-eyed and vivacious fiance in Detroit, and could not be tempted. He did not relish such matrimonial action and promptly bid himself in. When the widow heard that he was engaged to be married the announcement only had a tendency to make her more clamorous in her suit, and she raised the purchase price of Mr. Ryerson, but to no purpose. Then when all hope was gone, with the proverbial fury of a woman's scorn, she turned upon the young man and lashed him with the whipcords of her anger. He also says Mrs. Hiller sent him a telegram to his home asking him to elope and sail to Europe. This was just before her marriage to her coachman. To-day he received the following telegram from Mrs. Hiller: "Before you write any letters or go to the Boston Globe see me." From this he infers that Mrs. Hiller does not wish to have the truth appear in the Boston papers. Besides offering him $100,000 in cash and $200 a month, he says Mrs. Hiller agreed to will him the most valuable portion of her estate if he married her and adopted the name of Hiller.

Miss Marsh was also seen to-day. She is a bright and pretty young lady, with blue eyes, and is well known in Detroit society. She is somewhat annoyed at the publicity her engagement and approaching marriage has attracted, but holds her affianced guiltless of all blame in the matter. The pair will start Wednesday evening for their new home in the suburbs of Boston.

The Clayton Murder.

Little Rock, Ark., April 3.—The interest manifested in the Clayton murder case grows more intense each hour, and all parties are awaiting the arrival of the sheriff, who has in his custody the Butte (Mont.) suspect named Hickey, who is now headed for this city. New interest was shown in the case last night, occasioned by the statement made by a local detective named Gib Bayse. The story is to the effect that while acting as a deputy sheriff at the time of the Clayton murder he was called to the store of a well known gunsmith, who informed him that he had just loaded pistols for two dangerous-looking characters. Bayse was soon on their trail and met up with them, traveling in a two-horse wagon near Morrillton. When close to them he saw a gentleman, who was well known to him, conversing with the strangers, and at once came to the conclusion that the men were all right and concluded not to place them under arrest. That night Clayton was murdered. Bayse refuses to divulge the name of the horseback rider until the proper time.

Fossils for the Fair.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Special, April 3.—One of the most unique exhibits at the world's fair will be a display of remarkable fossils from the Bad Lands near the Black Hills. It is well known that this region is richer in the relics of bygone ages than any other part of the globe. Prof. Marsh, the famous geologist, has gained many of his finest specimens from there. Judge F. W. Pettigrew is now making a collection of the most valuable. There will be several heads of mammoths, one being four feet in diameter, and with all the huge teeth intact. There are many fossil fish, a megalosaurus, and any number of fossil bones, turtles and other specimens. Altogether the collection will comprise several hundred pieces.

Shot His Wife and Himself.

Chadron, Neb., April 3.—Jesse Woolen of Braver Valley, Sheridan county, shot and killed his wife and himself to-day on the street. Death was instantaneous in both cases. The couple had been married six years, but a few years ago Mrs. Woolen left her husband on account of cruel treatment and took with her her two children. Woolen had several times remarked that when he left this world he would take somebody else with him. He met his wife on the street to-day, and asked her to return with him. AN OVERTURNED BOAT.

Four Ladies Lose Their Lives.

New Orleans, April 3.—By the overturning of a sail boat on Lake Ponchartrain this afternoon Mrs. Mary A. Kelly, Miss Agnes and Mamie Flynn, her nieces, and Miss Effie Kelly were drowned. The party, consisting of ten people, all residing within a stone's throw of one another in this city, had gone out to Mileneburg, a pleasure resort on the lake shore, for a picnic. The morning was spent in various sports and after lunch a sail was proposed. A catrigged yawl was hired from a boatkeeper and the party started out, heading for the Spanish lights. The weather was fine, and Mr. Kelly, who professed himself entirely competent, sailed the boat along merrily. The lighthouse was reached safely, and the boat was then put about for the return to Mileneburg.

In tacking the yawl careened and her occupants strove to right her by rushing to the opposite side. This capsized the vessel and all on board were thrown struggling into the water. The screams of the women attracted the attention of a party of men who were fishing from a skiff some distance away, and they put off to the rescue at once. William C. Merzeinch, one of the fishing party, saved four of the occupants of the yawl and two others were saved by his companions. The four victims of the accident sank before their eyes. The persons rescued were taken to Spanish Fort, whence they were sent to Mileneburg and thence back to the city. Search was at once made for the bodies of the drowned, but up to midnight none had been found.

Earnings at Monte Carlo.

Nice, April 3.—The receipts of the Monte Carlo casino during the year, which ended on Friday, were larger than in any other year of its existence. They amounted to 24,000,000 francs, and warrant the announcement of a dividend of 205 francs per share, the largest dividend yet declared. Five hundred franc shares are now quoted at more than 2,500 francs. The company proposes a plan for splitting every share into five shares, each of a face value of 500 francs, and redistributing the stock on this basis. A similar operation was executed by the company in 1884. The principal feature of the year's gambling was the increase in the number of petty players. The number of English gamblers decreased greatly during the year; that of Russians and Americans increased considerably. German players were more numerous than ever before.

Cattle Thieves Bagged.

Hot Springs, S. D., Special, April 3.—Sheriff Blakey and Detective Sam Moses, while on the range on the west side of this county yesterday, ran across W. H. Aughey and James Clayton engaged in the act of preparing two stolen cattle for market. The officers made a demand for the thieves to throw up their hands, which request Clayton complied with, but Aughey, who is well known all through the West by the name of "Spokane," opened fire. This was returned by the two officers, and resulted in Aughey being shot through his right arm, and also through his left hand. Twelve shots in all were exchanged at very close range. After Aughey became disabled the two thieves were captured and brought here this morning and placed in jail. Aughey is a desperate character, and has been engaged for years in stealing both cattle and horses from the range.

A Whole Fleet Seized.

New York, April 3.—The steamship Seguranca, of the United States & Brazil Mail Steamship line, was seized to-day at her dock in Brooklyn by United States Marshal Jacobus on judgments recovered against the company by several firms that furnished them with provisions. To-morrow the steamer, together with her sister ships of the same line, the Alliance, Advance and Vigilancia, will be sold at public auction to satisfy the various creditors, and it was rumored among shipping men that several influential members of the old company, of which William M. Ivins is the head, have formed a new company under the title of the Standard Steamship company, and propose to buy the fleet in, thus freezing out the smaller stockholders.

By Senator March—To amend section 37, chapter 6, of the General Statutes of 1878, relating to deposit of the funds of the state by the state treasurer.

By Senator E. R. Smith—Relating to the election of school directors and the transaction of the business of independent school districts.

Senator Guderian secured the passage of S. F. 520 and S. F. 521, when they were reported by the committee on logs and lumber. One gives farmers a lien upon logs which remain upon their land for twelve months. The other fixes stringent penalties in the penal code for putting spikes, files, etc., in logs.

Senator Little secured a reconsideration of his street commissioner bill, lost yesterday, and this time it was passed by a vote of 31 to 3.

The calendar was then taken up. The following bils were acted upon:

S. F. No. 315, Senator Borchert—Relating to the register of deeds in Renville county. Passed.

S. F. No. 197, Senator Graef—Relating to the examination of teachers. Passed.

S. F. No. 332, Senator Davis—Reorganizing the national guard of the state. The roll call on the bill passed it by a vote of 34 to 11. Senator Davis then riveted the matter by moving a reconsideration and having the motion voted down by a vote of 10 to 36.

House.

A motion of Mr. Langum ordering H. F. No. 711, providing for a constitutional amendment relating to taxation reported back to the judiciary committee to-morrow morning was lost, a quorum failing to vote.

On motion of Capt. Van Sant the committee on corporations was instructed to report the street car bill back to-morrow morning.

At the request of the governor the following bills were introduced:

No. 873, Committe on Banks and Banking—Amending the law of 1878 by holding shareholders in banks not issuing bank notes individually liable for the stock held by each. Placed on general orders.

H. F. No. 874, Dr. Williams—Making it unlawful to publish anything which might be construed as derogatory to the character of dead persons in the hands of the coroner. Health and sanitation.

H. F. No. 875, Mr. Fleming—Changing the time for holding terms of court in Hubbard county. The bill was read the third time and passed.

H. F. No. 876, Mr. Greer—Authorizing township supervisors to provide water works, sewers, electric light works, etc. Municipal legislation.

H. F. No. 877, Mr. Williams—To prevent the contamination of food. Dairy and food products.

H. F. No. 878, Mr. Van Sant—To regulate the sale and redemption of transportation tickets. This is a copy of the anti-scalpers bill which was lost in the senate. Mr. Van Sant asked that the bill be passed under suspension of the rules in order that it might again be placed before the senate judiciary committee. After a long discussion the bill was passed by a vote of 62 to 24.

THURSDAY, MARCH 31.

Senate.

The following bills were acted on:

S. F. 538—Relating to duties of village marshals. Passed on motion of Senator S. D. Peterson.

H. F. 208—Increasing the number of trustees of Episcopal churches from 8 to 9. Passed on motion of Senator Stevens.

H. F. 101—Relating to municipal courts. Passed on motion of Senator Daugherty.

H. F. 482—Relating to payment for publication of state treasurer's report. Passed on motion of Senator Lienau.

H. F. 414—Allowing villages to separate themselves from townships. Passed on motion of Senator Bell.

By request of the governor the committee on printing was allowed to introduce a bill providing for an increase of the number of legislative manuals.

Senator Probstfield then succeeded in getting consideration for S. F. 182, the Red River valley drainage bill. The bill was passed after considerable discussion by a vote of 41 to 3.

The anti-scalper's bill was placed on general orders.

House.

The committee on public lands reported a substitute for Mr. McDonough's bill, creating the office of state land commissioner independent of the state auditor's office. Mr. Zelch moved that the bill be placed near the top of the general orders, but the motion was lost and the bill will take its regular course. The land commissioner will also be known as commissioner of immigration.

There was a lively little spat in the house as the result of an attempt on the part of the friends of Senator S. D. Peterson's bill, known as the governor's bill, placing country elevators under the jurisdiction of the grain and warehouse commission, to have it advanced on general orders so as to be considered with the other grain and warehouse bills. Roll call and a call of the house were ordered on suspension of the rules. The motion was lost, receiving on fifty votes.

The following bills were passed:

S. F. No. 240—Transfer of money from soldiers' relief fund. Crandall.

S. F. No. 253—Relating to penal code. Dean.

S. F. No. 190—Relating to county officers. Morse.

S. F. No. 166—Relating to inspection and weighing of grain. John Day Smith.

S. F. No. 100—Actions brought upon criminal prosecutions. McHale.

FRIDAY, MARCH 31.

Senate.

The vote by which Senator Streissguth's reassessment bill was lost yesterday was reconsidered this morning on motion of S. D. Peterson and the bill placed back on the calendar.

On motion of Senator Allen the committee on judiciary was discharged from the further consideration of H. F. 471, the Markham county bonding bill, and the bill ordered placed on general orders.

On motion of Senator Leavitt the judiciary committee was instructed to prepare a bill cutting down the enrolling fee to 5 cents. Senator McMillan moved a reconsideration of the vote by which H. F. No. 732, the Hennepin county court house bill, was lost. This prevailed.

Senator Leavitt introduced S. F. No. 547, a bill providing that the state treasurer's report shall be printed in but one newspaper. It will be remembered that a bill had to be passed a few days ago to appropriate $3,000 to pay for this publication in four newspapers. Senator Leavitt moved a suspension of the rules to give the bill its passage. Senator Lienau ojected, but a roll call suspended the rules, 38 to 4. Senator Stevens then moved to lay the matter over until afternoon, but the temper of the senate was for economy, and the bill passed—33 to 6.

Senator McMillan moved to suspend the rules and take up H. F. 75, the university tax bill; but the senate would not allow everything else to be sidetracked for this bill, which has already passed one body, and the motion was lost—20 to 17.

On motion of Senator O'Brien the senate concurred in the house amendments to S. F. No. 452, and repassed the bill as amended.

A resolution of Senator Donnelly, calling upon the finance committee to report the amount of appropriations now called for by bills before the committee, was passed.

Senator O'Brien introduced a bill transferring the remainder of appropriation for the tub and pail factory at the prison to the binding twine plant. Senator Grafe got in a bill amending the penal code by providing a punishment for putting dangerous substances in unthrashed grain. Senator Geissel introduced a bill relating to sheriffs and sheriffs' fees.

S. F. 358, Senator Eaton's bill providing that none but legal newspapers shall publish the laws passed by the legislature, that is to say, none but those which have been published at least twelve months, awakened considerable discussion. An amendment offered by Senator Donnelly was accepted reducing the requisit limit to six months. The bill was passed—37 to 3.

House.

Mr. Horton introduced a joint resolution, which was passed under suspension of the rules, instructing the senators and representatives in congress to ask an appropriation with which to make a survey of the much-talked-of canal from Duluth to St. Paul.

The house then went into committee of the whole. S. F. No. 234, relating to the distribution of the Minnesota war records was recommended to pass without opposition, as was Senator Tawney's ... requiring street railway companies to vestibule the front platforms of electric cars.

Senator Keller's bill to prevent the sale of adulterated coffee was recommended for indefinite postponement.

Senator Sanborn's bill submitting to the people a constitutional amendment exempting church parsonages from taxation was debated for half an hour and then recommended for indefinite postponement.

SATURDAY, APRIL 1.

Senate.

The following bills were passed:

S. F. 357, Senator J. D. Smith—To regulate fishing in international waters on the northern boundary.

S. F. 408, Senator Streissguth — To amend the General Statutes relative to delinquent real estate taxes.

S. F. 407, Senator Streissguth—To require county treasurers to notify personal property tax delinquents before March 15 of each year.

S. F. 232, Senator J. D. Smith—Relating to costs in civil actions.

S. F. 376, Senator McHale—Relating to civil actions against firms under a common name.

S. F. 443, Senator Donnelly—Relating to streets. Referred to the judiciary committee.

The state elevator bill was passed by a vote of 31 to 12.

House.

The recommendation of the coal investigating committee that Senator Donnelly's interstate conference resolution be passed under suspension of the rules was adopted and the resolution passed.

Mr. Cairns' herd bill for the benefit of the northern part of Hennepin county was also passed under suspension of the rules.

Mr. Howard's bill relating to the attendance of deputy sheriffs in district courts was passed on general orders.

J. E. Johnson's bill transferring Pope county from the Seventh to the Sixteenth judicial district was passed, as was Mr. O'Neill's bill changing the name of the town of Moonstone, in Big Stone county, to Gladstone.

On motion of Mr. Zelch S. F. 495, regulating the sampling of grain and the sealing of cars at terminal points, was placed on the calendar. The bill is intended to prevent the plundering of grain cars.

Mr. Abbott attempted to get the bill extending the time for payment on state lands placed at the head of general orders, but Mr. Staples objected, and the motion failed to get 76 votes, so it was lost. Afterward he renewed the motion and was again voted down.

On motion of Mr. Christie S. F. No. 407, regulating the meetings of trustees of church educational associations, was placed on the calendar.

The Largest Iron Horse.

The new locomotive which now draws the Empire State Express on the New York Central—No. 903 is the most powerful locomotive engine in the world. It is two-fifths larger than the average railway locomotive. This immense "iron horse" weighs 100 tons, while the weight of the average engine is 60 tons, and it has 1,020 horse-power, while the ordinary locomotive has from 800 to 900. It is believed by the company that the larger wheels of 903 will reduce the Empire State's time on the trip to Albany to two hours and fifteen minutes, from two hours and forty-five minutes, a saving of half an hour.

James A. Dainard,

One of the prominent citizens of Thief River Falls, finding that place decidedly too hot for him, "folded his tent and silently stole away," arriving here at eleven o'clock at night. We have not learned the particulars but understand that a rope, tar and feathers and a barrel of gun powder, were among the things that caused him to take his hasty departure.

This is our first opportunity to correct some mistakes made last week in announcing the marriage Hintze—Riggers. The Herald's young lady reporter mistook Wm. Hintze for Al. McLaughlin and hence our mistake. Instead of Harre it was Rev. Peterson who performed the marriage ceremony. Neither of these mistakes affect the validity of the contract or the happiness of the couple.—Ada Herald.

The new commissioner of the general land office has entered upon his duties at Washington. When the timber on the Indian reservations in Minnesota will be ready to be sold is now somewhat problematical as the change in the management cannot but entail delay. The work of making estimates still goes on however, but the sale of timber may not be expected before the end of another year. Possibly not then.—Lumberman.

Many of our readers will remember the arrest of Geo. Schneider by Chief of Police Gonyea a few months ago on a telegram from Hallock, saying that Schneider was suspected of stealing $2,000 from Nels Olander of that place. Schneider's trunk, was searched and several rolls of butter was found in one of which was concealed $1,000 of the money. He then confessed that he and his brother J. S. Schneider had stolen the money and divided it, and he told Chief Gonyea where it was to be found. The chief went to Hallock, and secured the balance of the money and the two men were arrested. Their trial came off last week. J. S. Schneider was the first one prosecuted and although he virtually confessed to stealing the money the jury brought in a virdict of not guilty and the county attorney then moved for a dismissal of the case against the other brother.—Crookston Times,

The infamous coal ring, which has existed in this state for years, has always been one of the most outrageous "trusts" that has ever been permitted to exist, and it has grown bolder and stronger every year. The Minnesota legislature now in session appointed a committee to investigate it, and when its plans and workings were exposed, the "coal barons" of Pennsylvania, who control it, dictating prices and methods of doing business, and even the men and firms who shall or shall not be permitted to wholesale or retail coal, threaten to cut Minnesota off from coal altogether if there was not a let up in the investigation. When a trust gets so big that it feels safe in threatening the representatives of a sovereign state, because they inquire why and how the people are systematically robbed, the end of the trust should not be far off.—Northwestern Agriculturist.

By invitation our reporter had the pleasure of witnessing Prof. Gambell's amature dramatic club practice "Ten Nights in a Bar-room," Tuesday evening. He was agreeably surprised and pleased with the performance and ability shown by all. As it will be interesting to many to know who have taken part we shall give the names:

The first scene is opened by Mr. E. Stranahan as Mr. Romain, J. M. Hanson as Sample Switchel, Carl Jonnson as Simon Slade the inn keeper, Prof. Gambell as Joe Morgan, Willie Stranahan as Frank Slade, Ed Giste as Willie Hammond, W. A. Arthur as Harvey Green the villain, Miss Alice Holmes as Mrs. Slade, Miss Edith Peters as Mrs. Morgan, Miss May Halvorson as Miss Mehitable Cartright, and Miss Millie Stranaban as Mary Morgan. The manager informed us that it is the intention of the club to make their debut before the public at St, Hilaire the 20th of this month. One noticable feature was the natural ability displayed by the lady performers. Little Millie Stranahan only 8 years old is a wonder in herself and would do credit to a much more pretentious troup.

The legislatures that have not already adjourned will soon break up, with the usual record of a mass of useless laws, with only here and there anything of any value. Legislators are divided into honest men who mean well but have neither the knowledge nor experiance to legislate wisely, and the rogues who propose to promote measures for the express purpose of being bought off. More than half the time of every legislature is taken up with "sand-bagging" bills, proposed and pushed by the rogues. These bills are either suppressed in the committee rooms, or passed out of revenge in cases where the attacked parties prefer to suffer injury and loss rather than be bled by boodlers. Northwestern Agriculturist.

The village of Union Springs N, Y., is about to try a novel experiment in the way of temperance reform. A number of prominent citizens including the village president and several clergymen propose to take under their own control the sale of intoxicating liquors. Their object, they declare is to supply the reasonable wants of temperate persons for alchoholic stimulents. No treating is to be allowed and neither drunkenness nor an approach to it is to be permitted. A committee will pass upon the names of persons to whom liquor may be sold, while to persons to whom the proper authorities have altogether forbidden the sale of liquor, none whatever will be sold. Minors are not to be in the saloon under any circumstances. Spirits will not be sold in larger quantities than a glass except on a physicians order, and all sales of this class will be carefully recorded. The profits of the venture which are expected to be large will be applied to the reduction of town taxes. The outcome of this curious scheme will be awaited with interest,—N. Y, Press.

Though not generally known there are thousands of acres of valuable timber land in northern Minnesota which were made available by the liberal provisions of the timber act recently extended to Minnesota and hundreds of people are now availing themselves of its liberal provisions. The manner of obtaining title under this new law is in many respects preferable to homesteading and it will enable parties to obtain possession of a considerable amount of land in this and the St. Cloud district which is worthless for agricultural purpose but valuable for the timber thereon.

To enter these lands it is necessary to first make a sworn statement that the land is timbered and unfit for cultivation. A notice of the claim is then published for sixty days and at the expiration of that time proof is made by the claimant and two witnesses corroborating the original statement of the entryman and he then pays $2.50 per acre for the land the original statement must be made before the land office but the evidence can be taken before any officer with an official seal. The expense connected with the entry consists of a fee of $10 paid when first statement is made, the cost of publishing the notice $8, the cost of taking the testimony at 22½ cents per folio and the price of the land. Each person is entitled to 160 acres under this act, and it is not necessary that the different subdivisions should join. Husband and wife can each take a claim providing the wife under the laws of the state in which she resides is entitled to hold land as a feminine soul, but she is required to make affidavit that the land is entered with her own money, and that her husband has no interest in the same —McIntosh Times.

Potemkin, the confidential adviser of Catherine the Great, was an idle and inattentive student at the University of Moscow. He was the son of a poor noble. An unexpected event changed the idle student into a man of thought and action. He lost an eye, and after the accident became dangerously ill. After this he devoted himself to study and to the affairs of the nation.

He had the virtue of never cherishing revenge. "Do you remember how you expelled me from the university?" he asked in the most affectionate manner on meeting a professor who had particularly insisted on his exclusion.

"You deserved it at that time, your excellency," replied the professor.

"So I did, so I did," agreed Potemkin heartily, and the professor enjoyed the favor and friendship of his former troublesome pupil during his lifetime.

He had a quick wit and a lively and original turn of mind. During an oration on Platon, remarkable for its depth and strength of thought, the preacher, to the astonishment of the listeners, descended from the steps leading to the altar, and approaching the tomb of Peter the Great, exclaimed:

"Awake, O thou great monarch and father of our country! Rise and behold thy beloved people!"

Potemkin, amid the tears of the crowd, drew a smile from those about him by saying quietly: "How foolish to wake him! If he should get up, we should all be in for it!"—Youth's Companion.

Her Plan.

She was from Boston, a sweet, simple thing, lovely to look upon and almost good enough to eat, but she knew nothing of the ways and means of life. But she thought she did, oh, yes, and had an idea in her head that what she didn't know wasn't worth knowing at all.

So that one day in her Detroit boarding house when the weather threatened a spring freshet she went to the landlord and said:

"I have some trunks in the basement. Do you think the water will get into them?"

"Dunno," answered the landlord, who had his money in advance; "it's 'bout a foot deep now outside and rising."

"Dear, dear, how perfectly dreadful! I have a wardrobe in those trunks that's value at $10,000."

"Sho', now," answered the heartless man. "Why ain't you a wearing of it?"

"Something must be done and done at once. Are there windows to this subterranean storeroom?"

"There are, mum, several."

"Then I have a plan. Go at once and have bars put across the windows."

"Yes'm. Might I ask what for?"

"To keep the water out."—Exchange.

IT MADE HIM GLAD.

The Great Surprise of a Drummer Who Stood by His Hand.

Down on the east coast at a cozy little hostelry whose halls are filled up with fishing poles and corners with guns, and which has every other characteristic of being a sportman's club, they play poker very peculiarly. The other night an exceedingly exciting game was going on. The players were mostly old gentlemen who opened a jackpot on a pair of jacks and stood a limit raise with all the reckless abandon of young bloods with millions.

The limit, by the way, was a red chip, and the ante was a white chip. They didn't pay any money for them until the game was over—it was a gentleman's game—but for ever red chip purchased the banker made a memorandum of $10 and likewise a memorandum of $1 for a white chip.

A tenderfoot drummer had just arrived at the hotel that night, and he strolled into the green room and looked on at the game for some time.

"What a picnic!" said he to a neighboring spectator.

"Perhaps some of you gentlemen would like to come in—make it interesting. The more the merrier," suggested one of the players, an old gentleman bronzed and fringed after the style of the lone fisherman.

"Why, yes," said the fat drummer from the east, "if the other gentlemen do not object."

They made way for him, and he took a seat, drew out his pocketbook, and drawing out a crisp $100 bill asked for $50 in chips.

"Oh, that's all right," said the banker. "Haven't got any change. Pay up after the game. Here's your chips."

A few hands passed without any remarkable sensation. Then came a jackpot. It was the drummer's deal. He looked at his cards and found two aces and a pair of threes. The next man to him passed, and the next man opened it for a big red chip.

"It's opened; $10," said he.

Everybody staid. The drummer raised it a red chip. The opener saw it a red and raised it ditto. The drummer staid.

"Gosh!" said he to himself, "but they have got nerve."

The opener drew two cards, the others three and the drummer one. He "squeezed," and, lo! there was an ace full.

"What a picnic!" he remarked again as he assumed a bobtail flush smile.

The opening man bet a red check. The drummer had a red check and a white check in front of him. He saw the red check and raised it five. The opening man—the lone fisherman—saw the five and raised it 10. All the others dropped out.

"But," said the drummer, "I'll have to show down for the outside."

"Oh, no; not having anything in front makes no difference. Buy some more and bet."

The drummer was delighted. His ace full was invincible. He bought 50 more.

"I raise you $10," said he.

"Ten better."

"And ten better than you."

"Ten better."

"Ten more."

"Well, I'll call it," said the old man with the fisherman's whiskers. "I've got two pair, sixes up and sixes down."

The cold perspiration poured out on the drummer's brow.

"Great Scott! and I've an ace full," said he with a voice almost suffocated with woe.

He had changed his mind about having a picnic and was contemplating how he could pay his poker debt, his board bill and get to the next station on a $100 bill and $3 besides.

"Well, that's enough for me," and he handed over his $100 bill to the banker with a "That's what I owe you."

"Oh, no," said the banker, "we cash up for 1 per cent," and a great throb of gladness suffused the entire anatomy of the fat drummer from the effete east, while the other players caught on and laughed a tremendous roar. Of course the drummer staid in the game.—Florida Times-Union.

HOW HE EARNED IT.

Every Venus He Met Wanted a Tapeline.

"When I came last Monday," said the sad faced man to the widow whom he had rescued from the barbed wire fence at Baker's beach, "you gave me $3."

"I'm sure you deserved it," replied the widow, "and—and you have my gratitude."

"You said you liked my appearance fairly well"—

"Yes—after you had got fixed up in poor husband's clothing I did."

"But I wear poor husband's clothing no longer. These garments are my own. You said, as we talked of our past individual experiences, that if I could demonstrate the business ability of which I spoke you might take me as a partner in your little home."

"Yes, but I—I would—I wouldn't want to seem harsh or unkind if you haven't been fully able to succeed. Perhaps you tried."

"You said you own this little place and an improved ranch in Oakland."

"And so I do—a ranch that two might live on comfortably."

"And you said you need a companion who is able to manage a ranch and collect a rent from this place."

"Yes, I think so yet. If I knew a man that would be good and kind, perhaps I could get along myself with the finances."

"I believe I am qualified. You gave me $3 on Monday."

"So I did."

"On Tuesday I had doubled it and made $3 more. I doubled that whole amount on Wednesday."

"Can it be possible that you have gambled?" cried the widow with a first indication of despair.

"Thoughtless woman! Could a man win twice in one week?"

The meaning of the widow's sigh might have been a problem for the sad faced man if he not noticed that response, but just then he was busy with the account of his earnings.

"On Thursday morning," as the statement continued, "I had $20 less $2.50 that I had paid out for living expenses. It was the most money I had owned in eight years; it was the first start I could get."

"Go on," exclaimed the widow expectantly, and yet fearing to hear of final losses.

"I made $16 over and above expenses on Thursday and lived at a hotel. I tell you it seemed good to be myself once more."

"Poor man!" The widow almost wept in sympathy.

"That was $41.50. The next evening, Friday, I counted up $63.65. Saturday morning I bought this suit at a bargain for $15.50. Your former husband's apparel I stowed in a secret place where I used to sleep, as I chanced to be near there soon afterward, but I will bring them back tomorrow."

"Don't mind about that," said the widow.

"Saturday was the best day of all. I made a clear gain of $31.30. I kept a little change for ordinary use, and the rest I put in bank until Monday. There's the book with $70 to my credit."

"All that from the money I paid you?" asked the astonished widow.

"Every dollar of it," quietly the sad faced man affirmed.

"Then you have proved all you said, and I am sure—but first tell me how you earned so much."

"I've been peddling tapelines. With every tapeline I gave complete directions how measurements should be taken by those who wanted to compete in the Venus contest. I've run out of tapelines now, but I have ordered 500 gross of them to be made right away."—San Francisco Examiner.

His Wonder.

Very many stories are told of the 40-hoss talking power of Senator Blackburn of Kentucky, and most of them have some foundation in fact, for the senator's best friends will admit, when cornered, that Joe Blackburn is a talker from Talkville. However, it is interesting talk, and therefore he is excusable. Coming east in a C. & O. sleeper not long ago the senator made the acquaintance of a bright small boy, which later led to an acquaintance with the youngster's father and mother. The senator was sitting with them chatting along in his best style, and the boy frequently interrupted him. Finally the mother put her hand on her son's shoulder.

"Little boys," she said reprovingly, "are to be seen, not heard."

That quieted him for a time, but later the mother had to tell him the same thing again. He quieted down for a half hour longer, and at the first break in the senator's talk he looked up at him inquiringly.

"What is it?" asked the senator.

"I was wondering," replied the kid, "if you was ever a little boy like me, how you outgrowed it so."

The senator looked at the mother, the mother looked at the senator, they both looked at the father, and then everybody laughed and the kid was given a chance.—Detroit Free Press.

His Quest.

"Oh, Algernon," she exclaimed, with a true blue enthusiasm of a Boston girl, "don't you think the greatest joy in life is the pursuit of the good, the true and the beautiful?"

"Well, rather," returned Algernon. "That's why I'm here tonight."—Quips.

A "Pants" Poet.

I have traveled o'er the nation
  In the light of proud acclaim;
I have dined on popularity
  And lunched on fleeting fame,
But yet I've found no memory
  That in my mind supplants
The bright starred hour of youthful time
  When first I put on pants.

The world is very kind to me;
  My friends are everywhere;
Some wealth of earthly toil I've won;
  I'm free from any care.
Yet in my calm, mature content
  My joy I can enhance
As I recall that golden time—
  The day I first wore pants.

My happiness it knew no end
  Upon that sunny time;
The joy of others, rich indeed,
  Had not a place with mine.
No cloud could then my cheer dispel,
  No doubt my bliss despond;
The world was very bright to me
  When first those pants I donned.

Come back, come back, oh, memory,
  Lend your aid to me once more,
Tarry yet a little longer,
  As I view those days of yore.
Turn your moistening eyes toward the past,
  Let me steal again a glance
At the day I never wish to lose,
  The day I first wore pants.

Gentlemen:—I desire to make a brief statement for the benefit of the suffering. I had been afflicted with catarrh of the head, throat and nose, and perhaps the bladder for fully twenty-five years. Having tried other remedies without success, I was led by an advertisement in the Sentinel-Democrat to try Hall's Catarrh Cure. She tripped into our store the other day;
Her dainty hands with packages were laden,
And as she shyly, sweetly glanced my way
I thought I ne'er had seen so fair a maiden.

I spoke and asked what I could do for her;
She gave a scream that would have waked a mummy,
Then coolly said, "I beg your pardon, sir;
You startled me—I thought you were a dummy!"

THE FATE OF MA-TI-WA-NA

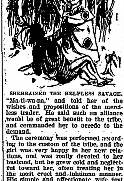
Among the Indian tribes, particularly those more intelligent nations whose hunting-grounds bordered the Upper Missouri, are to be found many beautiful legends and true stories as full of romance as the most enlightened countries have furnished. The literature of the "frontier" has only in very rare instances preserved the best of these, for obvious reasons. The old trappers who lived with the despised savages were either deficient in literary ability, too busy with their traps and guns to give that attention to the subject which its merit deserved, or lacked the inclination to write.

The Omahas were never, in the memory of the oldest French voyageurs, a large tribe. Their village was situated on Omaha creek, not far removed from where it debauched into the Upper Missouri. Its principal chief, whose name I have forgotten, had an only daughter, Ma-ti-wa-na. The old man fairly worshiped her, for it is an egregious error to charge the Indian with a want of that affection which so strongly characterizes the white race. I could relate instances that have come under my own observation which negative such a belief.

When the really handsome Ma-ti-wa-na arrived at the age of seventeen, she was eagerly sought for by the bravest young warriors of the nation, but unwilling to become a wife at that early period, all offers were rejected, and as her father refused to force her against her inclinations, she was left to decide for herself. That fall, however, her remarkable beauty attracted one of those unprincipled white men with which the world is filled. It was at the agency store on noon that he saw her for the first time. He was an American trader, a native of St. Louis, and marked the guileless Indian maiden for his prey. Instituting inquiries, however, he discovered that she was the favorite daughter of the chief, and his plans must necessarily be somewhat modified. He inveigled himself into the good graces of her father. He visited his lodge frequently, but never without bearing some valuable present in the eyes of the savages. Whisky was the principal medium by which he so influenced the father of Ma-ti-wa-na that the whole nature of the poor Indian became degraded, and the wily white man soon possessed almost complete control of him, had the freedom of his lodge at all hours to the exclusion of all other principal warriors of the tribe.

To marry "Ma-ti-wa-na" he resolved, though he then had a wife in the East who was bewailing his absence in widowhood of soul." So, after making up his mind to this scheme, he went to her father, preferred his suit, assuring him of his love for his daughter and his determination of living with the tribe, becoming one of its members, and would purchase all of the furs the Indians had for sale. He made him believe, also, that, because of his being of the white race, he would use his influence with the "Great Father" at Washington in favor of the Omahas, which would make them the most wealthy tribe of all the Indian nations.

The old chief flattered by the presentations of the suitor for his child, expressed himself satisfied with the proposed match, and to that end sent for "Ma-ti-wa-na," and told her of the wishes and propositions of the merciless trader. He said such an alliance would be of great benefit to the tribe, and commanded her to accede to the demand.



SHEBRAINED THE HELPLESS SAVAGE.

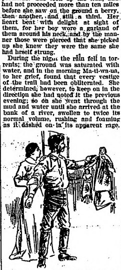
The ceremony was performed according to the custom of the tribe, and the girl was very happy in her new relations, and was really devoted to her husband, but he grew cold and neglectful toward her, often treating her in the most cruel and inhuman manner. His simple and affectionate wife first became an object of indifference, then of absolute dislike still she loved him in a manner that was nearly allied to idolatry. Neither his coldness nor his cruelty would quench the pure flame of her heart or tempt her to retaliation.

Twice every year he visited St. Louis to dispose of his furs, and on his return from his first trip after his marriage, found that his gentle Indian bride had presented him with a beautiful daughter. She soon became the mother of a second child, a boy, but almost immediately after its birth, the father started on his accustomed visit to St. Louis with the season's accumulation of pelts and furs, and obtained the consent of Ma-ti-wa-na to take their little daughter with him, but the mother's grief at parting with her first child was heartrending in the extreme.

As soon as the time for her husband's return had expired Ma-ti-wa-na began to pine for the absent ones and became fond of lonely wanderings. The trader, meanwhile, having disposed of his merchandise in St. Louis, went to the village in which he had left his legitimate wife. She was dead! He pretended to mourn for her some weeks, then married a romantic young girl, who was fascinated with the thought of going to live among the savages. Before he started from St. Louis with his bride, he sent word to one of his agents at the trading post on the Missouri, that he must at once send "Ma-ti-wa-na" back to her tribe, which was camped about seventy miles distant.

When Ma-ti-wa-na was told that her husband was coming, bringing with him a white wife, and that it was his orders that she must go back to her father, her grief was excessive, and she refused to leave the trading post. Force was called into requisition, and she was compelled to return to the village of the Omahas. In her father's lodge she remained but one night, early in the morning setting out for the trading post with her infant boy strapped on her back. On the second day of her journey, almost exhausted with cold and hunger, she lay down by the side of a little creek and quenched her thirst; but having nothing to eat, soon fell asleep. On awakening, after some hours of sound slumber, she discovered that a new sorrow, like a vampire, had had commenced to drink her blood, for her child had disappeared and was nowhere to be seen. She thought he might have crawled a little distance, but she examined every bush and every blade of grass for hundreds of yards round with all the intuitive skill of the savage, but without finding a sign. Her worst fears were shortly realized, for she saw, after going nearer the margin of the stream, fresh moccasin tracks, indicating the recent presence of Indians. Satisfied that some straggling savage had stolen her boy while she slept for a few moments, woman-like, she abandoned herself to paroxysms of grief; then forming a heroic resolution, she bound up her long hair, laced her moccasins tighter, and arming herself with a stout club, which she cut from a young hickory, set out, determined to find her missing child. On a closer examination of the two moccasin tracks, she was able to divine that either a squaw or a youth was one of the party by the difference in the size of the impressions. She took up the trail, and had not proceeded more than ten miles before she saw on the ground a berry, then another, and still a third. Her heart beat with delight at sight of them, for her boy wore a garland of them around his neck, and by the manner those were pierced that she picked up she knew they were the same she had herself strung.

During the night the rain fell in torrents; the ground was saturated with water, and in the morning Ma-ti-wa-na, to her grief, found that every vestige of the trail had been obliterated. She determined, however, to keep on in the direction she had noted it the previous evening; so on she went through the mud and water until she arrived at the bank of a river, swollen to twice its normal volume, rushing and foaming as it dashed on in its apparent rage.



"AT THE SOUND OF HIS VOICE .... HASTENED TOWARDS HIM."

She stood in amazement, seemingly dazed for a moment, then cautiously looked around to find a canoe that might have been concealed in the vicinity by some lonely trapper or marauding band of Indians; but nothing of the kind could be discovered. In despair she sat down on the ground, wet, hungry, tired and heartbroken. The sun presently came out in all its glory, while poor Ma-ti-wa-na, as she crouched, "like Niobe, all tears," her eyes were attracted by some characters carved on a birch tree a short distance from where she sat. In an instant she was standing in front of the strange marks, trying to decipher their import. She knew well they had been placed there as a guide to some other Indians who were to follow the same trail. She studied the mysterious symbols with more than a pilgrim's love when he stands before some temple or shrine, the work of ages past, and attempts to read upon its decaying base the mystic scroll, but conveying no thought, no idea, the meaning so suggestive hidden from his mental vision and wrapped in oblivion.

In vain she continued her search for some boat to convey her across the torrent-swollen stream; nothing could she find. She noticed, however, a large dead limb of a tree that had floated down the river and lodged against the bank. With the aid of her knife she succeeded in divesting it of its smaller branches, and then stripping from her person the little clothing she had on and wrapping it in a small bundle, fearlessly plunged into the water, supported by the dead limb she had launched. Ma-ti-wa-na was an expert swimmer, for it is the custom to early learn the art by all the tribes, and this useful accomplishment now served her in her necessity.

Just before sundown she saw the party only a quarter of a mile ahead of her, crossing a small prairie. There were two figures—a man and a boy—and, to her infinite joy, she discovered upon the boy's back a bundle, which her heart told her was her child. She knew, too, that it was living, for Indians never pack a dead body any distance unless killed in battle. She knew that the party would camp for the night, and, redoubling her precautions, she followed them warily until she saw them halt and commence to gather wood for an encampment. Then Ma-ti-wa-na hid herself in a dense thicket of sumac to wait until sleep had overcome the party before she dared to venture out to regain her boy. She silently watched the Great Bear in its course around the pole, and knew when midnight came by the position of its "Pointers." At the moment she cautiously advanced to where the warrior and youth lay unconscious of danger, buried in deep slumber. The child was closely hugging the side of the youth; the mother noiselessly and tremblingly moved toward them. When she reached the spot and was just in the act of lifting her boy, a dry stick broke under her foot, and in an instant both the warrior and youth were wide awake. Without the slightest hesitation the knife Ma-ti-wa-na held in her hand felt its way to the heart of the young Indian, for she knew that all was at stake, at the same moment the weight of the powerful warrior bore her to the ground. Her strength was as nothing compared to that of her adversary, but by a dexterous movement she succeeded in cutting his ham strings, which made it impossible for him to pursue her, as she eluded his grasp; but when the warrior discovered himself disabled and could not run after her, he threw with all the force at his command the hatchet he held in his hand after Ma-ti-wa-na's retreating form, which fortunately, she avoided by a timely dodge, picked it up and brained the helpless savage, just as she was about to seize his bow and arrows.

It was almost a week after she commenced to retrace her steps through the prairies and deep forests of the unbroken wilderness, before she arrived at the door of her husband's lodge at the agency. She entered, and before her stood a young white woman; in a moment the conviction flashed through her mind that this woman was her rival; she looked upon her with the minutest attention, tracing every lineament and watching every motion. The young wife was alarmed and offended, but in another instant, before she could speak, the trader, who had seen Ma-ti-wa-na, called her to him in order to prevent any misunderstanding or explanation between the two women. At the sound of his voice she hastened toward him, and would have thrown her arms around his neck, but he coldly repulsed her. He told her that he had taken another wife, and that all further relations between them ended forever; that she must return to her tribe, where she could marry a warrior, but that he would take the boy and send him to the settlements. The crushed and humiliated Ma-ti-wa-na looked upon him with a gaze of mild and melancholy reproach, then turned and walked away.

For several days she remained concealed in the vicinity, then, with saddened steps, went to her father's lodge, where she pined and grew weak. One day late in the fall some of the women of the tribe found her lying by the bank of her favorite stream; they tried to wake her—she was dead. She had died of a broken heart.

A CLASSICAL WORD.

Mr. Jones Interviews the Dictionary With Profit.

"Maria," asked Mr. Jones, "what is a palladium?"

"Good gracious, Jeptha, how do you suppose I know? It sounds like some kind of gruel."

"Well, it isn't, and you ought to know. Didn't you go to district school thirty days, while I only went a week? What's the use of education in the family, if you can't tell what a palladium is, that's what!"

"Where did you hear the word use, Jeptha?"

"At the meeting of the Orators' Club last night. The lecturer said—oh, I tell you it was fine—he said that 'trial by jury, fellow citizens, is the palladium of our civil rights.'"

"Why didn't you ask some one what it meant?" asked Mrs. Jones, after meditating in silence a moment.

"Did. I asked a lot of fellows, and one of them said he thought it meant something to drink."

"Just what I said," remarked Mrs. Jones.

"Taint so. It wouldn't make sense. I'm going to find out if it takes a month. I may want to fire that word in the council meeting. It would knock them all silly."

"Look in the dictionary, Jeptha."

"What's the use," answered Mr Jones, gloomily, "there ain't any words like that in a common every-day dictionary."

But he looked all the same, and when Mrs. Jones saw him again he was more inflated than ever.

"Did you find pal—pal, whatever it is? Was it in the dictionary?"

"It certainly was, and is there yet," retorted Mr. Jones, loftily.

"What did it mean, Jeptha?"

"H'm! it's a Latin and Greek word, m' dear, taken from the bust of Pallas, a goddess of ancient Rome or thereabouts, and it's old Roman for preservation, liberty and state's rights."

"You don't say so!" answered Mrs. Jones, and she went about all the morning with her mouth ajar.

But she forgot all about it before evening, when her memory was revived by hearing Mr. Jones telling some callers how pleased he had been the evening before by a classical allusion to "that old Roman, Palladium, who went on a bust.—From the Detroit Free Press.

DIAMOND DIGGING.

The Life Is a Hard One and Results Uncertain.

I have just spent a few days among the river diamond diggers near Hebron, on the Vaal, says a writer. The work there is carried on by individual diggers, each man leasing his claim and working it himself with the aid of a few native laborers. They are a motley crowd, these diggers, and representatives of almost every nationality. It is a hard and precarious existence. Diamonds are few and far between, but, when found, nevertheless they are generally of first-class quality and realize high prices.

The diggers are mostly men of very small means. Their tools and washing gear are about all they have, and they consequently live very poorly. Meal of rough quality is often the only food that passes their lips from one month's end to another. This they usually get on credit from some storekeeper, who furnishes them with the bare necessities of life on the off chance of their finds. Most of the diggers of course, have a find some time or other, though there are strange instances of ill luck following the quest for diamonds year after year.

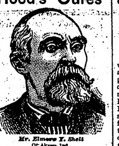
I had a conversation with one old man who had been at this sort of work for nineteen years, and I am afraid to say how long it is since he has had a turn of luck. He has lived nearly all this time on meal, and there he was toiling away at about the hardest work man can undertake, yet seemed willing to go on to the end. This labor, however, though heavy, has a wonderful fascination for those who once take to it. A very fine stone had been found a few days before my arrival. It was valued at between $3,500 and $4,000. Toward the end of last month two brothers had a marvelous run of luck. They found stones to the value of $20,000 in a very short space of time.—Jewelers' Circular.

WAS A PET FOR A CENTURY.

A Louisiana Alligator Which Had Been Known to One Family Since 1773.

In the bayou flowing through the large sugar plantation of Gabriel Montaigne, lying seven or eight miles south of Thibodeaux, La., there was recently killed an alligator known to be something over 120 years old. In 1773 Mr. Montaigne's father's grandfather, immigrating to this country from France, purchased this tract of land from its original Spanish owner, and in an attempt to clear the bayou of the ferocious and aggressive alligators which filled it to the number of thousands succeeded in killing many of them, and among them the mother of several young ones, three of which he killed also, but the fourth got away, leaving five or six inches of his tail behind him, however. This one was afterward seen from time to time and always recognized by this missing portion of his anatomy. He grew to be something of a pet with succeeding generations, who, however, thought it safest to keep him at a distance despite his friendly advances; but it was a favorite task with the younger Montaignes of the family to go out after each meal with tidbits for Old Shorty, as he was called because of his deformity. This age of 120 years is not unparalleled with these animals, many being said to attain the age of 200, though this is difficult of proving, except in such cases where the creature is marked in some such way as Old Shorty was.

Hood's Cures



Mr. Elmore Y. Shelt Of Akron, Ind.

Cancer on the Face

Entirely Removed by Three Bottles of Hood's

"I wish to make this statement for the benefit of people that may be suffering with that dreaded disease, cancer. For five years I have had one coming on my face. I tried having it burned out and several other remedies, but all of no avail until I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. While taking the first bottle I could see a marked change and the third bottle almost or entirely removed the cancer. I can't say too much for Hood's Sarsaparilla. For years I had to be careful about my diet but now I can eat anything and digest it all right, sleep well at night and in fact feel like a new man." ELMORE Y. SHELT, Akron, Ind.

Turned the Tables, Though Drunk.

Queer and racy are the tales told of the skill of the Maine shipbuilders in the use of the adze and the broadax. One old-time yarn is of the carpenter who applied, very drunk, at a shipyard for employment. In order to have a little fun with him the foreman set him to give a proof of his skill by hewing out a wooden bolt with no chopping block but a stone. The carpenter accomplished his difficult task without marring the keen edge of the broadax, and showed the foreman a neatly made bolt. Then he brought the axe down with a terrible blow that shattered its edge upon the stone. "I can hew fust-rate on your chopping block," he hiccoughed, "but I'll be d—d if I can make the ax stick in it when I git through." The story runs that the foreman lost no time in employing such a workman.—New York Sun.

THE IMITABLE ENGLISHMAN.

Much of His Life Is Devoted to Tipping Servants.

A rich Bostonian, who has been spending almost unlimited leisure in travel on two hemispheres, says that he notices a wholesale tendency to reduction and system in tips. People travel so much more than they used to do, and are served by so many more employes, that some sort of a regulation is necessary. On the continent, where waiters pay for their places, though the landlords make a separate charge for their service, the tip is regulated, and all but Americans know it, the local tariff being 1 sou to the franc—1 cent in 20 cents. Nobody grumbles at this.

The Englishman on his own island pays 6d for everything to everybody, and is insulted if he doesn't. As he has to fee waiters, porters, clerks, chambermaids, guides, vergers, policemen, dukes, barkeepers and casual citizens, it is no wonder that he has settled into a confirmed grumbler and can't stop grumbling all the time he is away from home.

But in this country it has been getting worse than anywhere in Europe. Half a dollar is no unusual tip to a man who serves you with a sloppy dinner in a place where you are paying $4 a day for board, and where the waiters receive fair wages, besides their food and lodging; "but," says the Bostonian, "dimes are general currency for tips now."

"In one Southern hotel a negro waiter came to me at my very first meal, and said: 'I only gets $20 a month, boss. People generally allow me $1 a week.' I gave him nothing. At another hotel down there the waiters change tables at every meal, so as to break up this 'striking' business.

"It's odd, especially in Europe, how ready the waiters become in guessing at your nationality and likings. An Englishman, who never wants to adapt himself to any country, but expects all other countries to adapt themselves to him, is greeted in every French restaurant now with 'Bifstek an' palal,' which is waiter English for beefsteak and pale ale."—New York Recorder.

PECULIAR CIRCUMSTANCES

ATTEND THE DEATH OF A MINNESOTA LUNATIC.

An Incident at the Fergus Falls Asylum Which May Create Comment—Death Not Due to Bad Treatment, However.

In a "Restraining Sheet."

Fergus Falls, Minn., Special, April 10—Adolph Anderson of Clarissa, Todd county, a patient of the Fergus Falls state hospital for the insane, died last night while attendants were placing him in a restraining sheet. Anderson, who was a married man about forty-five years of age, was committed in February. He has been very violent for the past two weeks and had to be kept in a restraining sheet a large portion of the time. Last night the attendants were putting him into the sheet when he expired in their hands. Supt. Welch at once notified Coroner Duncan and requested that he hold an inquest and post mortem examination so that the public would be fully satisfied as to the cause of his death. A post mortem was made to-day by Doctors McLean and Cole and a clot of blood found in his heart, which caused his death. The inquest will be held tomorrow.

A Life Sentence.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Special, April 10.—Ed Wilson was to-day convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to imprisonment for life. The jury stood for twenty-four hours ten to two for hanging, but were finally induced to agree to the smaller penalty. The crime was a particularly atrocious one. Last fall Wilson, a farm hand of Flandreau, discovering that his friend, Otto Solquist, had collected about $60 in wages, induced him to take a walk outside the town in the evening, and as soon as they reached a lonely spot set upon him with a monkey-wrench and battered his brains out. He then rifled the body, and having stripped it of clothing, dragged it to a ravine and concealed it in the tall grass. He then returned to town, and, stating that Solquist had left town in search of work, collected some little money due the former, and ran away. Wilson was soon apprehended, and human blood was plentifully sprinkled on his clothes. Wilson maintained the greatest indifference all through his confinement and trial, and when the sentence was pronounced on him, simply laughed. He had previously enjoyed a high reputation in the community, and the murder and conviction have produced a profound sensation.

Sequin Would Irrigate.

Matamoras, Mex., April 10.—Santiago Sequin, a wealthy citizen of Camargo, Mex., has an extensive scheme on foot to irrigate the valley of the Rio Grande river, between this city and Camargo, a distance of 150 miles. Some time ago Mr. Sequin applied to the Mexican government for a concession to irrigate all the San Juan river which flows by Camargo and empties into the Rio Grande. Government engineers were sent down and their reports were very favorable to Mr. Sequin's plan, which they found perfectly feasible. A stock company has been lately organized in the City of Mexico with sufficient capital to carry on the enterprise. The land behind Camargo rises rapidly; the main aqueduct, 24 feet wide and 6 feet deep, will tap the stream about eight kilometers above the city, which will give sufficient head of water to irrigate for the present as far down as San Miguel. If the project is a success it will open over 1,000,000 acres of the richest land in Mexico.

Fruits of Jealousy.

Bangor, Mich., April 10—Andy Campbell, a well known farmer, shot his divorced wife and then himself yesterday, both dying instantly. A day or two ago Mrs. Campbell hired a man to work on her farm. Either jealousy or for some other reason her former husband made strong objections to this arrangement, and yesterday he called upon her. A hot discussion followed. Campbell's temper became uncontrollable, and almost without warning he whipped a revolver from his pocket and shot the woman twice, once in the forehead and once in the neck. He then placed the still smoking revolver to his own forehead, fired and fell dead.

BINDING TO THE PEACE.

Meaningless Phrase Which Has Quieted Many a Tenement House Row.

"People who have never lived in a tenement house have very little idea of what life there is," said Ex-Police Justice James T. Kilberth to a New York Times man the other afternoon, as he tilted back in his chair in the office he has opened since leaving the bench, after nineteen years of service. "And the people who've spent all their days in one have less idea still, for they don't know of any other kind of existence. Life in those dens must be a continual round of excitement, but the people don't seem to mind it as a rule. Sometimes it gets too hot for them, though, and then it's a race to see who'll get to the police court and make a complaint first. Sometimes the aggrieved person arrives first and sometimes the one who's really to blame. Generally both complainant and defendant are women, and nearly always there's a horde of witnesses, for everybody in the house takes one side or the other, and, of course, comes to court. In such cases both sides are generally more or less to blame, and what they all need is a little restraining influence. Indeed, it isn't often that one wants to see the other any more than 'squelched,' so to speak. I had an almost invariable method of dealing with such cases—when I saw there was nothing serious in them, of course. After hearing the story with evident attention and solemnity I would say to the defendant, 'You are bound to keep the peace for six months,' and the complainant would go home perfectly satisfied. I didn't know what binding to the peace was any more than they did—that is to say, it had no real meaning—but its effect was almost magical. No matter how abusive either side may have been—even in the court room those mysterious words silenced everybody, and it was rarely that I ever heard of any more trouble from those people. Not infrequently I had to pronounce the same terrible sentence on both complainant and defendant to insure lasting quiet, and somtimes I've put the whole crowd, witnesses and all, under the same ban. That was when excitement ran high and it seemed advisable to bind the whole houseful to the peace for a while."

THE MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE

Again Looking After the Alum and Ammonia Baking Powders.

(St. Paul Pioneer Press.)

A bill for an act in relation to the manufacture and sale of baking powders, to prevent fraud and preserve the public health has been introduced in the legislature at St. Paul. The bill is intended to prevent the adulteration of baking powders with alum or ammonia, imposing proper penalties to enforce the law, etc.

This shows an earnest desire on the part of our state representatives to protect their constituents.

The Chicago Tribune, referring to the question of legislation on alum and ammonia baking powders, says. "It deals in a direct manner with an evil that must be cut down."

Dr. Charles W. Drew, chemist for the Minnesota state dairy and food commission, in his elaborate report of 1892, gives a list of one hundred and seventy-three different brands of alum baking powders alone—sold in Minnesota.

Following is a list of the more widely known brands that Dr. Drew, as well as other chemists of high standing, have examined and found to contain alum, and some of which contain both alum and ammonia. Many of the alum and ammonia powders are labeled and advertised as "absolutely pure" to mislead the public.

"Calumet," "Forest City," "Grant's Bon Bon," "Hotel," "Globe," "Puritan," "Snow Ball," "Government," "Palace," "Loyal," "Columbia," "Home," "Monarch," "Unrivaled," "Chicago Yeast," "Echo," "Zipp's Crystal," "Perfection," "White Rose," "Hatchet," "Crown."

In addition to above list, there is a multitude of brands sold with a prize. It is safe to reject all baking powders sold with a prize as the tests show they are composed largely of alum and cost but a few cents a pound. Also refuse any baking powder sold for twenty-five cents a pound, or less; it is sure to contain alum.

Surely nothing but their cheapness could induce the public to experiment with these impure powders at the risk of health. Aside from the question of the health or wholesomeness of the condemned powders, and viewed from this standpoint of economy alone, a pure cream of tartar baking powder like Dr. Price's from its greater known strength and unquestioned purity will prove more economical to the user in every way.

Childish Simplicity.

When Rauch, the German sculptor, was a child, he was conscientious to an amusing degree. One rainy day, when walking with his father, he took pains to step exactly in his elder's footprints, and as his legs were but short, and he was obliged to spring from one to another, his father's stockings were soon splashed with mud.

"What nonsense is this, youngster?" called Herr Rauch.

"Father," was the grave reply, "the teacher says children must walk in the footsteps of their elders!"

The boy by no means intended a joke; the act was a literal fulfilment of a duty.

Another true incident illustrates his simple and lovely belief in all things beautiful. Every spring an old linen weaver came to the house, set up his loom there and made cloth for the family use. He slept in the same room with the boy, who found him an interesting companion, and had no hesitation in telling him all his thoughts.

As the story of the death of Jesus was read in school at that time, the lad became so absorbed in it that he thought the scenes of the crucifixion to be actually taking place at Jerusalem. He believed in the resurrection, and thinking that it must spread a glory over the whole earth, waited anxiously for Easter morning.

"It is going on now," he called out suddenly, raising himself in bed.

"What is going on?" asked the weaver, waking also.

"The resurrection of the Lord!"

Then the gentle old weaver taught him how to modify his belief, and the child was content, though disappointed.

Let us be thankful, for we have had three days of spring this week, nice warm weather too, just as if winter was over. We are suffering for it today, however, as a genuine blizzard is on that would do credit to the month, of January,

It will take at least two weeks of favorable weather to prepare the ground for seeding which would bring it to April 26th but we are not getting very much of that kind of weather this year so we may look for seeding to commence about May 1st.

It will be almost impossible for a considerable number of farmers in this section of the county to get their seed wheat this spring. Many were depending upon getting aid from the county and were badly disappointed when the commissioners decided not to make the loans,

The Dramatic Association are practising every evening now and will produce "Ten Nights in a Bar-room" in the Norwegian Lutheran Church on Thursday evening April 20th. The entertainment is for the benefit of the school library and should be liberally patronized by all.

The claim that the Red Lake pine has been estimated too low by the appraisers will probably result in keeping the pine out of the market a few years longer, For some reason the work has been delayed as much as possible and it looks as if the lumbermen would keep it back until they are ready for it to come on the market.

The legislature will adjourn April 18th for the simple reason that the law compels them to do so. But little has been done that will benefit the tax payers of the state, We will get a new state capitol that will cost two millions to start with, that we don't need. Taxes will be higher for the people but this Republican legislature has not passed a law that raises the taxes or checks the monopoly of any railroad in the state. The reason is apparent, the railroad lobbyists had the largest boodle.

An English authority says that potatoes should not be planted from the same seed two years in succession on the same ground for the reason that they seem to greatly deteriorate, while seed from a different locality will produce a good yield. This is worth looking into, for a very slight deterioration would amount to more than the seed and hence a man had better go to the expense of buying every year rather than plant his own if it costs nothing. —Ex.

A new and interesting feature in legislative appropriations is that provision which appropriates $25,000 to the northern counties to partially reimburse them for the loss of taxes on the tax exempt railroad lands. The sum appropriated is about ten per cent of the taxes due on the lands but will be accepted by the counties as better than nothing. It will help build a few much needed school houses in the exempt domain. It is a queer principle, however, which compels the state to pay railroad taxes—Minneapolis Tribune.

The Grand Forks Plaindealer, of Saturday: Ex. Lt. Gov. H. E. Ives, of St. Hilaire Minn., was in the city and recorded at the Dacotah on Friday" We would suggest to our corpulent contemporary that when he strikes a big town like Grand Forks and hires the clerk to put his name on the register he should be more explicit in stating his title as we can't tell from the above clipping whether he is ex-lieutenant governor of the state of Minnesota or the outlaying hamlet of St. Hilaire; but, no doubt, he meant the latter.—Crookston Tribune.

As the "shades of of night were falling fast" the other evening, a reporter spied Levi Stranahan armed to the teeth with an old army musket and Ed Giste likewise equipped with Carl Johnson's goose gun. They were starting for the west and we learned that they were going to see their best girls. They gave as an excuse for their hostile appearance that they were afraid of wolves but we learn from reliable authority that it was not wolves but a couple of young men who were intent upon calling on the aforesaid best girls, that caused the warlike preparations. Up to the hour of going to press no blood had been shed but every evening the whole town awaits with abated breath the report of the first gun which will tell that the war is on.

When Capt. A. C. Rhinehart was down from the woods the other day a Times reporter applied the pump and extracted from him some interesting information regarding the pine land in and about the Red Lake reservation. Mr. Rhinehart is one of the government examiners and there is no one better posted than he regarding its extent and quality,

Upon the question being asked as to how much pine there was standing and how long it would be likely to last, he answered that if we had ten such mills as the one here and at Grand Forks, it would take us thirty years to saw it up, and he also stated that nearly, if not all of this timber was directly tributary to Crookston and other towns along the Red Lake River, as it is all situated on, or tributary to the Clearwater and Red Lake rivers into which it would be driven from the Black Duck and Battle rivers both of them being good driving streams. East of the reservation he says there is a great deal of pine on government land, part of which is already opened for settlement and part surveyed. The towns which are opened for settlement a couple of weeks ago have all more or less pine on them.—Crookston Times.

The greater part of the wheat of last year is now in the hands of the speculator, or at least the capitalist, which is about the same thing, and they are now trying hard to keep the price up, but so great is the surplus that this is a very hard task. But every report of damage in any quarter is seized upon as a reason for forcing the price up a notch, and this is done for a day even if it goes back the next. Last week the grain in western Kansas was reported almost a failure on account of drouth and the price rallied two cents above the big drop it made after the corner at Chicago had failed. But unless there is more general damage to the winter wheat than in western Kansas the price will remain as low as ever, There is too much wheat.—Crookston Times.

Elsewhere some mention is made of the reforms which Major Baldwin, who is the new member of congress from the Duluth district, expects to work and the dire vengeance he is to mete out to the "pine land ring," as he is pleased to call it, I find in the Globe the following dispatch under date of April 5th which indicates that Major Baldwin has entered upon his career of getting even with some people he fancies opposed his election to congress: "Major Baldwin today called at the interior department and had a long talk with Secretary Smith regarding the timber depredations on the Indian reservations in his district as well as the charges that have been made against the appraisers on the Red Lake reservation. While the secretary will not for some time be able to take up the matter and make a thorough investigation, he declared that he would do so, and if one tenth part of the charges that have been made are true, the Red Lake appraisal will be ordered made again. Among the charges on file in this matter the most serious is to the effect that Otis Staples the chief appraiser made the statement that the Red Lake timber is only worth $1 50 per thousand, while the law provides that it cannot be sold at less than $3 per thousand feet. 'What have you to do with that?' asked one of the men who was assisting him in making the appraisal, 'We have got to make the estimate low enough to make the cost of stumpage a dollar and a half' is the reply it is charged Mr, Staples made, Naturally enough, opposition to any investigation has already developed, but its source is so well known that it will have no effect." —Lumberman.

"To gain a wife,"
Cried Jacob Jupp,

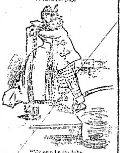
Or save the pup."



"My own brave Jake,
You've saved my pup,
So then I'll take
When it grows up."

"Oh, love divine!
I'll live a fog,

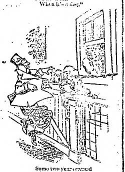
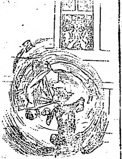
When it's a dog."



Some two years caused
Young Jupp to wait,
And then he passed
At Mabel's gate.



But ere they tast-

A Great Risk.

Cobble—I've just been invited around to young Mrs. Carte Blanche's to luncheon She has a new set of china that she wants me to see.

Stone—You are not going to wear that necktie, are you?

Cobble—Why; wouldn't you?

Stone—No, old fellow. I wouldn't run any risks. You know that china is very delicate.—Club.

Power of Influence.

Traveling in England I was one day walking along a country road gathering wild flowers from the lonely hedgerows. Presently I was overtaken by a burly old farmer, who, with his pretty daughter and two large barrels of beer, was being drawn up a steep hill in a market cart by a stout little pony.

The farmer saluted me jovially, and seeing that I was pushing up the hill to catch the coach he offered me a seat on his trap.

"Thank you," said I, "but it seems to me the pony has rather a tough job as it is."

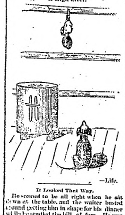
"Aye, yes, yes!" he said. "I should 'a' got down myself, but we be so heavy behind! But you're welcome to ride if you like."

"I am really very much obliged to you for your politeness in asking me," I returned, "but I prefer to walk."

The first part of my sentence evidently "went to the spot."

"Well, ye see, sir," said he, "I be used to meet a many gents up about these hills, and that's how I larnt to be so polite!"—Youth's Companion.

"A High Liver."



—Life.

It Looked That Way.

He seemed to be all right when he sat down at the table, and the waiter busied around getting him in shape for his dinner while he studied the bill of fare. He was rather unsteady possibly, but as he had not eaten anything for 18 hours that was not surprising.

"Well, sir, what will you have?" asked the waiter.

"Tock murtle soup and coiled bodfish," he replied, holding up the bill.

The waiter was disturbed.

"What, sir?" he asked.

"Tock murtle soup and coiled bodfish," he repeated, and the waiter snickered and went out.

He came back in a few minutes with the order, and the guest took up the bill again.

"Bring me," he said slowly, "some meg of lutton with saper cauce, some bibs of reaf and hoiled bam, pashed motatoes, pried farsnips, prench feas, bima leans, and, waiter, wind her up with some pince mie, pago sudding, ruts and naisins and a cof of cupfie."

This time the waiter was almost thrown off his feet, and he stared at his customer in amazement.

The guest returned the stare in hazy consciousness and shook his head slowly.

"Don't seem to sound right, does it?" he asked. "I'm sure something's wrong with it, but it looks that way on the bill, and I've got to eat it or starve," and the waiter turned away hesitatingly and moved off to the kitchen.—Detroit Free Press.

One or the Other.

Up in the hills of western Massachusetts, where the "higher education" and the "higher criticism" alike have not yet penetrated, there lived in a small town an eccentric old man named Hawkins. Brother Hawkins was a regular attendant at church "meetin," and his voice was often heard in prayer and exhortation. On one occasion the congregation met under the shadow of a general bereavement. A prominent man in the church had been suddenly transported from the scene of his earthly labors to the better land. A hush was upon the meeting as Brother Hawkins arose and said, "An now, my brethren an sisters, let us remember in our pra'rs the family of our dear Brother D——, who is now in Belz'bub's bosom"——.

"Brother Hawkins," interrupted the deacon, "ye didn't mean Belz'bub, did ye—ain't ye made a slip?"

"Belz'bub, waal, lemme see," said the old man slowly, "Belz'bub, waal, if 'tain't Belz'bub 'twar one o' them ole patr'archs!"—New York Tribune.

His Trouble.

Old Gentleman—What's the matter?

Little Boy (crying)—Papa gave me a penny to buy a school pencil, and now—boo, hoo, hoo!

Old Gentleman—Well, here's another one. How did you happen to lose it?

Small Boy—I—I didn't lose it. I—I spent it for candy and—and lost the candy.—Good News.

Her Scheme.

"Do play something, please, Miss Pianothump," said the hostess, advancing to her music loving guest; "it's getting pretty late, but not half the guests are gone yet." —Chicago News-Record.

His Need.

"You must have perseverance," said the young physician's friend. "No," was the reply, "what I want is patients."—Washington Star.

Illustrations.

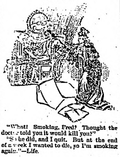
A Relapse.



"What! Smoking, Fred? Thought the doctor told you it would kill you?"

"So he did, and I quit. But at the end of a week I wanted to die, so I'm smoking again."—Life.

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application: it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original sample as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well! that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original, which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

"I'M A DAISY."

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Serious Danger

Threatens every man, woman or child living in a region of country where fever and ague is prevalent, since the germs of malarial disease are inhaled from the air and are swallowed from the water of such a region. Medicinal safeguard is absolutely necessary to nullify this danger. As a means of fortifying and acclimating the system so as to be able to resist the malarial poison, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is incomparably the best and the most popular.

Peculiar Social Order and Rights of the Beaver Family.

Among the beavers it is undoubted that courts were held and judicial functions exercised and the sentences carried out with the most exact discipline. This is proved by the fact that near to every beaver settlement there exists a class of what are called "bachelor beavers." This is composed of two sections, old males who have lost their mates and were held to be no longer of true use to the community, and younger "bachelors" who had been expelled from the settlement for misconduct, idleness and laziness, more generally theft, and by a jury awarded a sentence of perpetual exclusion, a kind of penal servitude, which all the community of beavers were bound to join in order to see thoroughly carried out. These "bachelors" live alone, not in warm houses protected by dams, as in the community, but in holes in the banks of the rivers—prison cells, in fact—where they just manage to live, and where they can, at a pinch, succeed in storing sufficient winter food. Sometimes their privations must be great, but there is no escape for them. If they endeavor to build a proper beaver house—at all events, within ken of any of their old associates—it is reported and it becomes the bounden duty of the members of the community to turn out and destroy what has been done. Penal servitude among the beavers really existed, as it does among us. The beaver thief is compelled to work hard in isolation from his family, and yet cannot secure the most primary personal comforts—cannot exercise himself in that craft of construction in which alone he can find true pleasure. He must atone to society for his fault, just as our convicted prisoners do. Any one who has seen the beavers at the Zoological gardens ceaselessly comforting themselves and passing their time in constructing houses that they do not need, will realize what a punishment a jury of beavers mete out to one of their kind who is idle or lazy, or has been guilty of theft, or violated any of the essential laws of the beaver community, when they make him a "bachelor" beaver and will not let him erect a house near to them.—Cassell's.

By Senator Canestorp—A joint resolution asking congress for an appropriation to improve the navigation of the Red river from Big Stone lake to the northern boundary of the state. Referred to Senators Canestorp and March.

By Senator Crandall—A joint resolution declaring the annual appropriation of $4,000 to the state agricultural society for 1893 available for the payment of premiums already incurred. Passed under suspension of rules.

Senator Donnelly offered the following resolution, which was passed:

Whereas, The ancient republic of Switzerland has for years past avoided many of the evils of misgovernment by providing for a system entitled "The Initiative and Referendum," whereby the people in their primal capacity as voters have the right to initiate and present bills to the legislature for needed legislation, and to have submitted to them for their approval or rejection in the manner of our constitutional amendments all important measures which pass the legislature:

And, whereas, There is a demand from a large part of our population for the adoption of a similar system in this state; therefore be it

Resolved, That the attorney general of this state is respectfully requested to prepare and present to the next legislature a report setting forth the history of the principle of "the initiative and the referendum" and its workings in Switzerland; and how far it could be made applicable to existing conditions in this state, and what effect, in his judgment, such a change would make in legislation in this state toward lessening corporate interference in the same, and preventing extravagance and corruption.

Senator O'Brien's bill, authorizing county commissioners to appropriate money for the maintenance of hospitals, passed unanimously.

The car-sealing bill, introduced by the senate special committee on grain investigation, passed without a dissenting voice.

Senator Stevens' bill taxing townships to aid in the construction of roads for the passage of logs in the pineries was passed.

Wednesday Apr. 5.

Senate.

The special committee on judicial redistricting reported a bill to detach Clay and Becker counties from the Fourteenth and attach them to the seventh judicial district, and it was passed under suspension of the rules.

The house bill to prevent the sale of adulterated cigarettes and tobacco was passed by a vote of 42 to 0.

The Morse elevator inspector bill was on the calendar and created a hot fight, which resulted in its overwhelming defeat. It was attacked upon all kinds of grounds for its impracticability, and it was charged boldly by Senator Keller that there was nothing but a patent right at the bottom of it or a job for some particular man. The bill secured but 14 votes to 27 in the negative.

Senator Tawney's bills amending the probate code and relating to the issue of bonds by cities in certain cases were passed.

House.

The house went into committee of the whole and acted on the following bills:

On Mr. Christie's motion S. F. 467, relating to religious corporations, was taken up and recommended to pass. This was also done with S. F. 466, relating to trustees of educational corporations.

H. F. 569, providing for the building of a G. A. R. monument at Lakewood cemetery, Minneapolis, was recommended to pass on Mr. Pray's motion.

H. F. 655, Mr. George Willson's bill, relating to corporations, was recommended for indefinite postponement.

S. F. 451, relating to suits against receivers, was recommended to pass.

The committee then arose and the report of the committee was accepted by the house.

THURSDAY, APRIL 6.

Senate.

Senator Grafe introduced a bill to fix the enrolling fee at 8 cents and the engrossing fee at 6 cents, and to prevent the payment of any of this kind of compensation to the per diem employes. This was also passed. Miss E. C. Hatch was appointed assistant clerk of the enrolling committee.

When H. F. 305, relating to the appointment of stock detectives by governors of other states, was reported, Senator McHale moved a suspension of the rules, but Senators J. D. Smith and Donnelly objected to hasty action, and the bill was allowed to lie over. The following bills were acted on:

H. F. 839, relating to distraining beasts from doing damage, passed. H. F. 874, relating to the punishment of persons convicted under the "combine" law, house amendment concurred in and the bill repassed. H. F. 795, repealing a special act relative to the supervisors of the town of Hartland, in Freeborn county; passed. S. F. 485, amending the park act of Minneapolis; passed. H. F. 582, legalizing certain conveyances; passed. H. F. 293, relating to the organization of trust companies in cities of less than 125,000 inhabitants; passed.

H. F. 168, providing for the erection of a monument at Chicamauga. This is the bill over which there was a contest between the house and senate over the appointment of Maj. Hotchkiss as one of the commissioners or the substitution of W. H. Spaulding. The matter was compromised by the selection of both gentlemen, and the bill repassed as amended.

House.

A large number of committee reports of bills were read, and, with one exception, adopted. The exception was Senator Davis' bill, S. F. 322, abolishing the Third regiment, M. N. G., and the brigade formation. The house committee on military affairs reported the bill for indefinite postponement, and after considerable discussion it was placed on general orders.

Mr. Langum moved that the house vote of non-concurrence in the senate amendment to H. F. No. 168, the Chicamauga monument bill, be reconsidered. The motion carried, the amendment was concurred in and after Mr. Langum's amendment inserting the names of Maj. Hotchkiss and W. H. Spaulding in the board of commissioners was adopted, the bill passed without a dissenting vote.

On Mr. Anderson's motion the house concurred in the senate amendments to H. F. No. 666, a bill to enforce the payment of taxes becoming delinquent between 1879 and 1889. The bill then passed unanimously.

On Mr. F. M. Wilson's motion the house concurred in the senate amendments to H. F. No. 48, a bill relating to the issuance of bonds by municipalities for the construction of bridges, sewers and city hospitals. The bill then passed.

FRIDAY, APRIL 7.

The Brown elevator bill will have another chance for life. It was voted down yesterday by a vote of 24 to 25. This morning Senator Dean moved a reconsideration, which was carried by a vote of 29 to 9. Senator McHale introduced a bill amending the probate code in so far as it relates to an executor's bondsman, giving the latter permission to terminate his relation at any time by citation. H. F. No. 431, defining the ownership of stock certificates, was passed. H. F. 635, relating to commitments to the reformatory, was passed.

H. F. 551, allowing school bonds to be issued to run thirty years instead of fifteen, as at present, was passed.

H. F. No. 58, proposing a tax of one-fifth of a mill for the state university, was taken up, but no action was taken.

The capitol bill was, after a long discussion, passed by the following vote:

Noes—Borchert, Brown, Canestorp, Craig, Crandall, Craven, Donnelly, Glader, Grafe, Guderian, Hompe, Leavitt, Lommen, March, Morse, Peterson, J. W., Phillips, Probstfield, Sevatson, Streissguth—20.

House.

When the house came to order this morning there was, as usual, about half an hour spent in advancing bills on general orders and introducing a few unimportant resolutions. Mr. Cotton presided, and had hard work to keep order.

S. F. No. 416, a bill to repeal a special law relating to Sibley county, was taken up and passed.

H. F. 359, relating to the forestry fund tax, was also passed.

Mr. Lockwood introduced H. F. 897, a bill to authorize county commissioners to lease a part of their poor farm to agricultural societies.

Mr. Holman introduced H. F. 898, a bill to legalize the proceedings of town boards in certain cases. It was placed on general orders.

The senate amendment to H. F. 191, relating to railroads, was concurred in and the bill passed.

The Chicamauga monument bill bobbed up again on another senate amendment, adding the names of J. W. Bishop, Thomas Beatty and others to the board of commissioners, in which the house gracefully concurred and repassed the bill.

H. F. No. 607, Mr. Staples' bill amending the law relating to organization of school districts, came from the senate with amendments which were concurred in and the bill passed.

H. F. No. 401, Mr. Maguire's bill allowing independent buyers to erect elevators on the right of way of railroads, and providing for condemnation proceedings, came back from the senate with amendments, which were concurred in on Mr. Jacobson's motion. The bill then passed—72 to 0.

S. F. No. 556, a bill to detach Clay and Becker counties from the Fourteenth judicial district and attach the same to the Seventh, was passed under suspension of the rules.

The Gas Went Out.

Chicago, Special—Last night the gas went out without warning all over Ravenswood, a suburban village of Chicago. A few moments later it was turned on and the town was threatened with asphyxiation. An alarm committee was hastily organized by F. W. Bassett and Charles Truax, who started out on bicycles to warn the sleeping inhabitants. They succeeded well, but Mrs. Agness and a servant employed by H. H. Anderson, two of the many persons affected in houses where lights had been left burning all night, are in a serious condition and may not recover.

One of Jefferson's Speeches.

Washington Special—The committee on rules of the senate to-day decided to report favorably the resolution authorizing photographic copies to be made of the more important executive documents for exhibition at the world's fair. These documents consist of the nominations of justices of the supreme court, leading members of the various cabinets, etc. One of the most interesting will be the copy of the original notes of the speech delivered by Jefferson when he was inducted into the office of president of the senate.

A Building Collapses.

Chicago Special—Another big building in the world's fair district collapsed with surprising suddenness this afternoon. It is what is known as the Panorma building, just outside the exposition grounds at the corner of Fifty-seventh street and Stony Island avenue. The building was erected up to the roof, and the fifty workmen engaged in its construction had just knocked off for lunch when a sudden gust of wind caused the complete collapse of the structure, leaving only a tangled mass of beams and planks on its site.

A GHOST OF ATHENS.

Some of the Wonderful Tales Told by Pliny.

"Pliny tells a wonderful tale which was related at a dinner. There was at Athens a haunted house—no tenant could be found; at last, a certain philosopher, seeing the real estate agent's notice and struck with the cheapness of the rent, makes application for the house; and, undismayed by the weird stories, takes it. He sits alone in a room in his new abode; the night wears on, and at last he hears a clanking noise; he goes on with his study; at length he looks up and sees the ghost of an aged man, long of beard and squalid in appearance, his hands and feet wearing chains. The spectre beckons to him; the philosopher rises and follows his awful visitor to the yard of the mansion, where the shade suddenly disappears. The next day the tenant notifies the authorities; the yard is dug up, and the bones of an old man are found; and after they have been decently interred, the house is haunted no more." We quote from a realistic sketch of ancient social life in Rome, in the New Peterson, by Prof. A. F. Montague. He continues:

"Throughout Pliny's letters we have pictures of cozy home life, of country scenes, touches of sarcasm directed toward the dandies and exquisites of the day, pleasant entertainments, statements of shrewd 'deals' in real estate, evidences of friendship beautified by self-sacrifice—all bringing before us with charming style and ready wit the daily occupations and amusements of an ancient civilization, and the hopes, aspirations and inner lives of those who formed an important part of the great Roman empire when at the zenith of its glory.

Suburban Lighting.

An excellent suggestion has been made to meet the convenience of dwellers in parts remote from cities, where the securing of a supply of electricity is attended with more or less difficulty. It is proposed that owners of country houses should combine and have their electricity generated and distributed from a central station. At some fixed place, preferably the railway station, an electric station under skilled management should distribute the power at high pressure. The station might also serve as a telephone exchange. Where for an ordinary householder the cost of current would be prohibitive the high-pressure central station system might so reduce the cost as to make an electric supply available. A steam or fuel gas engine would drive two alternators at low pressure; the current would be transformed up to suitable pressure according to distance. Each householder would be supplied with transformer and meter in the same way as in towns, and a joint stock company might be made to run the station with limitations as to maximum prices.

Cured of a Distressing Stomach Difficulty.

RUSHVILLE, NEB., June. 5

Some time ago after suffering severely with stomach trouble and dyspepsia, which had been greatly aggravated by the alkali water of the western country, and when I had reached that stage where I could frequently hold nothing on my stomach, and would even throw up water as soon as drank, I learned from a Sioux Indian, who had been on a visit to the Kickapoo tribe, of a wonderful remedy called "Sagwa." I got him to procure some for me. The effect was remarkable. I tried to get more from the Indian, but he would not let me have more of his. He prized it so much he would not give it up. I then learned that Healy & Bigelow, of New Haven, Conn., had an arrangement with the Kickapoo tribe, and was putting their remedies on the market. I sent and got a bottle of the Kickapoo Indian Sagwa, and found it to be the same as that I had procured from the Sioux Indian. I got more, and after the use of a few bottles, I was not only relieved but entirely cured, and have stayed cured ever since.

I can eat anything set before me. Salt bacon, which used to have a most distressing effect, I can now eat and relish like an Indian.

I cannot speak too highly of the Kickapoo remedies, and cheerfully recommend them to anyone.

The Manufacture of Glass Eyes.

In Thuringia, Germany, there is a whole district which is dependent for its support on the manufacture of artificial eyes, husbands, wives and children all working together at this means of livelihood. And yet though these simple German people turn out their produce by the dozen, no two eyes are ever the same. No artificial eye has its exact fellow either in color or in size in the whole world. This method of the manufacture is not a very complicated art. They are firstly glass plates, which are blown by gas jets, then molded by hand into the form of an oval shaped cup. The coloring of the eyes is effected by means of tracing with fine needles, the tints being left to the taste of the individual worker, though the scope of their taste is necessarily limited to grays and blues and browns and blacks, which colors are assorted together before being eventually dispatched to their various destinations.—London Hospital.

ASKED TO PROSECUTE.

COAL COMBINE COMMITTEE MAKE THEIR REPORTS.

The Facts Developed by the Investigation Are set Forth—A Strong Arraignment of the Wholesale Coal Dealers.

Mr. Walsh, of the coal combine investigating committee, presented the following report in the house:

To the Senate and House of Representatives: Your joint committee, appointed pursuant to the concurrent resolution adopted by the senate and house of representatives on the 20th day of January, A. D. 1893, to inquire into the present unusually and unnaturally high price of coal and as to whether an unlawful combination exists for the purpose of controlling the same, and to report such remedial legislation as, in its opinion, would be for the best interests of the public, respectfully submits the following report:

Your committee met, pursuant to the resolution appointing it, on the 10th day of February, A. D. 1893, at the capitol, and organized by electing Hon. Ignatius Donnelly chairman of the joint committee and it has held numerous sittings and hearings from time to time up to this date. The testimony taken was reported in full and is herewith submitted.

It was gathered from all branches of the coal business, as far as was in the power of your committee (with the limited means at its disposal), and includes transportation, jobbing, wholesaling and retailing; and presents the evidence of representative men in all departments of said business, and of a large number of those who are directly concerned in the combination that your committee find does exist and which gave rise to this inquiry. It shows the following state of facts, viz.:

The Facts in the Case.

Practically the entire supply of anthracite coal consumed in this state comes to us via what is known as the lake route, that is, it is forwarded by rail from the mines in Pennsylvania to either Buffalo or Cleveland and thence by water to the city of Duluth in this state, or West Superior, in the State of Wisconsin, at which points the coal is stored in large quantities in the spring and early summer months for sale and distribution during the subsequent fall and winter.

The following named corporations have docks and so store and deal in coal at wholesale at these points, and also have yards for wholesaling and retailing at St. Paul and Minneapolis, and control the entire supply of anthracite coal marketed in this state, viz.:

The Northwestern Fuel company, the Pioneer Fuel company, the Ohio Coal company, the St. Paul & Western Coal company, the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron company, the Lehigh Valley Coal company and the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad company.

All of these corporations claim to be only agents for the Eastern owners of the anthracite coal, and to be compensated for their services by a percentage of the money received on the sales they make; but your committee believe that this is a mere scheme or subterfuge resorted to by these corporations, acting in collusion with the mine owners in the East, to meet and avoid, if possible, certain phases of this question, or possibly to avert payment of personal tax upon the commodity while it remains in their hands with the state; the fact remains, however, and it is indisputable, that they exercise all the rights of an owner over it, and your committee are of the opinion, after carefully considering the matter, that they do in fact own it after it is consigned and delivered to them, notwithstanding their claim to the contrary. Your committee are satisfied that the managing agents of all of the companies named meet yearly, with others like interested, in New York city in a sort of common convention, from which point the decrees of the great national coal combine are issued. These facts were freely conceded by the principal managers of these companies to your committee.

Starting from this home, or seat, of the great owners of coal properties, the serpentine coils of this colossal and hydra-headed combination embrace the entire coal-consuming portion of these United States, and the black cloud of disaster and extortion spreads over the entire country by the vast ramifications of this conspiracy, bringing distress to every manufacturing industry and every fireside in our land, and is indeed one of the gravest dangers that now threaten the institutions of our country.

Prior to the year 1887, as far as your committee have been able to learn, no effectual combination existed between the shippers or wholesalers in this Northwestern country and the trade was fairly divided between them and none controlled an excessive share of the business; but each year since said last named date, the companies that then did business in this section and the few that have since come into this territory have combined, not only to fix the price at which anthracite coal should be sold within this state at wholesale, but at retail as well, and to more effectually prevent competition have limited and arbitrarily fixed the amount of coal that should be brought to the head of the lakes; and so thoroughly and completely has this work been accomplished that on the last days of March and April of each year there scarcely remains a ton of coal upon the docks at Duluth of the amount brought there during the past season.

The uniform price at wholesale for anthracite coal (and our inquiry has been almost entirely confined to this quality) during the past season has been $6.10 per ton on board the cars at Duluth and West Superior. This price is fixed by common agreement; the local wholesalers before named insist that it is thus determined and fixed by the owners of the property in the East; but your committee doubts this, but be this as it may, in any event it is much too high; and from the evidence at hand we have concluded that the price for this coal on board the cars at Duluth or West Superior should never exceed $5 per ton; especially in view of the fact that the cost of transportation from Buffalo or Cleveland to West Superior or Duluth, by way of the lakes, averaged less than 30 cents per ton during the past season, thus demonstrating that there should be very little difference between the price in Buffalo and that in Duluth.

Where Responsibility Rests.

The Northwestern Fuel company, the largest and strongest of our local corporations, is, in the opinion of your committee, in a large measure responsible for bringing about the combination that now exists, and so perfect and close has this Northwestern branch of this great interstate conspiracy become, that there would be no substantial difficulty in the way of its advancing the price of coal to any point short of the limit to which the consumer might go before being forced to substitute other kinds of fuel. The baleful results of the combination among the shippers or wholesalers is felt among the retailers, and works fully as great a hardship on them as it does upon the people, as all the wholesalers have retail offices, either in Duluth or West Superior and in St. Paul and Minneapolis, and have evinced a disposition, which they do not attempt to conceal, to deal directly with the consumer and therefore entirely eliminate the retailer, or middleman, and save to themselves the small profits that now go to maintain the retailers in their business, and the unfortunate and helpless retailer being conscious of this disposition on the part of the lordly autocrats who control the supply of the commodity in which he deals, is therefore easily coerced into the most humiliating submissions to the outrageous schemes of the wholesaler at whose mercy, not only he is, but the people as well.

The retail price of coal in the three large cities of the state, and their suburban districts, is determined monthly at a conference held between the managers of the shippers or wholesalers held at the city of St. Paul at the office of the Minnesota Bureau of Coal statistics, a spring institution maintained by an arbitrary assessment of $25 on each retailer, and the remainder of the price of maintaining which, with its paraphernalia of detectives and bulldozers, is borne equally by the shippers or wholesalers. John J. Rhodes, who is now under arrest for perjury in connection with this investigation, is the manager of this bureau, and is paid a salary of $5,000 a year.

This present bureau of statistics appears to have been organized on the 1st of May, 1892, and is the successor of the Minnesota Anthracite Coal association, and the business of the so-called bureau is to take care that the prices agreed upon by the wholesalers at their monthly conferences are rigidly maintained by the retailers, and to see that a penalty is visited upon any retailer who is found to have departed from the schedule or fixed price, said penalty being to cut off his supply of coal until the offense is condoned or manager Rhodes issues his pardon.

As evidence of the mandatory character of the orders issued by Mr. Rhodes, we incorporate a letter addressed to the Lehigh Coal & Iron company, Minneapolis, on the 17th of October, 1892, as follows:

"Gentlemen: Sometime ago I ascertained that one L. W. Petran, [illegible] Third avenue north, your city, was getting coal of a certain company in Minneapolis, gave them notice that he was not a subscriber to this bureau and they shut him off. Within a few days I have been informed that he has been getting more of this coal from your firm. Will you please investigate the matter and get him to become a subscriber to this bureau or shut his supply of coal off. Yours respectfully,

John J. Rhodes.
"Manager."

The committee found that Mr. Petran promptly became a subscriber.

Retailers Not to Blame.

From the facts given you, you will observe that the retailer has no voice whatever in making the monthly schedule of prices in these cities, but is held to the strictest accountability for even the slightest departure therefrom. To illustrate, one Mr. John Norton, a respectable retailer located in the city of Minneapolis, made a proposal to furnish the library board, etc., in the city of Minneapolis with coal at $8.84 a ton, and the schedule price was $8.85, and he was awarded the contract, but the company or wholesaler from whom he had previously purchased his supply absolutely refused to furnish him with coal to fill the order, or, in fact, any coal whatsoever on the pretext that its supply was so limited that it could not safely do so, and Mr. Norton was obliged to procure his coal for his legitimate business, for the space of about a month through the agency of a third party, a friend of his, but was later reinstated by some action of the wholesalers at a monthly meeting, but only after he had made apologies and promises for better conduct in the future, etc., and he again obtained a supply of coal.

The Minnesota Anthracite Coal association, the predecessor of the present bureau of coal statistics, was an institution formed for the same purpose, but operated upon a different plan, viz.: to maintain and enforce a uniform price in coal to the consumer by a system of fines deducted from a guaranty fund for a departure, deposited with the chairman of the association.

Your committee have caused the arrest of said Rhodes for perjury and have also submitted the attorney general of the state portions of the testimony taken by it, with a view of further prosecutions both for perjury and conspiracy under the laws of our state.

You are aware of the successive steps taken by your committee, not only to secure evidence against these conspirators, but to retain the same after it had been secured. We believe that your committee have acted strictly in accordance with parliamentary usages as construed by the best writers on parliamentary law and practice, and if there were no precedent for the action of your committee, in view of all the circumstances the committee still believe that the time has come when a new mile stone along the path of progress should be established, and the entire people, not only of this community, but of the entire country, after a careful survey of the situation as it confronted your committee, has endorsed and commended our action. It would be a strange state of affairs if a committee appointed to investigate, who, being aware of the existence, and in fact were in view of the very evidence itself, could not seize it for the purpose of inspecting it.

You are cognizant of the numerous measures introduced from time to time by either the committee or its members, many of which have passed both houses and become law, measures which we believe will afford much relief to the people.

We take this opportunity of thanking you most cordially for the hearty manner in which you have sustained us in our every effort to rid our state of this most pernicious and outrageous combination, which has done so much to blight the industries of this state and to impoverish its people.

Your committee have had the matter of railroad tariffs on coal in this state under consideration, and would recommend that the attention of the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners be called to the present rates, which your committee believe are much too high, and we have been informed that they have not been revised for years. We trust a revision will be made and this measure of relief be granted the people.

Prosecutions Recommended.

From the facts aforesaid your committee conclude:

That the consolidation of the wholesalers controlling this supply of coal at the head of the great lakes, who would otherwise be competitors, naturally and obviously result in increased prices for coal in this state;

That said combination may at its pleasure, if it has not already done so, advance coal to an unreasonable and extortionate rate;

That ever since the combinations hereinbefore spoken of were formed, the price of coal has steadily advanced and threatens to still further advance;

That these advances have originated in the wholesale branch of the business and are not due to any natural fluctuation in the value of the commodity, but rather the result of the destruction of competition among the wholesalers and uniform rate exacted by the transportation companies who operate in harmony with the designs of these local coal barons;

That such combinations are contrary to sound public policy and are extremely dangerous to the interests of the state and the welfare of the people thereof, and has placed in the hands and within the power of a selfish, unpublic-spirited and cruel aggregation one of the absolute necessaries of life in this climate. It would be a very lamentable state of affairs if our courts cannot remedy this evil that is rapidly reducing our people to beggary and of blighting and bankrupting our infant industries;

That the question of fuel, in view of the attitude of those who control the supply thereof, is one that requires the best thoughts of our greatest thinkers, and a combination of the character herein shown to exist must be dealt with by those charged with the duty of enforcing the law with fearless and persistent energy and tireless activity;

That the effects of the formation of this combination has been most peculiarly unfortunate, as it has resulted in fixing an unconscionably and extortionately high price for fuel during the past season when the prevailing low price of wheat and the lack of employment among the poor in our large cities rendered its burdens doubly hard to bear.

Therefore, your committee report that the attention of the governor be directed to the evils the people are now suffering under from this and other like combinations, and respectfully urge that the power of the state be exerted to the utmost to the end that they may be relieved from the grave dangers that threaten them, and that if no adequate remedy can be had in our own courts, that these vicious and demoralizing combinations be prosecuted under the federal law in the courts of the United States. Respectfully submitted,

In consequence of a serious illness which prevented my attendance upon the meetings of the committee for more than a month, during which time its most important investigations were made, I am not able to subscribe to the foregoing report. I concur in the concluding paragraph directing the attention of the governor to the statements set forth in the report. Wm. B. Dean.

A Lost Embrace.

Here is the very latest trick among thieves to secure your property. A few evenings ago a gentleman stepped from a train at one of the London stations when a young lady skipped up to him, threw her arms rapturously about his neck, and kissed him many times, saying:

"Oh, papa, I'm so glad you have come!"

The old gentleman threw both arms around her and held her firmly to his breast. Soon she looked up into his face, and horror stood in her eye.

"Oh, my, you're not my papa!" she said, trying to free herself from his embrace.

"Yes, I am," insisted the old gentleman, holding her tightly; "you are my long-lost daughter, and I am going to keep you right in my arms till I get a policeman."

When the officer came he found the old gentleman's diamond pin in the girl's hand.

BLOODSHED IN BELGIUM.

FIERCE LABOR OUTBREAKS CONTINUE.

A Tumultuous Sunday is Witnessed in Brussels—The Mayor Assaulted and Badly Injured—Mons in Possession of a Mob.

A Sanguinary Sabbath.

Brussels, April 17.—This has been a day of extreme watchfulness and anxiety on the part of the authorities throughout Belgium. Reports from all points indicate that the strike is spreading rapidly and that the temper of the strikers is growing worse. In this city the morning passed without disturbance. Several suffrage meetings were held, but they were orderly and the speeches were not violent. This afternoon, however, thousands of workmen held a turbulent meeting on the road to the race course outside the city limits. The advertised object of the meeting was to denounce the proclamation of Mayor Buls prohibiting public demonstrations in favor of universal suffrage. Volders, the extreme socialist leader, who was arrested and released on April 13, made an incendiary speech, in which he applied the most obnoxious epithets to Mayor Buls. The crowd became uproarious, shouted for revenge upon the mayor, and encouraged Volders to still more intemperate language. The police ordered the crowd to disperse. The workingmen answered with jeers. The police drew their swords and advanced toward the platform. Some of the crowd fired revolvers and others threw stones, but the rest retreated without show of fight toward the city. Nobody was injured. Mayor Buls was walking home on the Avenue Louise about an hour later when some two hundred socialists returning from the meeting came down the street. They hooted and jostled him, but allowed him to pass. After he had left the mob about fifty paces behind three men ran out and one of them struck him a heavy blow with a stick on the head. As Buls turned he received another blow and was laid unconscious on the pavement.

A resident of the Avenue Louise, who had seen the first of the encounter and had run for the police, returned with help just as the mayor was struck down. The police charged the socialists, and after a fight of ten minutes dispersed them. Two of the crowd were arrested, but it has not been ascertained whether or not they are of the three who attacked Mayor Buls. A witness of the mobbing has informed the police that just before their arrival a workingman fired seven shots from a revolver at the prostrate mayor. M. Buls was still unconscious when taken to his home. He recovered consciousness toward evening, and probably will be able to resume his official duties within a few days. Meantime Alderman Andre will be acting mayor. King Leopold has twice inquired by special courier after his health. It is reported that Volders will be arrested for his part in the meeting which preceded the assault.

This evening turbulent crowds have fought the police in several districts of the city. In the Rue de la Bavier, near the Maison du Peuple, the mob became so threatening that mounted police charged them with drawn swords. The rioters threw jars of Greek fire and stones among the police. Many of the mob were cut and trampled upon. Twelve were arrested. Several policemen were burned and bruised. The city is as if in a state of siege. All places of amusement are deserted. The police and the rioters have the streets to themselves. A dispatch from Mons says that the strikers have had possession of many streets there since early in the afternoon. Reinforcements of soldiers have been sent from this city.

Ovation to Verdi.

Rome, April 17.—Verdi's "Falstaff" was heard by a good audience for the first time in the Constanzi theater last night. The house was crowded. King Humbert was present with Queen Margaret. At the end of the first act Verdi came out before the curtain in response to repeated calls. His appearance had a magical effect upon the audience. Every man and woman rose, cheering and waving hats and handkerchiefs. After the second act the king invited Verdi to the royal box. As Verdi entered the box the king took his hand and then led him forward into the full view of the audience. The scene that followed the first act was repeated. The composer acknowledged the cheers and cries of "Long live Verdi!" with bows and smiles, which evoked further demonstrations. After the performance most of the audience followed Verdi's carriage to his hotel and remained for some time cheering and shouting "Long live Verdi!" The municipal authorities have offered him the freedom of the city and have decided to name a street after him.

"Our Mary" in Reminiscent Mood

Louisville, Ky., April 17.—Mrs. Mary Anderson-Navarro has written to her friend, Mrs. R. M. Kelly of this city, asking for reminiscences of her first appearance on the stage in this city. She is anxious to get all the notices from the Louisville papers and copies of the old theater programmes of her early performances. Mrs. Navarro stated in her letter that she was spending her leisure in writing a book of her stage reminiscences. She has had many offers from English and American publishers for such a book, but she is unwilling to bind herself to any regular literary work. She is in no hurry, but is taking her time. Mrs. Navarro is spending the winter in the South of France, and expects to go to Switzerland for the summer.

To Pacify Ulster.

London, April 17.—A story has been current for two or three days that several members of the cabinet favor a plan by which a choice between government by a Dublin parliament and government by the British parliament shall be granted to Ulster. A provision to this effect having been approved by the Irish leaders would be inserted in the home rule bill. The Standard says of the plan: "The majority of the Ulster members would oppose it, because the Protestant minority elsewhere in Ireland would be left to the mercy of the Irish parliament."

Still Another Milwaukee Fire.

Milwaukee, April 17.—For the fifth time in two weeks the fire department was called to the Stadt theater, owned by Capt. Pabst, the brewer, early this morning. Heretofore there have been some strong proofs to show that the blazes were of incendiary origin, but the police claim there is no evidence that to-day's fire was the work of a "bug." The theater had a narrow escape from total destruction. Nevertheless there is a loss of $50,000; fully covered by insurance.

Armenians Liberated.

Constantinople, April 17.—David Thompson, United States minister to Turkey, will attend the trials of the Armenian prisoners in Angora. In consequence of his protests against the conduct of the Turkish authorities during the recent anti-Christian riots in Asiatic Turkey, many officials in Ceserea and Marsovan have been removed. Hundreds of Armenians have been released from prison in these two cities, although many are still confined in Erzerom.

Unpatriotic Clergymen.

London, April 17.—More than 200 Methodist ministers in Ireland have signed an appeal to the Methodist ministers in England that they oppose home rule both on religious and commercial grounds.

Prof. Hicks make the following predictions for the latter part of April:

A warm wave will prevail over all the country from the 13th to the 18th, and violent storms on and about the 15th, 16th and 17th, which may be prolonged. These are to be followed by reactionary storms about the 21st and 22nd, including destructive hailstorms. From the 25th to the 28th it will grow warm again, and many heavy storms of rain hail and thunder will travel from west to east across the continent, followed by cold and frost, and the month ending very cool. In many places tornadoes are almost certain to be a feature of the storms predicted,

Among Chicago's enterprising citizens who are getting a quiet little rake off on the side out of the popular interest in the world's fair is a firm of smooth people who are sending modest circulars to western and northwestern farmers asking them to forward a bushel of their best wheat with charges prepaid. They agree to sort each bushel taking out all defective grains and to put a sample of the grain in a glass case labeling it with the name of the farmer who raised it and where his farm is located. These philanthropists have bought thousands of glass bottles holding less than a pint; these they label just as they promised. They have already secured thousands of bushels of wheat which they are storing in and selling to elevators. The way the bushels of wheat, charges prepaid, are rolling in requires them to use a half dozen teams daily to haul the contributions. What is the next smooth scheme?—Journal,

"If I send him the particulars, how soon will he get the message?" Mr. Miller informed her and the message was written, The husband was doubtless startled when he read it, for without an explanation it simply said, "Dear Frank, Boorge Hotel, Sioux City, Unto us a child is born, eight feet long and two feet wide, Sarah."—Sioux Rapids (Ia.) In many instances on a single section the state was defrauded from one to three and four thousand dollars, and in others the timber was absolutely stolen and nothing was paid to the state.

This condition extends back to the days when McIlrath was state auditor, and has continued to the present day. The pine land gang managed always to reach the appraisers, and the scalers, and such returns were made as were satisfactory to the purchaser,

The headquarters of this gang has always been at Minneapolis, and many of its leading citizens of today have grown immensely wealthy by practices of this kind, The report claims that the school fund has been depleted millions of dollars and the worst feature is that the committee proves it, The whole land department is one mass of fraud and corruption, and the boast that our school fund was a "sacred heritage" "guarded and protected against peculation and theft," has shielded and protected the most damnable system of robbery that ever disgraced a civilized comunity.—Mankato Daily Review.

JONES' BIRTHDAY.

He Wouldn't Make a Fool of Himself, and Mrs. Jones Wept.

Mr. Jones has just had a birthday. It marked an epoch in his life and in that of Mrs. Jones, too, and neither of those excellent people will be likely to forget it very soon.

Mrs. Jones had been mysteriously busy embroidering something which she kept wrapped up in oiled silk. Then at times her eyes would fall on Jones with a sort of tape measure glance, as if taking dimensions and questioning whether something would fit. Smiles of satisfaction would also chase each other across her face as she gazed.

"I wonder what she's up to," mused Jones, "a four-in-hand for me to hang myself with, or another smoking jacket only fit to be buried in. I do hope Providence will avert any such calamity."

He changed his mind and took up another course of thought, when Mrs. Jones asked him which he would prefer could he have his choice, a gold headed cane or a rosewood revolving desk.

"Maria's been saving up her money," he said to himself. "I'm in luck this time."

The morning of his birthday came, and at breakfast Mr. Jones found his present in a small package at his plate. He unrolled it savagely and saw a blue satin ribbon with red letters and some clasps attached.

"You've always needed one, dear," said Mrs. Jones as she regarded it with admiring eyes.

"What is it?" growled Jones. "What's the name of the object?"

"It's a napkin holder, Jeptha. You put the band around your neck"—

"Not if I know it."

"And the silver holders"—

"They won't hold me!"

"Keep the crumbs from"—

"What are these letters?"

"They are French, dear"—

"Oh, the English language gave out, did it?"

"And wish you bon appetit."

"Bone what?"

"It means good appetite, you know"—

"No, I didn't know! And if you think I'm a pug to be rigged up in harness you're away off. That's what."

"But it's only to wear at meals," apologized Mrs. Jones.

"I'm out of the bib age, Mrs. Jones, for good and all."

"I think you're very unkind, Jeptha," protested Mrs. Jones. "It's a real shame!"

"I should say it was, Maria. Look at me," continued Mr. Jones savagely. "D'you suppose I'd sit here and eat with that bonnety thing around my neck? Not much! I can make a fool of myself in one language, but I ain't going to do it in two."

Mrs. Jones sobbed as she laid the relic away in the china closet, while Jones muttered feelingly:

"Another household idol smashed into smithereens!"—Detroit Free Press.

One day during the period when Henry Cabot Lodge—now Senator Lodge—was a member of the house, a countryman and his wife were watching the proceedings on the floor from the gallery, one of the features being a speech by Mr. L. The old fellow had his eye on Mr. Lodge in evident admiration, and at last he turned to the man next to him for information.

"Who is that down there in the aisle talking to the boy?" he asked.

"Congressman Lodge," was the reply.

"Where's he from?"

"Massachusetts—Boston."

"Boston, did you say?" queried the countryman.

"Yes, Boston."

The old chap turned to his wife, who had been listening.

"There, Mary," he exclaimed, "just see what beans and brains will do for a man that ain't half as big as a haystack."—Detroit Free Press.

Pope Leo as a Wit.

For his repartees and witty remarks the pope has long been renowned. What, for example, could be neater than his remark about the English house of lords, which he made to the Duke of Norfolk during the latter's recent visit to Rome? "At what age," he asked the duke, "can an English peer take his seat in parliament?" "At 21," was the reply. "It is evident, then," remarked the pope, "that English patricians acquire the necessary talents for legislation much sooner than those of ancient Rome, who were not admitted to the senate till the age of 40."

His readiness at repartee, however, was never more ably demonstrated than on a memorable occasion at Brussels several years ago while as Mgr. Pecci he was filling the post of nuncio at the Belgian capital. At a dinner party at which he was one of the guests a certain marquis had the brutality to point out to him upon the lid of a snuffbox a nude and indecent figure of Venus. Undisturbed by the smothered laughter of the marquis and his companions, the nuncio looked at it attentively a few moments and then handed it back with a polite bow and said very quietly: "Charming. A portrait of the marchioness, I take it for granted."

Still it is rather as a humorist pure and simple than as a master of sarcasm that his holiness has become noted throughout Italy, and that he can thoroughly enjoy a joke even at his own expense is made clear from the following story, which was on every one's lips in Rome some time ago: In a newspaper article descriptive of his daily life the fact was mentioned that he always dined alone. The pope's attention was drawn to the article, and after reading the paragraph he laid the paper down and remarked quizzically, "Yes, it is true that I dine alone, and yet I am always the thirteenth at table."—New York Herald.

Moving Time.

We'll crack the windows, mar the doors and ruin everything;
We'll tear the paper off the walls—it's pretty nearly spring;
We'll make the house present an awful picture of decay;
It's time to go to smashing things—we'll move
the first of May.

We'll dump the ashes in the hall; we'll clog the water pipes;
We'll paint the ceilings and the walls in wild fantastic stripes;
We'll break the knobs and latches all; the house
we'll disarray,
For that is how the people do who move the first of May.

The place we leave behind us will be awful to behold;
An air of wreck and ruin will the premises infold.
No other can awaken such a depth of dark dismay, Except it be the house to which we'll move the first of May.

—Detroit Free Press.

Power of Influence.

Traveling in England I was one day walking along a country road gathering wild flowers from the lonely hedgerows. Presently I was overtaken by a burly old farmer, who, with his pretty daughter and two large barrels of beer, was being drawn up a steep hill in a market cart by a stout little pony.

The farmer saluted me jovially, and seeing that I was puffing up the hill to catch the coach he offered me a seat on his trap.

"Thank you," said I, "but it seems to me the pony has rather a tough job as it is."

"Aye, yes, yes!" he said. "I should 'a' got down myself, but we be so heavy behind! But you're welcome to ride if you like."

"I am really very much obliged to you for your politeness in asking me," I returned, "but I prefer to walk."

The first part of my sentence evidently "went to the spot."

"Well, ye see, sir," said he, "I be used to meet a many gents up about these hills, and that's how I larnt to be so polite!"—Youth's Companion.

—Life.

It Looked That Way.

He seemed to be all right when he sat down at the table, and the waiter busied around getting him in shape for his dinner while he studied the bill of fare. He was rather unsteady possibly, but as he had not eaten anything for 18 hours that was not surprising.

"Well, sir, what will you have?" asked the waiter.

"Tock murtle soup and coiled bodfish," he replied, holding up the bill.

The waiter was disturbed.

"What, sir?" he asked.

"Tock murtle soup and coiled bodfish," he repeated, and the waiter snickered and went out.

He came back in a few minutes with the order, and the guest took up the bill again.

"Bring me," he said slowly, "some meg of lutton with saper cauce, some bibs of reef and boiled bam, pashed motatoes, pried farsnips, prench feas, bima leans, and, waiter, wind her up with some pince mie, pago sudding, ruts and naisins and a cof of cupple."

This time the waiter was almost thrown off his feet, and he stared at his customer in amazement.

The guest returned the stare in hazy consciousness and shook his head slowly.

"Don't seem to sound right, does it?" he asked. "I'm sure something's wrong with it, but it looks that way on the bill, and I've got to eat it or starve," and the waiter turned away hesitatingly and moved off to the kitchen.—Detroit Free Press.

One or the Other.

Up in the hills of western Massachusetts, where the "higher education" and the "higher criticism" alike have not yet penetrated, there lived in a small town an eccentric old man named Hawkins. Brother Hawkins was a regular attendant at church "meetin," and his voice was often heard in prayer and exhortation. On one occasion the congregation met under the shadow of a general bereavement. A prominent man in the church had been suddenly transported from the scene of his earthly labors to the better land. A hush was upon the meeting as Brother Hawkins arose and said, "An now, my brethren an sisters, let us remember in our pra'rs the family of our dear Brother D——, who is now in Belz'bub's bosom"——

"Brother Hawkins," interrupted the deacon, "ye didn't mean Belz'bub, did ye—ain't ye made a slip?"

"Belz'bub, waal, lemme see," said the old man slowly, "Belz'bub, waal, if 'tain't Belz'bub 'twar one o' them ole patr'archs!"—New York Tribune.

His Trouble.

Old Gentleman—What's the matter?

Little Boy (crying)—Papa gave me a penny to buy a school pencil, and now—boo, hoo, hoo!

Old Gentleman—Well, here's another one. How did you happen to lose it?

Small Boy—I—I didn't lose it. I—I spent it for candy and—and lost the candy.—Good News.

Her Scheme.

"Do play something, please, Miss Pianothump," said the hostess, advancing to her music loving guest; "it's getting pretty late, but not half the guests are gone yet."—Chicago News-Record.

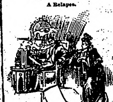
His Need.

"You must have perseverance," said the young physician's friend. "No," was the reply, "what I want is patients."—Washington Star.

Illustrations.

When the barber talks too much, his stories are generally illustrated with cuts.—Texas Siftings.

A Relapse.



"What! Smoking, Fred? Thought the doctor told you it would kill you!"

"So he did, and I quit. But at the end of a week I wanted to die, so I'm smoking again."—Life.

The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Pertinent Question.

Old Aunt Dinah was a colored woman, who had a remarkably strong voice, and would sing and cry "glory" with such vigor as to be heard above all the rest of the congregation, but she was of an unpleasantly "saving" disposition.

It was the custom at the missionary meetings of the church she attended, to take up a collection during the singing of the hymn, "Fly abroad, thou mighty gospel!" in the midst of which Aunt Dinah always threw back her head, closed her eyes, and sang away at the top of her lungs till the plate had passed her by.

The collector, who was a man of plain speech, observed this habit of the old woman's, and one evening when he came to her seat, he stopped short and surveying her rapt countenance, said bluntly:

"Look a-heah, yo' Aunt Dinah! What's de good ob yo' a-singin' an' a-singin', 'Fly abroad, thou mighty gospel,' ef yo' doan' gib nuffin to make her fly?"

Strange Silk Trees of Panama.

One of the greatest curiosities of the Panama isthmus is the vegetable silk tree. It is a plant that grows from fifteen to twenty feet high, and in appearance does not differ greatly from other trees, but in the inner bark is a perfectly silky fiber, long, smooth and strong. The natives separate it by some method best known to themselves, the process somewhat resembling that of beating flax. When once it is separated and spun into threads it can be woven into a fabric so closely resembling silk that it is difficult for any one not familiar with it to distinguish between the two. This species of silk goods is in high favor on the isthmus, and a Colombian belle is never happier than when she is arrayed in a gaily colored dress made from the trees in her father's yard.—Globe-Democrat.

REEKING WITH FRAUD.

THE STATE ROBBED OF MILLIONS OF DOLLARS.

Astounding Revelations Made by the Senate Investigating Committee—The Timber Wealth of the State Ruthlessly Looted.

The following is a synopsis of the report of the senate committee to investigate alleged irregularities in the sale taxation, etc., of school and other state lands as presented to the senate:

The Report.

The results of the committee's investigation will be a source of astonishment to the senate and to the people of the whole state. It is not too much to say that no committee ever appointed by any legislative body in this country has, for the length of time it has been able to give to the subject, exhumed such a mass of startling evidence. This evidence establishes, in the judgment of your committee, the conviction that the State of Minnesota has been robbed of millions of dollars' worth of its property during the past fifteen years, and that the most gigantic frauds have been practiced upon the school fund, a fund which every good citizen has hoped to see preserved undiminished for the benefit of the present generation and posterity. We find the laws for the collection of taxes in a vast area of the state made a farce and a laughing stock.

School Lands.

We will first turn to the consideration of the frauds upon the school fund. This seems to be a boundless sea of iniquity. It is impossible to tell how many million dollars have been stolen from the school fund, for we have not had the time to cover with our investigation either the whole period of the past or anything like the whole scope of the state. The evidence before your committee shows that in many, if not a majority of cases, the state received but a little over one-quarter of the amount justly its due. This great fraud is accomplished by false returns of the amount of timber cut and by low prices put upon the same, as is abundantly shown by the evidence before the committee.

Lost Over $2,500.

The evidence before your committee shows that 1,500,000 feet of logs, probably worth in the neighborhood of $4,500, were cut from section 16, town 54, range 23, while the books of the state auditor show that the amount received by the state from the section was less than $2,000. The school fund has therefore been defrauded out of over $2,500. This occurred twelve or thirteen years ago, while Mr. Whitcomb was state auditor. Appended to the testimony will be found the letter of the state auditor in reference to this section, marked "Exhibit C."

The Mass of Fraud.

It must not be forgotten that we are dipping in here and there into the mass of fraud, and that these witnesses, few in number, have generally been discovered by accident or by voluntary statements made by citizens who had knowledge of the facts. It is fair to presume that if such a gigantic fraud as this, involving a robbery of over $7,000 on one section is true, it must have been a sample of thousands of other cases of the same kind. There is no doubt upon the mind of your committee that school lands, as well as other lands belonging to the state, have been the subject during many years past, of combination between the buyers for the express purpose of preventing competition and beating down the price and defrauding the state. While it appears that $3 per thousand has been the ruling price for stumpage in the state at large, in a great many cases the school fund has received but $1 to $1.50 per thousand feet. It appears in this connection that section 36, town 57, range 23, was estimated by the state cruisers to contain 500,000 feet, valued at $2 per thousand, while the real value of the same was at least $3.50 per thousand (see page 170 of testimony). We have not been able to ascertain whether the estimate of the quantity of pine upon land was as far out of the way as the estimate of the price. We would also call the attention of the senate to the letter of the state auditor to the chairman of the committee, dated April 5, 1893, marked "Exhibit E," and appended to the testimony, in which he refers to the amount of pine sold upon the same section. It shows how grossly inaccurate were the estimates of the parties employed by the state to estimate the amount of timber upon state lands. It seems to our committee that such errors must have been committed purposely, and in the interest of those taking timber from the state.

Your committee would also report, that the evidence before them shows that the surveyor general of logs and lumber for the Second district, employed as one of his deputies a certain party whose duty it was to scale on the river bank in 1891 the amount of pine cut by one J. T. Welsh, on the Willow river, to sell to the Ackley Lumber company. A very small amount of the whole of the logs hauled, was reported to him as being hauled from a school section, to-wit: Section sixteen (16), township one hundred and forty-two (142), range twenty-five (25), and the rest from land owned by private parties; but the witness learned from the teamsters who hauled the logs that the whole of them were being taken from the said school section. When the surveyor general visited the place the witness told him that he had learned that the school land was being robbed of its timber, whereupon, as the witness testifies, the surveyor general, who was the paid agent of the state to protect its interests, told him that "it was none of his business—you attend to your scaling and let these fellows go. Don't pay any attention to that. You take what they give you; we have nothing to do with it." It appears from the testimony of the deputy that he kept a record of the amount of timber so taken; and that while but 330,230 feet were ostensibly taken from the school land the amount really taken therefrom was 3,305,060 feet. The witness notified the state auditor of the facts, and the clerk of the land department afterwards sent for him and said to him that he had rescaled the land and found his statements correct, and that he had collected $8,000 from the lumber company for the pine so taken; and he paid said witness $100 as a present from the state for his valuable information.

Books Badly Mixed.

Your committee is constrained to say that when it became necessary to ascertain certain facts from the state auditor, they found the books and accounts in such a state that the information could not be obtained until a certain clerk was brought in to explain matters. It seems to them that the books and accounts should be rescued from their present condition of confusion. In saying this we do not desire to reflect upon the present state auditor. The confusion began long before he assumed the duties of his office.

The evidence taken forces your committee to the conclusion that the school fund of this state has been robbed by these and similar acts of millions of dollars of its property. We have only been able to find a comparatively few, isolated cases, but if we apply the same ration of fraud to all the school lands in the pine region, the loss to the state must have been enormous. We will not go so far as to say that the state officers were a direct party to these frauds and shared in the plunder, although some of the witnesses have so testified, but we can certainly hold them responsible for great neglect of duty; nor do these wrongs seem to have been confined to any one year or any one state officer; they range back as far as our investigation has penetrated. The lumbermen seem to have banded themselves together. The evidence shows that no assistance has been given to facilitate the state in any researches that were attempted to be made, and in fact impediments were thrown in the way of all investigation. One witness testifies directly that offers of money were made to him to induce him not to make honest estimates for the state auditor, and your committee is satisfied that a vast amount of corruption has surrounded the entire business. It is a horrible part of this whole matter that men of large wealth and high social position joined in this scheme to plunder the little children of the state of their patrimony. It would have been bad enough if the ignorant and vicious had resorted to such practices, but when the pillars of the churches and the ornaments of society have joined in the work, it seems to evidence the rottenness of our whole social conditions.

These robberies were not confined to the pine lands alone, but it appears that the state has been plundered of its hard wood timber to large amounts, although there is no law, as your committee believes, to justify the state auditor in selling a single stick of the oak, ash, elm, basswood, etc., except with the land at public sale. In some cases wood has been sold as cord wood, although the officers of the state must have well understood that when the land was so stripped and nothing left but the stumps that it would be very difficult to sell it for agricultural lands.

Your committee is informed by high legal authority that there is no law which authorizes the sale of hard wood timber on lands belonging to this state; and they understand that the price of oak is rapidly advancing in consequence of the demand for it for manufacturing purposes; and that from the Mississippi river to the Pacific coast there are no large supplies of oak timber except in this state; and that it is in the interest of the state that all its hardwood timber should be carefully looked after and protected from depredation. The evidence shows that oak timber on state lands has recently been sold for $2 per M, while in many parts of the state it is worth $8 per M.

We find that the most cunning and ingenious practices have been resorted to to perpetrate these frauds; for instance, a price would be offered for the stumpage—which had probably been estimated at one-fourth its true amount by the state officers—which could not properly be paid by any person not being in the ring and not knowing the true amount. This drove out competition, while the man who was guilty of the fraud made up for the loss on what he paid for by the vast amount he stole or what he did not pay for.

University Lands.

The statement your committee has made as to school lands applies with equal force to the university lands. That great institution, which is the head of the public school system of this state, seems to have been plundered in an equally outrageous manner. The committee proposes, during the remainder of the session, to go still more fully into this branch of the subject. It appears that the timber has been sold in many cases at prices ranging from $1 to $3 per thousand upon an estimated amount of pine upon the section, and one witness testifies that where the state scale showed but 150,000 feet cut upon a tract of land, twelve times that amount had really been taken from the land, and the state university had lost the difference. Another instance is given where section 31 town 57, range 24, was sold to an individual at $1.75 per thousand, while the testimony shows that it was worth $3.00 per thousand.

Swamp Lands.

We pass now to the subject of swamp lands. These seem to have been also a prolific field of fraud. The evidence shows that prominent lumbermen have large contracts with the railroad companies under which they send men to examine the state swamp lands, and when they find tracts that are well timbered and desirable they make application to the railroad companies, and the companies then apply to the state for the land as a part of their grant from the state. As soon as they get title to the land they turn it over to these lumbermen at an agreed price per acre. The tracts of land thus selected are really not swamp land except in a technical sense for pine does not grow in swamps. In this way the very choicest part of the timber lands of the state are culled out for the benefit of speculators and the refuse left in the hands of the state. Not satisfied with this ingenious scheme these men go still further. It is in evidence that they do not place their deeds on record, and the title to the land appears to still remain in the railroad company, and the land thus escapes taxation. These lands are some of them covered with a magnificent growth of pine timber. In some cases a forty-acre tract will have on it from $3,000 to $4,000 worth of pine. One witness testifies that it is useless to attempt to contest the right of the purchaser, because the state officers appear to be in sympathy with the lumbermen. Your committee on this point are not able to speak authoritatively, but trust the matter will be a subject of future investigation.

United States Government Land.

There is a mass of evidence before your committee as to the fraudulent manner in which pine land has been obtained from the United States government, and much more evidence could have been obtained on this subject; but your committee did not feel that it had any authority to inquire into matters outside of the state lands. The evidence shows, however, that shanties worth $5 each were made of a few sticks, with fragments of broken glass or bottles stuck through holes as an excuse for windows, and a few grains of corn and beans were planted with a stick in the ground, so that the claimants would be able to swear they had a lawful residence and garden. By these shameful devices the United States government has been cheated out of millions of acres under the pre-emption and homestead laws, while the parties who went through this pretense of a residence sold out for from $200 to $500 each to some wealthy lumberman who had employed them to go there and who was well aware that the claimant must commit perjury before the title of the land could pass to him. It is claimed before your committee that not 10 per cent of the entries made in the timber regions are genuine, and that 90 per cent are a cover for fraud.

The Revenues Defrauded.

We now approach another and very important branch of this investigation, to wit: The extent to which the revenues of this state have been defrauded by failure to assess lands or to assess them for what they were really worth in proportion to other lands assessed in this state. The evidence discloses the fact that the county of Itasca embraces about 5,400 square miles, or one-fourteenth of the whole state. About one-third of this area, or in the neighborhood of one million acres, has been patented to individuals from the United States, and of this land over one-half, or in the neighborhood of six hundred acres, has been assessed and taxed at an average valuation of a little over $3 per acre. About one-half of the personal estate of the county also escapes taxation. The county has been miserably mismanaged and the result is it has an indebtedness of nearly $20,000, while it has about $10,000 of improvements to show for it. Nearly all the officers of the said county, as shown by the evidence before this committee, are employed by the great lumber companies operating in said county, or by individual lumbermen. The evidence also shows that at the time the county was organized a resident of the city of Minneapolis, who was largely interested in a lumber company in said county, was appointed as one of the commissioners thereof. This was the same man who bought the timber claim just referred to, and who was a member of the lumber company who furnished supplies for the United States surveyor. While acting as county commissioner of Itasca county he continued to reside in the city of Minneapolis with his family, and he appears to have been made county commissioner simply to assist the lumber company in the operations by which it was to deprive the state of its taxes. It is claimed by witnesses who appeared before this committee that while parties resident in the county, or small concerns not in the ring, were assessed upon their property at a high valuation, the great lumbermen, who were the favorites of the combination, got off entirely from payment of taxes or were assessed for much less than the real value thereof—in some cases for less than one-tenth of a fair valuation. The assessment of the property of the county seems to have been conducted in a shameful manner. The present assessor has been in the employ of another of those lumber companies, and we have reason to believe is still so employed.

It also appears that there are in the said county of Itasca two private railroads or tramways used for the transportation of logs. These are well built, wide gauge roads. They pay no tax to the state upon their gross earnings and they completely escape all local taxation. These two roads aggregate a length of about thirty miles and represent a large amount of money invested therein—not less than $160,000—and should bear their reasonable share of the burdens of the state. In addition to the transportation of logs for their owners, they also carry freight for third parties.

The assessor referred to testified before your committee that, acting under the instructions of the county auditor, he entirely omitted to examine one township in which certain prominent lumbermen own large quantities of pine land. While he raised the assessment upon other lands, he had not, in consequence of these instructions of the county auditor, made a similar examination or increase in the assessment of the lands in said township.

While these gigantic frauds have been practiced upon the revenues of the state, the bona fide settlers of the county of Itasca have been compelled to bear unjust and needless burdens for the purpose of supporting the government and protecting the property of the lumber firms. While the total assessment of the county for the present year is but a little over $2,000,000, we believe the cash value of the timber alone standing in the county, which is subject to assessment, amounts to $20,000,000. The annual cut of logs amounts to about 205,000,000 feet, worth $1,500,000.

It must be remembered that these revelations refer to but a small part of the area that could be examined by a proper system of investigation, and that these facts as to the frauds upon the revenue refer altogether to one county.

The Remedy.

The committee feels that it would be a crime on the part of the state when the knowledge of these robberies is brought home to the legislature, to stand still and do nothing to punish the plunderers of the people and prevent similar atrocities in the future. Such a course would simply encourage every adventurer in the state to join in the spoliation. The committee therefore recommends that some body, commission or committee, be created, with ample power to carry on the work after the close of the session, as the committee proposes to keep on taking testimony up to the last hour. Each member of the new commission could be given power to administer oaths and send for persons and papers, and employ agents to inspect the lands which have been sold. To prevent the appearance of creating lucrative offices, the committee suggests that these commissioners be paid only their expenses, believing that there is public spirit enough to be found to undertake the work. The commissioners could go to separate portions of the state and send out agents and collect the facts. The statute of limitations does not run against the state, and if the matter is properly pushed, suits can be brought against those who have defrauded the state and millions turned into the public treasury. If the facts revealed are as striking and terrible as those laid before the committee, the governor could call an extra session next winter to take the proper and necessary steps in the premises. The report is signed by Senators Keller, Donnelly, J. D. Smith, Dedon and Leavitt, the committee. They accompanied it with a joint resolution to carry into force and effect the suggestions which close the report, and appropriate $5,000 to pay the expenses. The names of the commissioners were not inserted and the joint resolution was laid over until to-day to give senators an opportunity to give some reflection to the matter. They also introduced a bill, which was passed under suspension of rules, suspending the sale of timber on state lands for two years.

HELLEN KELLAR.

She Can Talk Now and Knows What is Said to Her.

Helen Kellar, the remarkable child who, although born blind and deaf and dumb, has accomplished so much that is beautiful and inspiring, numbers among her friends many persons of royal station in European courts who never saw her. One of these is the queen of Greece, who learned of Helen through Michael Anagnos, the director of the institute for the blind, when he visited Greece some time ago. The interest which the queen took in Helen was so intense that she exacted from Mr. Anagnos a promise that he would let her read every letter that Helen wrote to him while he was at the Greek capital, and when he was about to return to this country she induced him to permit her to retain several of the letters that she had read, which are treasured very highly at the court.

The queen expressed on more than one occasion her surprise that Helen, who is not yet in her teens, should have so remarkable a command of the purest English; and hinted that the child might have had some assistance in the preparation of her wonderful letters. But Mr. Anagnos disposed of that thought by informing her majesty that there was no person connected with the institution who could write English so faultlessly pure and sweet as Helen wrote, since the little girl never had had an opportunity to form acquaintance with any but the loftiest models of the language.

Helen has learned to articulate, and can speak as freely and fully as any unafflicted person. When she wishes to hold a long conversation with anybody dear to her, she places one finger across the lips of the speaker and another on the throat at the larynx. In this way she understands every word that is uttered as rapidly as could be understood by a person with good eye sight and hearing.—Boston Globe.

Internal Heat in the Earth.

There are very important evidences of internal heat derived from the universal phenomenon of a fairly uniform increase of temperature in all deep wells, mines, borings of tunnels. This increase has been usually reckoned as 1 deg. Fahrenheit for each sixty feet of descent, but a recent very careful estimate by Prof. Prestwich, derived from the whole of the available data, gives 1 deg. Fahrenheit to every 47.5 feet of descent. It is a curious indication of the universality of this increase that even in the coldest parts of Siberia, where the soil is frozen to a depth of 620 feet, there is a steady increase in the temperature of this frozen soil from the surface downward.

THE FOAM OF THE SEA.

No one can have failed to notice that the foam along the shore of the sea or of a lake is white. No matter how deep the blue of the water may be, there is the same whiteness of the froth at its edge. For that matter, all foam is white. If the blackest ink in the world is beaten into foam, the foam will be as white as the froth of milk. The reason for this is that we see all objects by reflected light. If they reflect all the rays they appear white; if they absorb all the rays they seem to be black. The ink absorbs all the light, and is black. When it is beaten into froth, the little bubbles reflect all the light from their surfaces—for their extreme thinness makes them practically nothing but surface—and thus they are white. For the same reason any colored stone shows white when it has been ground to powder. Take the blackest marble and reduce it to small grains, and these will appear white, because their surfaces now reflect all the light. If the polished surface of the same marble be only a little scratched, as with a nail or drill-point, the effect will be a light-colored streak. One of the ways of testing stones and minerals is to observe the color of the streak as compared with the natural surface. If one watches the water falling over the rock at Niagara he may see it of an emerald green near the upper part of the fall. Much the same effect is produced when billows are just curving into breakers on the beach directly in front of us. A similar tint is seen in blocks of thin ice. The absorption and reflection of light are the same under all these conditions. Again, the froth at the foot of the fall and that at the edge of the sea is all of it equally white. So, too, if we pound the ice into small particles, they will be as white as the foam. The same point is illustrated in the appearance of the tiny particles of dew on the spider's web as compared with the larger drops suspended from the tips of blades of grass. All the more strikingly is the difference seen if the cold has converted dew and water into frost and ice. The frost sparkles from the innumerable faces of its the fall, while the same effect is proly shining surface. Frost and snow are white because of the smallness of their particles and the great number of their reflecting surfaces. All the light being reflected, they can be only of this color.—Churchman.

Is It a Bluff?

Chamberlain, S. D., Special, April 24.—One of the greatest curiosities in the West is the now famous burning bluff in Charles Mix county, this state. Situated on a stream tributary to the Missouri river, in the southern portion of Charles Mix county, is this remarkable bluff. It was noticed for many years that snow would not remain on this hill nor would the stream at the base freeze in the coldest weather. The Indians and very early settlers, who quite generally imbibed many Indian superstitions, attributed this to other than natural causes. One winter morning in 1888 a settler in the neighborhood of the bluff on looking out of his cabin door for the first time that day saw smoke arising from the bluff, and proceeded thence to investigate. Seeing no opening, and thoroughly puzzled, he dug into the bluff and on drawing out his shovel was nearly overcome by the rush of gas and smoke that poured out. For a long while scientists speculated on its origin, while thousands of persons visited the spot to see the wonderful bluff. The bluff is very abrupt, rising to no more than 100 feet in height, and presenting a variegated appearance, due to the chalky, mild yellow sulphur, and bright yellow sulphur rocks in the process of formation, and to the large amount of alum, mica and lignite there imbedded.

On each side is a wing, extending to the edge of Pease creek, and enclosing from the sides the bluff. The wings present the same colored faces as does the bluff, and all the wings and bluff arise to an almost perfectly level table land. On the summit of the bluff grows a beautiful flower resembling the white water lily. The flower has also a rather strange record, as the only other place it is known to grow is on Spirit Mound, South Dakota, which for many years was the camping and council grounds of a certain Indian tribe, and which, on the death of the chief, became his grave. According to legend this flower sprung from his grave, and the superstitious still seem to detect something of the unearthly in the mild, sweet perfume of the Mound lily, as it has been named. The theory of the mound is this: There is known to exist, from the northern to the southern boundary, and from the western to the Missouri river, and east of it in some places, vast beds of lignite coal, and it is supposed that one of these beds lies beneath this bluff and is being consumed by the internal heat. This looks very reasonable, as on digging but a few inches pieces of half-burnt lignite and sulphur stone are found, and sometimes a thin blue flame accompanies the smoke. Scientists still ponder on the source of the fire, but the bluff burns on just the same, and will no doubt contionue to do so until the end of time.

Paderewski May Not Play.

Chicago, April 24—Paderewski may not perform as the star drawing card in the inaugural concert which is to be held in Music hall May 2. It so happens that this musician's favorite piano is one manufactured in New York, and by a firm which was originally granted the best space in the manufactures building for a piano exhibit. After entering into a contract and permitting the exposition company to make all its plans, Paderewski's favorite firm, along with several others, suddenly abrogated their contracts and withdrew in a body from their exposition space. This action was regarded unfavorable by the exposition company, and Director General Davis issued a statement that the piano firms which had played false to the world's fair would not be permitted to place their instruments in any building on the world's fair grounds. This order was strictly regarded by all except the bureau of music, which, of its own accord, engaged Paderewski for two performances to take place May 2 and May 3. The pianomakers who are to exhibit have threatened to withdraw if Paderewski is allowed to play on that particular piano. An attempt was made to solve the difficulty by getting the piano company to exhibit, but it was unsuccessful, and now the chances are very strong that Paderewski will not be allowed to play at the exposition.

A Double Attraction.

Queenstown, April 24.—The new Cunard steamship Campania arrived here to-day on her maiden voyage. Although her engines were not worked to their full power, she made the trip from Liverpool to this port in eleven hours and forty minutes. In the party brought from Liverpool to this place as guests of the steamship company was John Morley, chief secretary for Ireland. After the guests had been landed they were taken aboard the steamer Hound, on which they were entertained at luncheon by Sir Bache Cunard. The people of Queenstown who had learned in advance of John Morley's coming, were waiting for him on the quay when he was brought ashore from the Campania. As soon as he was recognized the crowd began cheering him. When he was landed after the luncheon, the municipal board, 600 to 700 citizens and a brass band greeted him. Mr. Morley begged to be excused from making a speech, as his visit was of a purely private nature. Half an hour later he proceeded to Cork.

An American Composer Honored.

Rome, April 24.—The jubilee mass composed by Dr. Frank G. Dossert of New York was sung in St. Peter's to-day at the celebration of the Feast of the Patronage of St. Joseph. The choir, assisted by many singers from other churches, gave a magnificent rendering of the work. All the members of the United States legation and consulate in Rome, the majority of the American residents, and scores of distinguished Italians were present. The most notable auditors hastened to congratulate Dr. Dossert as soon as the mass was concluded. This evening Dr. Dossert dined with Meluzzi, the director of St. Peter's choir. This is the first time that an American composer has been thus honored in Rome.

Disgraceful Orgies.

Wheeling, W. Va., April 24—Eight hundred Pittsburg excursionists came to Wheeling to-day on the steamer Andes. About 200 of them were women. Many fights are reported as taking place on board on the down trip, and one man was thrown overboard and drowned. The carousal on board during the trip was something frightful, and when the excursionists arrived here several hundred drunken men and women took possession of the city. Drunken women smoking cigarettes mingled with the church goers on the streets, and many disgraceful scenes were witnessed. Several streets fights occurred and fourteen of the Pittsburgers are in the lock-up to-night.

Students Dismissed.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 24.—The president and faculty of the Delaware University met to-day and dismissed from the institution the nine students who committed the branding outrage on the members of the Greek letter fraternity. The terms of the dismissal permit the students to gain admission to other universities, whereas if they had been expelled they could not have done so.

A Divorce Granted.

Duluth, Special, April 24.—Capt. M. F. Cressy of Lakeside fire hall, secured an absolute divorce from his wife, Ada F. Cressy, in the district court to-day, on the ground of adultery, committed with Richard Talbotson, a barkeeper, at a camp meeting at Oakis, Douglas county, in July, 1891. Cressy and wife formerly lived at Oakis.

CARPENTERS TO QUIT.

Another Strike at the Big Fair.

Chicago, April 24.—Another misfortune is in store for the world's fair officials. Last week it was Old Boreas who brought grief to the denizens of the whole city. This week it is the old strike of carpenters. When the carpenters employed at Jackson Park go to work tomorrow they will find the gates of the exposition grounds guarded by a cordon of union delegates. These delegates have strict orders to allow no union carpenter working for the exposition company or those contractors who have not signed the agreement of the carpenters' council to enter the grounds. The agreements of two weeks ago are to be repealed. Not only will the union carpenters strike at the world's fair grounds, but all over the city. By orders of President Coggeswell all union carpenters working for contractors who have not signed the agreement must quit work. This order will throw over 4,000 men out of work to uphold the union's demand that its members shall not be compelled to labor with non-union workmen. The strike was resolved upon at a mass meeting of carpenters held at Battery D armory this afternoon.

Fifteen hundred men were present, and the vote to strike was unanimous. A strike at the world's fair grounds, even one of small proportions will be a serious matter at this particular time, when every moment is precious. Of the 3,000 carpenters now at work in Jackson Park, it is estimated that 400 to 450 men will be affected by the present order. This comprises the men working for the exposition company and those in the employ of less than half a dozen contractors, the great majority of contractors having complied with the unions' demands. While the number of men affected is comparatively small, it will be a blow to the exposition company, inasmuch as it will be impossible to secure men to take strikers' places on short notice. The present strike is due to the dissatisfaction of the carpenters with the outcome of the strike of two weeks ago. At that time all the union men in the building trades employed at the grounds struck to sustain the demands of the carpenters, but after being out one day the officers of the building trades council reached a settlement with the world's fair managers without consulting the carpenters; and, although the name of President Coggswell, of the carpenters' union, was well, of the carpenters' union, was signed to the agreement that gentlemen was not present when the paper was signed, affixing of his signature to the document.

Admits Applying the Match.

Milwaukee, April 24.—Thomet, the self-confessed firebug, let out another link in his memory yesterday and admitted that he set fire to the Stadt theater at the time the buildings was damaged to the extent of $25,000. Thomet says he was going home when some of the employes urged him to stay at the theater. They went in the East Water street side and passed through and under the stage, where the stage furniture was stored, the sofas of which were to be used as beds. On going along the basement a bunch of straw and sweepings offered a tempting place for a blaze, and he struck a match and thrust it in. Then he followed his companions up to the stage. He says the others did not know what he had done. In a few minutes the alarm was given. Thomet's statement confirms the theory held at the time of the fire that the explosions heard, and which caused the spread of the flames throughout the building, came from hot air and gas and not from bombs. Thomet does not admit starting any other of the big fires, and the police officials are inclined to believe him. The belief is also held that Thomet is not responsible for his acts. His looks, however, do not indicate that anything is wrong with him mentally. In talking with him the impression is given one that he is not over-bright, but that is all. At times he claims not to have known what he did when he was drunk, but the straightforward way in which he gives the details does not tally with his claims regarding his loss of control over his actions.

Children of the Desert Wroth.

New York, April 24.—The children of the desert tore their robes and trampled their turbans in the dust yesterday. They came on the French steamer La Touraine and were on their way to Chicago, where they will establish an Algerian village at the world's fair. They came over in the second cabin. There were forty-six Africans and Arabs and the party consisted of thirty-three men, ten women and three children. They had a consular certificate for the whole village. The immigration authorities last night refused to pass the natives of Tunis and Algiers because they did not have individual certificates. Instead of permitting them to have the freedom of the city, the officials ordered them to be taken to Ellis island this morning. Then were the impulsive dwellers in the Orient exceeding wroth. There was weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth. The sheiks and soothsayers swore vengeance against the government which had committed such a breach of courtesy. Finally the manager poured oil upon the troubled spirits by telling to them his impressions of Chicago, and the dwellers in the shade of the sand dunes and palm trees were comforted. The party were dressed in full native costume.

Blood in the Bahamas.

New York, April 24.—Nassau advices under date of April 17 say: Some months ago the Bahamas government sent to Barbados for a company of men, sixty strong, who were put through military drill by Capt. Learmouth, late of the Lancers. These men were brought to Nassau and called the Bahamas constabulary. For a month or so the people have complained of the brutalities of the constabulary. So incensed were the people of Grantstown that on the night of April 1 they burned the guard room, beat the constabulary and stoned Capt. Learmouth. To-day a constable had his brains beaten in in the center of the city of Nassau. When the rest of the force heard of this outrage they rushed out with fixed bayonets, clearing the streets and wounding several persons. An attack of the people of Grantstown is expected momentarily. The force has to be kept in the barracks, for if it ventures out of its quarters it will surely be murdered.

The Dying Actor.

New York, April 24.—There seems to be little doubt that Edwin Booth is in a very serious condition in spite of the reassuring statements of the physicians. Dr. Smith said after his 5 o'clock call to-day that Mr. Booth was better than he had been at any time since his present attack. Mr. Booth is still unable to talk. He recognizes those about him, however, and sleeps most of the time. His daughter, Mrs. Grossman, was with him to-day.

New York, April 24.—This morning Mr. Booth was reported to be in the same condition as when Dr. Smith found him early in the evening. At the Players' club it is thought that recovery is doubtful. The result of the conference of physicians was to the effect that the tragedian's recovery was scarcely to be hoped for and they were of the opinion that the end would probably come within forty-eight hours.

North Dakota Methodists.

Fargo, N. D., Special, April 24.—The members of the Methodist conference filled appointments all over the city to-day, and gave some excellent sermons, that of Rev. Dr. Kurtz at the First Methodist church on "Faith" being especially good. This afternoon Bishop Fowler ordained the following to deacons orders: Ulysses G. Scholtz, Clarence D. Lochlin, James A. Strachan, D. C. McGoin, A. C. Routzahn and George E. Brownell, and the following as elders: D. R. Baldwin, S. P. Beer, C. W. Collinge, J. G. Dingle, C. F. Fairbanks, William Way, J. Moore, S. Newlove and L. H. Hessegger. The conference will meet at Wahpeton next year. This evening the educational anniversary was held, and to-morrow forenoon will close the session of the conference, when the appointments for the ensuing year will be read.

A large audiance greeted Prof. Gambell's Dramatic Club at the Norwegian Lutheran Church last Thursday evening when they presented "Ten nigthts in a Bar-room." The piece was rendered much better than could have been expected from a company who have had little or no experiance. Considering everything they have, had to contend with they did exceptionally well and give an entertainment which is very interesting. The completion of the Mormon temple has demonstrated the fact that Brignam Young was a false prophet. The washout on the Red Lake Falls line has proved to be a very serious one The Clearwater bridge was washed from its foundation and taken down river about a mile. In the long cut about two miles this side of Red Lake Falls the water has washed out the track for over three quarters of a mile. The road bed has been cut all to pieces and in many places holes six and eight feet deep have been cut under the track. All trains on that line have been abandoned and it will take at least six weeks and about $10,000 to repair the damage already done.

For many years the project of a canal from this place to Duluth has been talked of as something greatly to be desired but the realization of which was hardly expected during the present century. It may be that in this we were mistaken and our dream is to be realized earlier than we expected. Yesterday The Times made mention of the fact that articles of incorporation had been filed with the secretary of state, of a company which proposes to build a canal from St. Paul to Duluth. If it develops however, that it is not the intention of the company to connect Duluth with the Twin Cities at the present time: but rather to build in a northwesterly direction with the object in view of ultimately tapping the wheat fields of the Red River Valley, This company claims to have unlimited capital and says that operations will commence at once.—Crookston Times.

At Lake Traverse, a few miles west of Wheaton, this state, hundreds of ducks and geese were discovered frozen into the thin layer of ice that formed during the night. Many were dead but a large number were alive held prisoners by the tips of their wings, unable to free themselves on account of being benumbed with cold. Many were captured by farmers living adjacent to the lake. About twenty-five or thirty Indians from the Sisseton reservation seemed to have anticipated something of the kind and were at the lake early and captured nearly a wagon box full of the helpless water fowl. A 14 year old boy from this village succeeded in capturing 150 ducks and half a dozen geese. During the storm a farmer driving along the shore of the lake killed a number with a whip, the birds huddled up in large numbers along the shore too exhausted by the cold to make any attempt to escape.—Wheaton Gazette.

A girl residing in a Lake Michigan town has recovered $100 damages from a steamboat company for naming a boat after her without her permission. "There are boodlers in this house lots of them; I know it, and if you keep on, I shall name some of them," are the hot words of a Republican member of the legislature uttered on the floor of the house in a heated wrangle during one of the sessions last week. There are a couple of agents in town who claim to represent some sort of a supply company at St. Paul, and who are soliciting orders from farmers hereabouts for goods we have warned our readers many times against placing an order with these supply houses as they will always be sure to get the biggest end of the bargain, It is nothing more or less than a scheme calculated to put money in their own pockets for whoever heard of anyone doing business merely for health or for glory. The place to purchase is of your home merchant who never sells you goods through misrepresentation and who will gladly rectify any mistake that may occur. Then again the home merchant is the man who trusts you when money is scarce, and who will always aid you when in distress. He is the man who should have every dollar of your cash trade as well. He pays the taxes and helps build up and improve the country Stand by the home merchant every time.—Fertile Journal,

The session of the county board closed last night without granting any of the applications for seed wheat. The matter was discussed all day. Commissioners Demers and Oppegaard in whose districts most of the applicants reside favoring it and Commissioners Kirsch and Lindem opposing. When a vote was taken in the evening both sides were found just where they started in. Commissioner Demers asserts that unless aid is granted to some of the farmers in his district they will be unable to put in any crops this year, as they lost everything by hail last fall, and he has made a desperate fight for the measure. On the other hand Messrs. Kirsch and Lindem oppose the measure on the ground that their experience with the bill of two years ago is not such as to justify a renewal of the transaction. The county is still in debt to the state about $5,000 for seed advanced at that time and they claim that the present law does not protect the county as well as did the old one. Commissioner Demers is far from being satisfied with the outcome and will go to St. Paul tonight to lay the matter before the governor in the hope that something may be accomplished in that way.—Crookston Times.

HIS SPRING HAT.

He Was a Trifle Sensitive About the Shape of His Head.

Williams bought a spring hat the other day. He is naturally one of the brightest and most cheerful men in New York city, but from the day that he put on that hat he wore a melancholy look which would have given hope to a man who has had a case for property damage against the elevated road for 13 years. He shunned all his friends; he never smiled; he refused to go to the theater; the World's fair had no charm for him—he was a gloomy, sour faced, hopeless, desperate looking man.

A week after he bought his spring hat he met Jones. Jones is always telling about things which have happened to him. Begin to tell him about a ride you took, and he will give you an account of his journey across the plains on horseback. Let him know about your buying bought a house and he will explain about his famous real estate speculation in the dim past. Well, this trick of Jones undoubtedly saved Williams' life.

"See you've got a spring hat, too," said Jones. "How do you like the new style?"

"Oh, I like the style well enough," answered Williams in a gloomy voice.

"Say," said Jones, "speaking of buying new hats, did you ever notice how those machines that hatters use to get your size and shape show up your head?"

"What has that to do with the new style?" said Williams sharply.

"Oh, nothing, only"—

"It looks as if spring were about ready to come in earnest, doesn't it?" asked Williams.

"Yes, but about the shape of one's head"—

"It's been about as mean a spring as I have known," Williams went on.

"Now," said Jones, "when they put that machine on your head"—

"I'll be glad when summer gets here," Williams insisted.

"When they put these machines on"—

But Williams was determined to discuss the weather.

"It can't get too warm for me," he said energetically.

"See here, Williams," said Jones, getting red in the face, "why in the world do you insist on talking about the weather? I want to tell you about those head measuring machines."

"Say, Jones," said Williams desperately, "let's go to the theater tonight. Let's go and get luncheon. Let's take a walk. Let's do anything."

"Great Scott, man!" cried Jones. "What are you so excited about? I just want to tell you about"—

"See here, Jones," said Williams sternly, "I don't want to hear another word about your infernal machine. I'm not going to listen to you. I won't do it," he said, shutting his teeth.

"And I'm going to tell it to you," said Jones, getting mad enough to fight, "if I die for it. What I want to say is this. When I looked at the shape of my head the other day, it was something awful—something awful, I say. Yes, sir," he continued, looking earnestly at Williams, who had unconsciously taken off his hat while he held one hand in a frightened way to his head. "Yes, sir, my head looked like an idiot's. That's what it looked like.

"'Cæsar's ghost!' I said to the man, 'you don't mean to say my head is shaped like that?'

"'Why, no,' he said, 'this machine doesn't really show the shape of your head; it only brings out certain points to help us fit you.'"

Williams looked dazed with surprise.

"But say, you ought to have seen the kind of a head that thing gave me. Now"—

"Look here, Jones," cried Williams joyfully, getting his speech again, "come and have a drink. Come and have a bottle—come and have anything. Old man, you've taken a terrible load off my mind. I looked at the shape of my head when I bought this hat. It was the first time I'd ever looked at that outline. Well, it nearly stopped my heart from beating. You never saw anything like it. Talk about your head! Mine looked like a flounder with a broken back and two twists in it. There were bumps and curls and holes and patches in it. I knew that if I had a head like that I was in danger of becoming an idiot any minute. There was no use to try and get around it. I about made up my mind that I was an idiot already. And now, come and have a drink, old man. That's a load off my mind."—New York Tribune.

How He Dined.

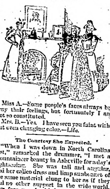
The night lunch wagon is a product of the nineteenth century. Its advent has been hailed by thousands of weary night workers, and the delectable frankfurter and hot roll have carried joy and comfort to myriad hearts and stomachs. Now, Tom Carroll is one of the men to whom the night lunch is a thing of beauty and a midnight joy. The other evening Tom came into the Saunterer's room, munching at his heart's content, with the end of a frankfurter in his hands.

"Where have you been?"

Tom smiled as he swallowed the last bite.

"Been out dining a la carte."—Boston Budget.

A Fast Color.



Miss A.—Some people's faces always betray their feelings, but fortunately I am not so constituted.

Mrs. B.—Yes. I have seen you faint without even changing color.—Life.

The Courtesy She Expected.

"When I was down in North Carolina last," remarked the drummer, "I met a mountaineer beauty in Asheville for a day's sightseeing. She was tall and angular, and her calico dress and limp sunbonnet of the same material clung to her as if they had no other support in the wide world. Her face was freckled. I met her in the railroad station, waiting for a train, and she spotted me on sight.

"'Ain't you a drummer?' she inquired.

"'I'm a traveling salesman,' I replied. 'What will you have?'

"'I want to know about my train, an ther ain't nobody round that seems to know anything. Drummers know it all,' she laughed.

"I told her what she wanted to know, and then she branched off.

"'I wuz over thar in the men's side uv the deepot awhile ago,' she said, 'lookin round, and when I went in thar every man was smokin, and the way they treated me wuz real insultin.'

"'You didn't expect them to stop smoking when you came in, did you?' I asked. 'That's their waiting room, you know, and they have the right of way.'

"She tapped the floor with the toe of her big calfskin shoe for a moment.

"'But they might have been polite,' she contended weakly.

"'What did you want them to do?'

"'Well, some uv 'em,' and here she pouted, 'might 'a' axed me to smoke.'

"Then I offered her my cigar case, and she took all I had, and I smiled."—Detroit Free Press.

Disconcerted.

Patrick and Michael went out hunting one rainy day—it was the only day that they could get off. All went well with them until, when they were several miles from home, they discovered that neither one had brought a cartridge, and that not a shot could be fired.

"Begorra," said Pat cheerfully, "what's that to do with the huntin? Is the want of a cartridge anny rayson to prevent a man from huntin?"

"None at all," said Michael.

So they continued to hunt. By and by a rabbit started up close to Pat and then came to a stop, curiously watching the hunters. Pat instantly brought his gun to his shoulder.

"The gossoon that ye air!" exclaimed Mike. "Wud ye shoot him widout a carthridge?"

The rabbit hopped away.

"Whisht!" said Pat angrily, "there ye go, sphilin the sport wid yer blatherin tongue!"

"Patrick! An yer gun was not loaded!"

"Sure, ye spalpeen. But the rabbit would niver 'a' knowed it if ye'd hild yer blather!"—Youth's Companion.

Improving His Time.

Hicks—I saw Benedict on his way to see his fiancee again this evening. What a man he is! He hardly misses a night in his visitations.

A Marked Similarity.

He Wanted to Know.

"No; how ridiculous!"

Quiet Life of an Ex-Empress.

The widowhood of ex-Empress Frederick of Germany is passed in semi-retirement and in the performance of acts of charity. She is one of the few royal ladies of Europe who may be said to take more than passing interest in scientific things, and though by no means a bluestocking, she devotes considerable time to literary studies. Since Frederick's death she has wielded but little influence in public affairs, although the San Francisco report says she possesses marked ability in that direction. Of course everybody remembers the diplomatic story crediting her with procuring the downfall of Bismarck and his withdrawal from his commanding position in German politics, and that it was brought about to even up an old score she owed the grim chancellor. Ex-Empress Frederick's years of widowhood are passing quietly and uneventfully. Her devotion to Frederick's memory and her love for her books are the predominant features of her life. She treasures jealously the desk at which her husband wrote his diaries. She is greatly liked by the poor of Berlin, to whom she is a veritable Lady Bountiful, with a big private list of pensioners. Her hair is slightly silvered, but she still has the same quiet, soft voice and fascinating smile that made her look like an angel to those who saw her at the bedside of her husband at San Remo four years ago. Three brief months of imperial honors have been followed by a life of sadness, unrelieved save by her studies and her love for her son's children.

Society First, the Children Next.

Do society women neglect their children? How can they help it? If giving them plenty to eat and to wear, if sending them to expensive schools and spending large sums for their accomplishments were all that were required to bring up children, then the answer would be in the negative. But if parents are in duty bound to give more care and supervision than this, to have charge of their moral and intellectual growth, then there are instances upon instances where not only the often much abused society woman, but that other large class, not always found in swelldom, but allow innumerable outside responsibilities to take precedence of home life, do neglect the little ones. A woman of many engagements boasts that she spends one hour every day with her children, and that this is all she can possibly find time for. What is one hour out of a whole day? There are many families all through the city where children rise in the morning, eat their breakfasts and go off to school without one word from the mother, who is sleeping in a well guarded attempt to make up for the late hours of the night before. There are servants to see that the children are well fed and warmly attired, but such children can never have the sweet memories of home that those have who departed for school with a good-by kiss and a word of interest in the day's lessons.

"Don't bother me" is the too frequent reprimand of the mother who has committee meetings, charity organizations, interviews and many other matters foreign to domestic comfort on her mind. A student of social tendencies, who has no darlings of her own, and who, perhaps, on this account, appreciates their worth all the more, recently told a Brooklyn Eagle man of a little incident which affected her deeply. She was at the house of a friend, who was exceedingly preoccupied with some social scheme. Her little son, full of pride in some drawing he had made, ran up to his mother to show it, only to be repulsed with "Don't bother me." He went to auntie, who took him up and talked with delight of his sketch. As he went away he was heard to mutter: "Auntie, she likes it; mamma, she don't care." As the auntie said: "I always pity a child whose mother doesn't care."

Are Your Eyes Alike?

According to a German doctor, who has just published the results of a long course of experiments on this subject, the sight is rarely alike in both eyes. He finds that only in one case out of fifteen are both eyes in good condition. In seven cases out of ten one eye is stronger than the other. In two cases out of five patients are affected with astigmatism, which may be defined as an imperfect focusing of the light rays entering the eyes. This usually arises from a difference in the curvature of the cornea or transparent portion of the eye. Nearly 50 per cent possess only an imperfect appreciation of colors.

It is a Horrid Nuisance

To be nervous. Starting at the slightest sound, uneasiness by day and fitful slumber by night, unreasonable apprehensions, odd sensations, constant restlessness—these are among its diabolical symptoms. Dyspepsia is the fountain head. Remove this with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and the food is assimilated, the body nourished, the sleep grows tranquil, nervousness vamooses. The Bitters subdues malaria, constipation, liver complaint and kidney affections.

A FINANCIAL MISAPPREHENSION.

Lillian Axton was a silly little affectionate woman, who loved her husband, and whose husband loved her. They were recently married, but not so recently that Tom Axton had not time to find out that his wife had absolutely no head at all for finance. She could not keep accounts. They bewildered her and always ended in a hopeless muddle. She was like the woman who, being urged to keep some account of her expenditure, triumphantly showed her husband her book with the two entries on the debtor and credit side, "Received $50," and "spent it," and who was exceedingly pleased to see that the $50 on the one side balanced the $50 on the other.

Lillian had the most vague idea about checks. It seemed to her that if a book were filled with unused checks, their bank account, therefore, was unlimited.

Now there are two things for a man to do when he finds himself in such a situation as Tom Axton found himself. One of the things is wise, and one of the things is foolish. If he is a foolish man he will endeavor to teach his wife how to keep accounts. If he is a wise man he will simply make up his mind to earn more money and let the accounts go. So, Tom Axton, being wise, bothered his wife very little about accounts, settled the bills when they came in as well as he was able, and bent his energies toward the accumulating of a good and reliable balance at the bank.

And so things went on very comfortably and pleasantly until winter set in.

One night when Tom came home, Mrs. Lilian, who was a most transparent kind of woman, began a conversation on the subject of sealskin jackets. She said that they were most economical garments; that a woman with a sealskin coat was always well dressed; that the apparent costliness of the garment was a delusion; that a woman who had bestowed upon her a sealskin sacque at the beginning of a hard winter had little else to ask for until the spring.

Tom listened gravely, and finally said: "There is nothing personal in all this talk, is there?"

Lillian averred that there was not, and indignantly repudiated the insinuation that she was thinking about herself at all. She was merely interested in the subject in a general way. And Tom said quietly:

"Lillian, my dear, what is the price of the particular garment you have been looking at?"

At this point of the conversation she came over and sat upon his knee, and finally Tom received the information that a perfectly lovely sealskin coat could be had for $200, which was worth, at the very lowest figure, $300.

"In that case," said Tom, "it is rather a pity not to buy it, isn't it?" and she admitted with some reluctance that it was a shame to let such a chance go by.

Tom did some figuring, and found that a check for $200 would be honored at his bank and leave still a little credit remaining.

His overcoat was on next morning, and he was just about to depart for his office, when he opened the drawer of the table in his room, took out his check book, and wrote a check to the order of his wife for $200.

Mrs. Lillian was overjoyed, but Tom was away before she could thank him. She looked at the check, with the ink still wet upon it, waved it for a moment in the air to dry it, and then held it lightly with its face towards the fire that was blazing on the hearth. How it happened she never knew, but the check gave a little curl at the corner, and burst into flame in her hand. She dropped it, tried to snatch it again, but the charred remnants escaped up the chimney.

rMs. Lillian's face became as white as the ashes on the hearth, and she sank into the arm-chair beside the fire, covering her face with her hands.

* * * * * * *

Tom Axton was a somewhat stolid, quiet, industrious, unsuspicious man. He frequently thought his wife a trifle frivolous, but, on the whole, he rather liked it.

When he came home that night the door was opened to him by the servant girl instead of by his wife, which was unusual. There was panic in her face.

"Oh, sir!" she said "have you seen the missis?"

"The missis!" said Tom. "No. Isn't she here?"

"No, sir," said the girl, looking as if she were going to cry, "after you left this morning, sir, she took on awful, and then she went away. I thought perhaps she had gone to you, sir."

Tom stood in the hallway without removing his coat, thunderstruck. Through his unsuspicious mind flashed the circumstances of the case. The check for $200; the "taking on," and the departure.

Tom threw himself down with his overcoat still on, in the arm-chair by the fire, and tried to think over the situation. The absolute uselessness of starting out in the night and trying to find her was the first thing that impressed itself upon him. He shrank from giving notice to the police. The ticket seller at the railroad station knew his wife, and would perhaps remember if she bought a ticket for any place. The first thing evidently to do was to find out if she had left the suburb, and, if possible, where she had gone to.

Once more he called up the servant girl.

"Did—did Mrs. Axton leave the house alone?" he asked with some hesitation.

"I think so, sir," said the girl, "but I don't know. I heard the front door close, and a while after I found that she was gone, and when she did not come back to lunch, I did not know what to do."

"Oh, it is all right," said Tom, with a confidence he himself was far from feeling "I think I know where she has gone. A friend of hers is ill. She has very likely been detained. I will go and bring her home."

And so, putting on his hat, he resolved to go down and see the man at the railroad station. When he closed the front door behind him and went down the steps towards the gate, he saw in the darkness the figure of a woman who seemed to be loitering there, and who now hurried away.

As he came out in the street something of her evident desire not to be seen convinced him that the retreating figure was that of his wife. He followed quickly, and as soon as she noticed this she broke into a run.

Now Tom realized that it was a risky thing to run after and overtake a flying woman, especially if she turned out not to be the person of whom he was in search. But Tom was desperate, and he took the risk.

Seeing that she could not get away, she stopped at a lamp post, leaning against it, and as he came up to her he heard the shuddering cry:

"Oh, Tom!"

"Lilian," he said hoarsely, grasping her wrist, "what is the meaning of this? Have you gone crazy?"

She leaned against the lamp post and wept.

"Come," he said briefly, and without resistance she accompanied him in silence, broken only by her sobs, back to the house.

The girl let them in, and at once surmised by the grief of her mistress that the friend who was ill had died.

Tom led his wife into their sitting room, and there she sank into the chair, covering her face with her hands. She saw by his stern demeanor that he suspected her guilt.

He closed the door, and then standing before her, said sternly:

"Lillian, I want an explanation."

"Oh, Tom, Tom," she said piteously. "Don't look at me like that, or I shall never be able to tell you the truth."

"You must tell me the truth, no matter how I look."

"That check, that check," she moaned.

"Well, what about it? What has the check to do with your going away?"

"The check," she murmured, "is gone."

"Who has it? Did you cash it, and have you lost the money?"

"I have lost the money," she said, "but I did not cash the check. It was burned."

"Burned! Who burned it?"

"Oh, I did, by accident. I was drying the ink before the fire, and somehow it caught, and I had not presence of mind enough to save it."

"But what has all that to do with your running away?"

She looked at him in surprise.

"It was everything to do with it," she said. "I could not face you after losing $200."

"Good gracious, Lillian," he cried, a light breaking in upon him. "You surely don't imagine you have lost anything by the burning of the check?"

"Was it not for $200?" she asked in surprise.

Tom's overstrained feelings gave way. He sat down on a chair and laughed.

"Lillian," he said at last, "is that all?"

"All!" she cried, astonished at his behavior. "Is it not enough, when we have so little money?"

"My dear girl," he said rising and kissing her, "the check is but a piece of paper. It is not like a bank note. The burning of a check is nothing. It only puts me to the trouble of writing another. Ignorance may be bliss, but it has given me a very bad half hour."

"Dear me," said the little woman, looking at him with wide eyes. "What in the world did you suspect?"

"Nothing," said Tom.—Detroit Free Press.

BATH TUBS AND SPARROWS.

Made by a Peg-Legged Mariner in a Brand New Sidewalk.

The merriest man in all New York is an old sailor who lives up in Harlem on a comfortable pension awarded him for the loss of one of his legs in the civil war. His artificial limb is simply a straight stick of hickory with an iron shod end, and is just a bit too long, so that when he puts it out to swing himself forward it goes down in earnest and makes a noise that heralds his coming for blocks.

Like many other old seafaring gentlemen he likes a drink of grog now and then, and he can spin such delightful yarns of his experiences that his auditors sometimes treat him to more of it than is quite good for him. The way in which he navigates for home on these occasions is irresistibly funny to every one but a neighbor who recently replaced the flagstones before his home with an expensive concrete walk.

He kept it covered with straw and boards for a week; but on the evening of the very day when it was deemed hard enough to bear the tread of the average pedestrian, and when the covering was removed, the peg-legged mariner got to telling stories and had to make many tacks on the voyage home.

When the householder awoke next morning he was in a state of mind bordering on insanity, finding four holes of varying inclination and depth bored in the beautiful smooth surface of his new pavement. The mariner had expressed his deep sorrow over the accident, and now always walks on the other and muddy side of the street. The four holes are utilized as bath tubs after every rain storm by the myriads of sparrows in the district.—New York Herald.

SIXTEEN DAYS OF HARD TRAVEL.

The Plucky Trip Made by the Wife of a Newfoundland Legislator.

Mrs. Burgess, the wife of a member of the Newfoundland assembly, has accomplished a feat second only to that of Mrs. Peary, says the New Orleans Times-Democrat. She accompanied her husband to the session at St. Johns, walking 230 miles over snow and ice on snowshoes. They had a guide, a sledge and three dogs carrying baggage and provisions. During the first portion of their journey, along the coast from their home, 103 miles from Little Bay, they frequently traveled many miles over ice on the bays and inlets. Three nights were spent without good shelter. They made a temporary shelter of branches of trees and warmed themselves at fires. Sleep was impossible owing to the cold. On one occasion it was necessary to cross an arm of the sea eleven miles wide in a boat. The boat was leaky. Four rowers, Mr. Burgess and his wife, the guide, dogs and sledges were all in the boat. They had to unravel a rope to fill the seams of the boat to prevent it from sinking. They were caught in the running ice and nearly carried out to sea. The men gave themselves up for lost, but they gained an isolated rock and finally got to the mainland. The rest of the journey, 127 miles, was through the interior, crossing rivers by means of trees lying across them. Several snowstorms were encountered and sixteen days were occupied in the journey. Mrs. Burgess is the first woman in Newfoundland to make such a journey.

John Brown's Whistle.

A battered silver whistle, used by the Abolitionist John Brown to summon his followers to secret meetings shortly before the civil war, is owned by a cousin of Col. Lewis Washington of Georgetown, D. C. When Brown was arrested and searched he gave up everything else willingly, but begged leave to retain this. Of course the request was not granted. The whistle is said to resemble in shape a long-tailed tadpole, with a dorsal fin extending the length of its body, what corresponds to the tail is a slender pipe, through which a current of air is blown flutewise across the hollow bulb at the end, giving a thin yet mellow sound of peculiar timbre that is very penetrating. Residents of Harper's Ferry said after the capture that for weeks before they had heard the whistle sound at night without knowing its meaning. But the negroes knew it, and for them it was the engine whistle of the underground railroad.

To Worry the Girls.

Play Better Than Gymnastics.

The preeminently recreative exercise is play. The natural gymnastics brings with it an attraction that animates the most indifferent and gives inspiration to the most phlegmatic. And what a contrast there is between pupils exercising for play and those upon whom systematic gymnastics is imposed—between English school children, for example, and French! In France, to everybody's sorrow, the children seem to have a horror of motion. Left to themselves, as soon as they are out of the schoolroom, they walk along slowly in couples or gather in groups in the corners of the yard; and they pass the time in chatting, in "philosophizing." Gymnastics is obligatory, it is true, on some days and at certain hours; but a witness of the lesson would be struck with observing that hardly four or five pupils out of thirty execute their exercises conscientiously. The others present themselves in their turn, but hardly outline the movement. The professor incites them, urges them; and they go back to their places after having made an imitation of an effort. In the Englishes colleges no regulation makes exercise obligatory, and every one is free to dispense with it or engage in it at will. But all give themselves up to it with incredible ardor. Weak and strong young pupils or students twenty years old, all show an equal passion for those plays in the open air, now neglected in France, for which gymnastics has been so fortunately substituted.

A GREAT NAVAL REVIEW.

WAR SHIPS ON DRESS PARADE AT NEW YORK.

President Cleveland Witnesses the Greatest Naval Demonstration of Modern Times and Is Saluted by Many Cannons.

New York, April 28.—The great naval review is now a thing of the past, but those who were fortunate enough to witness the event will remember it as the greatest marine demonstration of modern times. And those who were present as spectators or participants do not regret having seen or having taken part in the event, although many were thoroughly soaked by the drizzling rain that prevailed throughout the entire day. In the night time a storm that had its birth yesterday away to the westward, had stolen over the Jersey hills, and wrapped the war squadron on the river, had settled down upon the city and blotted out the dark brow of the sea from the ken of people ashore. Along the Hudson cloud and water had become one. The sloping shores were the sides of a great flume that had no existence to the eye. In the day time, when the sunlight might otherwise been brightening the fresh green slopes and the monsters afloat, a dull, gray curtain lay low and thickly over all. The night gave way slowly to the struggling light that came diffusedly and apparently without source. Out on the bosom of the lordly stream, somewhere in the dense gray fogs, the navies of the nations were softly chafed by the uneasy tides, but to those who were astir as the daylight wore off the edge of night, the ships had been spirited away in the darkness and no eye could reach into the gray thickness, where the black waters wallowed about their iron sides and sullenly swashed at prow and stern.

FRENCH FLAGSHIP "ARETHUSE."

One of the most pitiful results of the storm through the night was the wilted and forlorn-looking condition of the many beautiful decorations of bunting throughout the city. All their fine effect of yesterday had passed away in the night, and the water-soaked bunting was as dull in color as the leaden skies above. The flags on the housetops floated heavily in the stiff breeze. After awhile all New York had aroused for its holiday, only to find a steady down-pour of rain ushering in the day of the great naval pageant. They found a chilly northeast wind adding to the discomfort, and some hundred thousand people who had arranged to view the grandest marine spectacle ever presented in American waters, if not in the world, were disappointed. Although it was a legal holiday in town, the early morning crowds on the elevated trains and surface cars, with the crowds that poured into the city from the ferries and across the bridge, did not look like holiday crowds. The rain did not keep them all at home, however. There was a steady stream toward the North river all the morning, and the hundreds of excursion boats, steam yachts, tugs and other craft, which had been pressed into service, were filled up with sightseers who were not kept at home by Farmer Dunn's disgraceful weather. Their patriotism and their enthusiasm carried them throughout the wet. Other crowds who sought places along the docks, on tops of buildings and at Riverside park, plodded through mud and stood in pools of water with umbrellas and mackintoshes keeping out a portion of the wet. Vantage places under cover were in great demand, but thousands stood or sat in the open air and watched the proceedings on the river. The weather bureau got many imprecations from the shore and on the water.

There Was Great Disappointment on the squadrons anchored below the Palisades. The crack ships of ten nations, drawn together at the invitation of the United States, to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America, had been put in readiness for their part in the celebration. Their hulls had been painted, their decks holystoned, their brass work polished until it shone, and their guns had been cleared for far different work than their makers intended—the cementing of peaceful relations instead of the havoc of war. On board these vessels, the rain was most unwelcome. It drenched the deck and rigging and hung in pearly drops from the brass work. Dress uniforms were abandoned for storm coats and the jack tars, instead of being in holiday rig, were in every-day attire.

Just as every one was expecting that the programme would be carried out, despite the storm, the announcement was made that the review had been deferred. At 10:30 a. m. the signal boat Cushing started out from Thirty-fourth street and, running up alongside of each vessel in line, carried the information that the review had been postponed until 2 o'clock. When the excursion steamers heard of this they put back to their docks, and there was some grumbling among the passengers who had been getting damper and chillier as the time passed.

President Cleveland, accompanied in a carriage by his wife, Secretary and Lieut. Wood, left the Victoria hotel at 1:05 o'clock p. m. Eight minutes later his party arrived at the foot of West Twenty-third street, where a thousand men and women who had stood in the rain for four hours cheered him enthusiastically. Mrs. Cleveland, enveloped in a tweed cape Mackintosh and black veil, was the first to alight, and her appearance was the signal for the cheering to begin. The president followed her, and, removing his silk hat, paused for a moment, bowing on all sides to the assembled people. His cabinet officers had reached the pier before him. Secretary Gresham, Thomas F. Bayard and wife and C. C. Baldwin were the first to arrive a few minutes after 1 o'clock. Lieut. Hourigan was on the dock to receive the distinguished party, and escorted them to the Concord's launch. Dan Lamont and his wife appeared next and also went in the launch, which then steamed away and put the party on board the Concord. Then in rapid succession came Postmaster General Bissell and wife, Attorney General Olney, Secretary of the Interior Hoke Smith and J. Sterling Morton, secretary of agriculture. They boarded another launch which took them out to the Miantonomoh. The Concord and Miantonomoh saluted their respective guests as they arrived. There was no sign of the president, and it was feared by the waiting crowd that he would not come. However, his carriage soon came dashing along and set all fears at rest, although he was only seen for a minute while walking from the carriage to the covered launch of the Dolphin that bobbed up and down at the float. Besides him and his wife on the launch, there were his secretary, Clarence Bowen, of the reception committee, and Lieutenants Hourigan and Spencer Wood, the latter being Secretary Herbert's aide. A man servant and Mrs. Cleveland's maid accompanied the party. The little launch with the president's flag flying started away like a race horse as soon as the company was on board, as if anxious to make up for lost time. She rushed, bobbing up and down, to the Dolphin, and the party climbed up the stairway, Mrs. Cleveland again in advance.

The Fun Begins.

The blowing of a hundred whistles and the booming of guns at 1:15 announced that the president had embarked, and almost instantly the crews of the men-of-war all along the line went to positions facing the rail and at the mastheads and tops. At 1:30 the first boom of the ten-inch gun on the Miantonomah announced that the Dolphin, with the president on board, was passing up between the two columns of war vessels. The roar of the Miantonomah's twenty-one guns was followed by a salute from the Brazilian ships Republic and Tiradentes. Then the Dolphin's reply to the Brazilians was heard, and a cloud of smoke rose over the lower end of the line of war ships. The Brazilians manned yards just before firing, and the long lines of blue jackets stood out against a white background of smoke. The Dolphin moved at a slow and stately gait, and the salute of each ship was distinct and sharp. The Aquidaban, the flagship of the Brazilian fleet, finished saluting at 1:40 and the Nueva Espana took its turn. The Dolphin was followed at a distance of about 500 feet by the Blake and she in turn by the Miantonomah. At 1:44 the Seeadler, of the German fleet, fired her first gun. She was followed a moment later by the Reina Regente, of the starboard column, and the two ships, one on each side of the Dolphin, made the welkin ring. The Kaiserin Augusta joined the chorus, and the echoes rolled up the Palisades and down again, until one seemed to hear a long line of artillery reaching for miles on the Jersey shore. The bands on the ships played the national air, but it was only at intervals between the roar of guns that the music could be heard. The Van Speyk and the Infanta Isabel salutes ran into each other. Then there was a pause for a minute, when Argentina's cruiser belched forth a boom that was responded to by the Giovanna Bausan. It was 1:53 when the Concord spoke, and she spoke so rapidly that her saluter was done in two minutes. The Etna paid her respects next. Then after a short pause a light blue puff arose above the dynamite tubes on the Vesuvius, and a few seconds later there was

SPANISH WARSHIP "INFANTI YSABEL."

A Din Overhead,

as though the sky was made of sheet iron, and a bomb had struck it. People along the river front had not recovered from their astonishment when a sharp tongue of fire shot out from the side of the Jean Bart and there was a report that made women scream and windows rattle along the river front. At 2 o'clock the Yorktown and the Arethuse saluted together, gun for gun. Then there was an interval, during which the bands could be heard playing and the cheers of the sailors reached the shore.

The Chicago then opened fire and a moment later the Russian Rynda added her guns to the chorus. The Baltimore and the General Admiral followed. At 2:08 the Tartar, the first of the British ships, saluted. The guns of the Bancroft and the San Francisco were going at the same time. The British Magicienne and the Atlanta fired almost simultaneously. The Dolphin lessened her speed as she approached the head of the line, and there was an interval between the firing from the ships. Each vessel began as the Dolphin's bow became abreast. Ten minutes after she had passed the jack tars came down from their positions on the arms.

It was just 2:12 as England's crack cruiser, the Blake, fired her first gun. There was a big puff of smoke and a deep boom entirely different from the sharp sounds of the guns of the smaller vessels. The Philadelphia saluted as the Dolphin reached the head of the line and came to a stop just in the rear of the caravals. At the same time all the steamboats, tugs and pleasure craft blew their whistles, and made a din almost as deafening as the saluting. There was cheering and waving of handkerchiefs, hats and umbrellas, and the triumphal procession of the presidential party was ended. The whistles sent up a cloud of steam which added to the smoke of the guns, obscured the view of a large portion of the river.

The quaintest part of the day's proceedings was that the post of honor at the head of the reviewed columns was given to the apparently unseaworthy reproductions of the Columbus caravels, the Santa Maria, Pinta and Nina, which, with infinite care, had been towed over from Cadiz to Cuba by our own Admiral Benham, and from Cuba escorted to Hampton Roads and New York by the Spanish warships. These pigmy boats, high-pooped, lateen-rigged, cut away amidships like a Roman galley, were anchored opposite Ninety-third street and formed practically the turning point of the review. The contrast of four centuries of naval development could not have been more strongly and picturesquely marked.

Searchlight Display.

Inky darkness veiled the Columbian fleet at 8 o'clock to-night, and not a sound was heard by landsmen from the anchored battleships. Suddenly a ray of light shot up from the Philadelphia. It was long, dazzling, and seemed to pierce the sky. For a moment it remained stationery and then disappeared. That was the signal for the scheduled display of the electrical searchlights with which the war vessels are provided. Quickly following the Philadelphia's lead, the American showed the many ways in which the lights are used in active warfare to protect themselves from attacks of those marine terrors, torpedo boats. At times the projected rays were concentrated at certain spots on shore, then turned far up the Hudson, making objects plainly visible at a distance of five miles. Following came another signal, and simultaneously every light in the fleet was turned toward the zenith. Slowly the rays converged until they formed the apex of a brilliant silvery pyramid of incalculable height. Experts say it could have been seen seventy-five miles away in any direction. It was a sight never before seen and never to be forgotten by the landlubbers. Seventy lights were used in the display. They are nearly all of French make, each light carries lenses valued at $2,000 apiece. The majority of the warships carried two search lights. Aboard many of the larger vessels four are carried. Without regard to nationality, nearly every ship in the fleet carries French-made lights, which are deemed the best made to-day. This excellence is due to the knowledge the French possess of making nearly perfect lenses. In conclusion the operators gave some examples of high art in ray projecting and described various figures on the heavens.

HE WANTED ODDS.

An Intoxicated Race Track Patron Makes a Curious Blunder.

Uneasily they walked along Fifth avenue. They had just emerged from the Holland house and turned into Thirty-sixth street. They had been to the races lost heavily and felt blue. They knew that the antithesis of blue was red, so they looked on the cup which was red and it took away their blueness. It also warmed them a little, unsteadied their gate a little more and dazed them considerably.

They were commenting on the disasters which overtook their favorites that day on the track. One of them happened to glance up at a house they were passing, on which he saw something which puzzled him, for he said:

"Waiter minute. Whaz zat?"

The other looked at the house and saw a doctor's sign, thus:

DR. JONES.
9 to 1.

And underneath it another, which said simply:

DR. BROWN.

Without waiting for his friend to answer him the first man laboriously climbed the steps of the stoop and rang the bell—not once, but in the way that the comic papers usually picture intoxicated people as ringing bells. A startled darky made his appearance at the door to be further startled with the query:

"Shay, m'fren, wasser odds on Brown?"

This was a particularly bright darky, but it took him sometime to comprehend what the fellow meant. Then he tenderly helped him down the stoop, assured him that the odds were even, but that he had better go home and take a nap. The darkey, as is the custom with the colored race, amplified this story greatly when he told it to his employer, whose name is neither Jones nor Brown, and the doctor now enjoys relating it to his friends.—New York Herald.

The Haytian Building.

At the start the Haitian government appropriated $25,000, and much of this has been expended in the erection of a special building, which stands almost in front of Germany's big brick structure at Jackson Park, in a very desirable location. It is a low, square building, surmounted by a dome, and surrounded on three sides by an ornamental pillared veranda. The coat of arms of the republic is carved over the entrance, with the inscription, "Republique Haytienne, 1492—1804—1893." The date 1804 is that from which Haiti's independence is reckoned. In addition to the government appropriation many merchants of Haiti will contribute to make their exhibit a success.

SKIRMISHING FOR GORE.

DANGEROUS ATTITUDE OF NOBLE RED MEN.

The Navajos Are Expected to Resume Depredations Within Forty-Eight Hours—Revenge for Kit Carson's Work Sought.

It Means War.

Denver, Special, May 1.—The latest advises from the Navajo reservation Indians that the Indians are as restless as they were on Friday morning, when their movements caused citizens of Southern Colorado and New Mexico to call on the governors of both states and also the general government for military aid. The latest news arrived by courier from Farmington, N. M., the agency on the reservation, and is as follows: "Sheriff Dusten, the Indian agent, and a party of about twenty-five went out to West Water yesterday to drive the red skins back on the reservation. The whites had surrounded the Indians, and had instructions from Sheriff Dustin to do nothing to cause a fight, but to not let the Indians get the first shot in case they were disposed to fight. Agent Plummer made a talk to the reds and told the whites to wait and let him settle the matter, and if the results were not satisfactory he hoped the whites would pitch in and go to killing Indians. He promised Dustin and party that when the troops arrived from Fort Wingate he would compel the Navajos to give up the man who murdered Welch and the others who plundered the store. He promised that the Indians would be compelled to cease their depredations and stay on the reservation, unless he should be refused the support of the United States government, in which case he would immediately tender his resignation as agent for the Navajo tribes. Settlers say they intend to wait and see what success the agent has, and if he doesn't have any they will see what they can do. The cavalry from Fort Wingate arrived at Hog Back at 6 o'clock to-night and have camped there. The cavalry rode one hundred miles in thirty-six hours over the New Mexico desert and were very much fatigued. Now that the cavalry are on the scene Lieut. Plummer, the Indian agent, will demand the surrender of the murderers and marauders and if the Indians refuse it means war.

The governor, at the request of Gen. Tarnsey, furnished another hundred stand of arms and several thousand rounds of ammunition to the citizens of Durango. The general's idea is to keep several hundred citizens in the vicinity of Durango fully armed during the summer so that they can be prepared to move at a moment's notice any time. The general has been among the Navajos for years and is thoroughly acquainted with their treachery. He fully realizes that when the Indians break out again the delay in getting the military on the scene might be fatal to hundreds of settlers. The results of the next forty-eight hours are awaited with intense interest by the people, as the outcome of the Indian council may mean war. The Indian may pretend peace and then try a repetition of the Wounded Knee treachery.

Serving Without Salaries.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Special, May 1.—Mayor John W. Mason and five members of the city council are having quite an interesting set-to over the fixing of the salaries of the city officials. Mr. Mason was elected on the reform issue, and one of the expectations on the part of many was the renovation of the city hall. This citadel is held and presided over by M. R. Lowry, a well known Democratic politician, who holds about the same relation to the municipal government of Fergus Falls that William Pitt Murray did for many years to the municipal government of St. Paul. Mr. Lowry, however, is city clerk. There was quite a demand for his official scalp, but those who were after it made the error of looking after the mayoralty on election day, instead of the city council. As a result, when the council organized Lowry had five aldermen, while there were but three to support the reforms pointed out by the mayor. In the past the city clerk's salary has been $600, the maximum amount allowed by the charter, and that of the city attorney has been $300. One of the proposed reforms was to unite the two offices and get one man to perform the duties of both. There were propositions to fill both offices for $300 a year, but the council reelected Lowry clerk and passed a resolution fixing all the salaries of city employes. The salary of the clerk was fixed at $600, as formerly. Mayor Mason promptly vetoed this resolution, which killed the salaries of all the officials, including police. An attempt was made to pass the resolution over the mayor's veto, but it failed by one vote. At the last meeting of the council it adopted a second resolution fixing the salaries at the same figures as the first. The mayor has vetoed this, so that the city is being run without any salaries being paid. It is claimed now that if the mayor ever leaves town the council can pass and the acting mayor sign the resolutions, thus getting around Mayor Mason. There is quite a bit of feeling, and the council meetings draw full houses.

Willing to Be Lynched.

Milwaukee, May 1. — A special to the Wisconsin from Beloit, Wis., says: "Will Burke went to the county jail at Rockford, Ill., this morning and gave himself up to the sheriff. He said several days ago he went home under the influence of liquor, and, finding his mother asleep in bed, shot her through the heart with a shotgun. Officers went to the house this morning and found her body in a badly decomposed condition. An angry crowd gathered around the jail at Rockford and talked of lynching. Burke says he wants to die and is willing to be lynched. The murdered woman has been a widow for years and did washing for a living.

Double Tragedy in Seattle.

Seattle, Wash., May 1.—A horrible double tragedy startled this city. Nelsonton Sanborn shot and killed Mrs. Mary Jansen and then killed himself in the same manner. Mrs. Jansen was a grass widow worth $30,000, and aged thirty years. Sanborn was thirty years of age, and has ostensibly been her gardener, but has really been living with her for the past eight years. Mrs. Jansen promised to marry Sanborn, but recently fell in love with a young man named Frank McIntire, and promised to marry him. This maddened Sanborn so that he killed the women and himself.

Graceville, Minn., Special, May 1.—The Enterprise, which was reported as suspended, is to be resurrected by Doc Robertson, who formerly edited a paper here called the Phoenix.

Bishop Brooks' Successor.

Boston, May 1.—William Lawrence, S. T. D., dean of the Theological school at Cambridge, was yesterday nominated by the board churchmen of the Episcopal church for the bishopric of Massachusetts. The meeting was attended by nearly sixty clergymen and laymen. The nomination of Bishop William H. Hare of South Dakota by the conservative wing of the church was discussed somewhat, but the broad churchmen evidently did not care to endorse the nomination. After a two hours' conference, the name of Dean William Lawrence was adopted, and he secured the unanimous endorsement of the convention. A committee was appointed to draw up resolutions and send them to every delegate to the convention, informing them of the nomination.

KILLED BY FUEL GAS

An Entire Family Suffocated.

Chicago, May 1. — Three more victims of the deadly fuel gas—Henry Darling, his wife and babe—were found dead yesterday morning in the Delaware flats, No. 495 Forty-third street. Investigation showed that they had been dead since Wednesday night, and, owing to the circumstances surrounding the case, no one seems to have missed them or thought it strange that they had not been seen. Mr. Darling left his office last Wednesday night, saying that he would start for Utica, N. Y., the next day, where he had a law case before the supreme court, and would not return for several days. Therefore he was not expected at the office, and, as his wife seldom went out and received but few callers, no one had discovered their death until 10 o'clock yesterday, when an employe of the gas company entered the house to repair the gas stove and found the valve in the supply pipe wide open and the deadly fluid still escaping in the room. Fearing that all was not all right, he called for help and searched the house, finding Mr. Darling on the floor where he had evidently fallen while attempting to reach the window.

The wife's body was lying on the bed which showed many evidences of a struggle, while the baby, scarcely two months old, seemed to be sleeping peacefully. All the bodies were somewhat decomposed. The coroner was notified and in the afternoon an inquest was held and a verdict rendered in accordance with the facts. Henry Darling came to this city six months ago from Utica, N. Y., where he was a practicing attorney. He is the son of ex-President Darling of Hamilton college of Oneida county. He was employed by the law firm of Henderson & Gary, No. 94 Dearborn street. He was thirty years old, a man of prepossessing appearance, and was said to have been a bright lawyer. He was married a little over a year ago to Miss Allie Mooney of Utica, N. Y. The parents of the unfortunate couple were notified by telegraph and replies were received by Howard Henderson directing him as to what should be done and stating that some of the relatives and friends would arrive from the East this afternoon. Undertaker Bowen also received a telegram from the relatives in Utica instructing him to take charge of the remains and prepare them for shipment to Utica.

Mrs. Darling was a cousin of F. F. McIver of St. Paul.

Edwin Booth Worse.

New York, May 1.—The condition of Edwin Booth is not such as to give many friends much encouragement. His physician is of the opinion that Mr. Booth is nearing a critical point in his malady, and that if a recurrence of the hemorrhage of the brain with the attendant possibilities of inflammation or softening of the brain tissue can be averted by careful attention, his distinguished patient may recover.

Mr. Booth's condition late to-night took a sudden and decided change for the worse and his death is now only a question of hours. At 1 a. m. Dr. Smith abandoned all hope of Mr. Booth's recovery.

St. Louis Threatened With Flood.

St. Louis, May 1.—The high water hereabouts is beginning to cause considerable alarm, and grave apprehensions that the disastrous floods of last My are to be repeated, if not surpassed. A good portion of Brooklyn is also reported under water at midnight.

This will have a blighting effect on the cattle business in the Black Hills and the great Sioux range.

We were always aware that Conductor "Spout" Murry of the "garbage train" was one of the most gallant men that ever lived but when we heard that the other day Murry finding a maiden in dire distress, lent her his rubber boots coming back to town with a carpet slipper and a woolen sock, we immediately declared that old Chesterfield was not in it with "Spout" for gallantry.

Roadmaster Conlan came up with a special train and a crew of men last Thursday and commenced work on the Red Lake Falls line, They have been blocking up the damaged track with ties and finished their work late last night and departed for Crookston, The regular train will run down there today They will put gravel in place of the ties later on,

In this issue will be found a notice from the board of health to clean up, We hope the citizens of St. Hilaire will take hold of the matter in earnest and see that the village is thoroughly cleaned as soon as possible. We should remember that we had an epidemic of diphtheria here last winter and unless the village is thoroughly cleaned before warm weather we may expect the dread disease to reappear,

A case was tried in the district court at the last term of Allens vs the St. Hilaire Horse Company, the company having purchased a graded horse from Allen and when one of the notes came due, refused to pay it. Suit was brought and a verdict rendered to Allen, amounting to $900. Attorney Watts for the defendant carried the case to the supreme court and this morning received word that the verdict had been reversed.—Crookston Times.

Louis Larson, an elderly man, well known about the city, died last Friday evening at the Garfield house, of appoplexy. His family resides in Duluth, and were promptly telegraphed to but refused to take a hand in his burial. The family, it is understood, have ample means to have buried in a decent manner the husband and father but the expense and trouble were shouldered on to the village. He was buried in the Potter's field Tuesday morning.—Thief River Falls Press.

The ice went out of the river here last Sunday afternoon and about everybody in town spent the afternoon at the river. The water rose very rapidly and at the highest point was several inches higher than was ever known here. The county bridge had a very narrow escape the water being even with the lower beams, Large cakes of ice struck it and came very near taking it away, but fortunately no damage was except a shaking up. The water receded rapidly after the ice was out and is now several feet lower.

Certain people who know some of the facts of the alleged steal of pine in the Red Lake Indian reservation in Minnesota, declare that there is more in the matter than has yet been given out by officials of the interior department. Inspector Warriner, who has been in that section of Minnesota for several weeks, has written to Washington certain statements which indicate that Commissioner Lamoreaux's recent interview indicating that thefts had been prevented are scarcely borne out by facts, There are suspicious people here who think that the Wisconsin pine land ring, composed of big Democrats, may have used some of its power with the administration. On the other hand it is still maintained that the whole furore has been stirred up by Wm. Ball, a discharged inspector, and that there is no foundation for it. It is understood however, that those who have been trying to force a public expose of the alleged steal were depending almost entirely upon the evidence that would be secured through Inspector Warriner, who is now on the spot.—Minneapolis Journal.

A gentleman named John Sawyer who has been spending some time on the Red Lake reservation and claims to know whereof he speaks writes to the McIntosh news the following discouraging information regarding the prospects for the opening of the Red Lake reservation,

A small crew of timber appraisers have been at work about eighteen months and about two thirds of the pine has been appraised. Lately however, additional appraisers have been brought into service so that now the work will progress more rapidly. But owing to the nature of the work the appraising will not be completed for some months. A large portion of the reservation north of Red Lake is still unsurveyed. The Indian treaty stipulates that the reservation shall be surveyed and the pine timber appraised before the reservation shall be opened. Reliable authorities claim that it will take two years before the surveying can be completed—not on account of the great amount of work to be done but owing to the difficulty of surveying north of the lakes—most of it must be done when the ground is frozen. From these facts you can make calculations as to when this wonderful reservation will be opened, or the pine sold. The appraising, however, will undoubtedly be completed before another winter rolls onto us, for the reason that only the pine will be appraised, and there is no pine on the unsurveyed portion of the reserve—mostly tamarac swamp, and a most worthless swamp too

There is no bonanza north of Red Lake, neither for the white men nor for the Indians. The ones who will reap the most benefit from the sale of this reservation are the Indians, notwithstanding the many vague assertions that the lumbersharks will swallow up everything, To be sure we do expect some lumber companies to buy up the pine land, for that is the business they are in but when the profits are footed up they will not realize as much from the deal as we hear asserted on the side, When the time comes for selling this pine land anyone who wishes can bid thereon and buy up this bonanza that we read about The higher the bids are the more the Indians will realize, at the loss of the ones who buy. Thus the sale of this pine is a matter that does not concern the white men further than to buy whatever pine and they choose to. The red men reap all the proceeds.

A NEW YORKER.

He Was the Slave of Plain Accident and Mighty [illegible]

"From New York city?" queried an old farmer down in a New Jersey town where a railroad accident detained me week before last several hours.

"Yes, from New York," I replied.

"Waal, you've got a curious lot o' critters up thar."

"What do you mean?"

"Too blamed particular for anythin! It's a wonder you don't want a different air from what we breathe down here."

"Have you had a New Yorker down here?"

"I hev, and if he's a sample of your crop I never want to see another. He was drivin across from Vineland and broke down and staid with me overnight. Begun to put on airs the very first thing. Thought he was too awfully nice to wash him elf in the basin and wipe on the kitchen towel with the hired man and the rest of us. He wouldn't eat no fried pork for supper, and he jest tasted the other things and shoved back and said he was tired."

"Yes?"

"We tried to make him feel to hum in the evenin, but he was as contrary as a mule. One of the neighbor's gals come in and sung seven gospel hymns while my own gal played the organ, but he didn't seem to know what music was. I offered to play him a game of checkers, but he didn't thank me for it. Jest carried himself as if he was the salt of the airth an I we was dirt. The old woman wanted to make some 'lasses candy, but he turned up his nose and said he never eat it."

"Sure he was a New Yorker?"

"Oh, yes. We found that out for sure. When he went to go to bed he pitched off the feather bed and throwed one of the pillars on the floor. When he got up he kicked 'cause he didn't have water and towels in his room. We give him the best ha'rbrush in the house, but the blamed critter never used it. We borrowed the hired man's comb for him, but he jest looked at it and laid it down! The old woman humped herself to git a nice breakfast, but he didn't appreciate it. You could see what his bringing up was from the way he acted. He happened to git a fork with only one tine to it, and he asked the hired girl right out to change it for him! Even our preacher wouldn't hev done that. When I asked the blessing at the table, I had my eyes closed and couldn't see him, but the hired man will swear that he sort o' grinned all the time."

"I think he must have come from Brooklyn."

"No, he wasn New Yorker straight 'nuf, and I guess a fair sample of the rest of you from what I've heard. When he came to go and I charged him $2 for meals and lodgin's, he flung the money down on the table and went off mad. Why, them seven gospel hymns was worth $2.50, to say nuthin of two meals and a bed."

"From his actions I should say that he was from Jersey City. In fact, I know a man over there who"—

"You needn't try to crawl out of it, stranger," he interrupted. "The whole of you New Yorkers act as if you own the airth and part of Mexico, and I'm tellin you that if this train had to stay here for a month I wouldn't take one of you home with me short of $7 a day. Even then you'd hev to sign a paper that you wouldn't turn up your nose at the hot biscuits or kick at [illegible] with their [illegible] off."—New York Mercury.

A Shopping Daughter.

"Do you think it will [illegible]," she asked anxiously as she handled a [illegible] of the goods.

"No'm, I'm sure it won't."

"Nor shrink in the washing?"

"No'm. [illegible] shrunk already."

"How wide did you say it was?"

"Forty-two inches, [illegible]."

"That isn't [illegible]."

"It isn't made any wider."

"Are you sure it will wear well?"

"Certainly, ma'am, [illegible]."

"And won't fade [illegible]?"

"Not the least bit, ma'am."

"Do you exchange goods in this store?"

"Not after they are cut, ma'am."

"Then I won't trade here! I won't patronize a store where they're not more accommodating," and she walked away, leaving the clerk a wreck behind her.—Detroit Free Press.

Warning Him.

Head of Firm.—[illegible] & Co. are the biggest customers we have in St. Louis, aren't they?

Trammaker—Yes, sir.

Head of Firm—I expect to be there next week, and I will make them a friendly trip.

Trammaker—You'd better not. I made them a present of that box of cigars you gave me to take on my last trip.—Clothier and Furnisher.

A Proper Young Man.

Paterfamilias—Young man, the time has come when I must demand an explanation. Why do you pay such attention to my daughter without asking my approval?

Young Man—I thought it would be cheeky, you see, to ask your approval when we've been secretly married a year.—Life.

Exactly.

"I think it possible that marriage is the only state that is conducive to real happiness."

"Are you married?"

"Er—no, but I am engaged."

"Yes; I thought so."—Chicago Record.

Good Evidence.

She (after the service)—What makes you think my feet are so small?

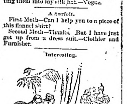
He—I noticed while we were in church that you seemed to have no trouble in getting them into my silk hat.—Vogue.

A Surfeit.

First Moth—Can I help you to a piece of this flannel shirt?

Second Moth—Thanks. But I have just got up from a dress suit.—Clothier and Furnisher.

Interesting.



Mrs. R.—Why, Mr. H., isn't that Miss M.?

Mr. H.—That was her name, I believe.

Mrs. R.—Ah, she's married, then! And pray do tell me what narrow brained, simpering idiot could have married her?

Mr. H.—You refer to the minister who performed the ceremony, I presume, as I am her husband.—Truth.

HE TALKED TOO MUCH.

The Story of a Little Chap Who Wanted to Get Aboard.

"It ain't no sign of bravery ter abuse folks over a high fence or from t'other side the river," said the captain, tilting the keg on which he was sitting so that his back might rest against the fish house. His companion sat by mending his nets. "Now when I was quite a lad," he went on, "I hed an experience that showed me what uncommon poor policy it is to be too funny—even at a distance."

"How was that?"

"Well, I was put in alternate cap'n on one of them steamers that runs in Frenchman's bay, an bein young an tolerable successful I got to thinkin I knowed pretty much the whole of it.

"One day we was layin at the wharf loadin the freight on, an I seen a little man walkin up an down waitin ter go aboard. He was a pompous lookin individual, an follerin an hangin on his words was two or three men that seemed ter consider what he said as golden speech.

"I kept thinkin that I wished it would come time ter start when he was way up t'other end of the wharf, an sure enough, just as he got much as a rod away it was time ter pull out.

"I pulled the whistle an waited full time, but he turned round mighty moderate an came toward the plank. The men commenced ter haul it on, an we fell back from the wharf. Then he broke into a run an waved his hat an shouted.

"When we was clear of everything I hollered back, 'Hurry up, little chap, or you'll hev ter walk!' an a lot of sech talk, when I got a signal from the cap'n that was 'longside ter put back, an findin somethin unusual was up I had to.

"The men lowered the plank, an the little man walked on board an come right up ter the pilothouse an passed me his card.

"He was the owner of the whole line of steamers, an he says very slow an kind: 'Seein it's walkin, p'r'aps you'd better go ashore now 'fore they draw the plank in. We shan't need you on this trip.'"

"What did you do?"

"Do? Why, I went of course, an my assistant run the trip. The matter was fixed up, but when I make a joke now I take keer it's one that ain't comin home ter roost."—Youth's Companion.

But Not Bright.

Just the Name.

Some years ago a Rochester clergyman in baptizing a baby paused in the middle of the service to inquire the name of the infant, to which the mother, with a profound courtesy, replied:

"Shady, sir, if you please."

"Shady!" replied the minister. "Then it's a boy, and you mean Shadrach, eh?"

"No, please, your reverence, it's a girl."

"And pray," asked the inquisitive pastor, "how happened you to call the child by such a name?"

"Well, sir," responded the woman, "if you must know, our name is Bower, and my husband said as how he should like her to be called Shady, because Shady Bower sounds so pretty."—Quips.

A Contrast.

Governor Russell's little son Eustis surprised his mother one morning a short time ago by exclaiming, "Mamma, I want a dark breakfast." Mrs. Russell was at a loss to know what he meant and demanded an explanation. "Well," replied the young hopeful, "last night you told Mary to give me a light supper, and I didn't like it. Now, mamma, please do let me have a dark breakfast."—Boston Globe.

A Good Plan.

"It would be to Chicago's interest to chip in and have New York's streets cleaned."

"Why so?"

"Visitors to the fair from foreign countries won't be able to get to Chicago. They'll get stuck in the mud in New York."—Harper's Bazar.

A Girl's Luncheon.

I took four girls to lunch one day,
May and Jane, sweet Bessie and Kate.
The garcon menus gave to us,
And then he had to stand and wait.

"Just order what you like," I said,
For we were out to have a time.
They read the menu through and through—
This is their order set to rhyme.

"Oh, anything will do," said Jane,
"And I will take the same," chimed May.
"It really matters not," said Kate,
And then sweet Bessie had her say.

"Pray, leave it not to me," she cried,
"For I can eat most everything."
And then she laughed a silly laugh,
And with her napkin cleaned her ring.

The waiter now impatient grew,
Much anger in his eyes did gleam,
But in another hour or so
They all decided on ice cream.

Whaling for Bone Chiefly.

Dead as whaling is on the Atlantic coast it is sufficiently lively on the Pacific, though the most valuable product of the voyage is no longer oil, but whalebone. The crude bone fetches in San Francisco from $4 to $6 a pound, and a great many hundred pounds may be taken from the mouth of a single whale. The demand is steady, and much of the bone is used in the manufacture of rich and heavy silks. No substitute has been found for it here, though other things are used for corsets and stays. Dressmakers make the use of real whalebone the excuse for charging especially high prices for their work, and the genuine article is vastly more durable and satisfactory than any substitute.—New York Sun.

Everyone is looking just now for the easiest method of renovating and beautifying their walls, and all wish for something that is inexpensive and tasty. All are desirous to do away with the unsanitary rotting of glue, incident to the use of kalsomines and wall papers. They wish for something that will not necessitate interminable washing and scraping next season, when they want a change—something that can be recovered with itself or even with wall paper at a comparatively small outlay of money and trouble—and such an article is mentioned in our advertising columns—Gypsine, a permanent cement base finish, which meets all the above requirements, and is, besides, the only plaster base goods which will not set in a dish, thus doing away absolutely with waste. It forms part of the wall, and can be covered with another coat of itself or anything else without washing or scraping, and is neat, clean and beautiful. Try it.

IT'S DANGEROUS GROUND that you stand on—with a cough or a cold, and your blood impure. Out of just these conditions comes Consumption.

You must do something. In the earlier stages of Consumption, and in all the conditions that lead to it, Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a certain remedy. This scrofulous affection of the lungs, like every other form of Scrofula, can be cured by it. In severe, lingering Coughs, all Bronchial, Throat, and Lung Affections, and every disease that can be reached through the blood, it is the only medicine so effective that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back. Nervous prostration and debility are conquered by it.

Even with the worst cases of Catarrh, after you've tried everything else, the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will agree to pay you $500 if they can't cure you completely.

Gentlemen:—I desire to make a brief statement for the benefit of the suffering. I had been afflicted with catarrh of the head, throat and nose, and perhaps the bladder for fully twenty-five years. Having tried other remedies without success, I was led by an advertisement in the Sentinel-Democrat to try Hall's Catarrh Cure. I have just finished my fourth bottle, and I believe I am right when I say I am thoroughly restored. I don't believe there is a trace of the disease left. Respectfully,

TALES OF THREE BENJAMINS.

Stories of the "Perfesh" Told While Waiting for an "Angel."

An overcoat edged with muskrat fur, an ulster adorned with a ruff of jack rabbit skin and a rusty ginger-colored Benjamin bobbed up and down in the wintry blasts that swept through West Twenty-eighth street, says the New York Recorder. The contents of each kept jigging away for dear life to prevent their blood from coagulating.

"You look sort of green around the gills," said the rat-fur to the ginger-colored one. "Got the 'grip,' eh?"

"Suffering like Old Harry from dyspepsia," replied old rusty. "Haven't eaten a mouthful in forty-eight hours."

"No leg pulling," interpolated the rabbit skin, tiptoeing from one foot to the other. "I reckon you haven't any grub to eat."

"That'll do you now; I'm tired of hearing about not eating," hotly retorted old ginger, pausing in a pirouette to glare at the skin of the bounding rabbit. "When I say dyspepsia I mean dyspepsia, not hunger."

"All right! all right! I meant no harm. I thought you were giving us a little guff."

"I never guff about my stomach."

"Well, if you are talking on the level I can give you a cure."

"Don't want it. I've tried 'em all."

"I don't doubt it," remarked the rabbit topcoat. "I recollect when Dan Bandmann had rheumatism he vowed he cured it with a salve made of green grease paint and cat fat."

"Talking about green paint," said the ulster, "Billy Burton made himself so unpopular with the stage hands in De Barr's house that instead of catching him when he flipped through a vampire trap they left a bushel or so of screw eyes, gimlets tacks at the foot of the shute, and poor Bill plumped right into them. He was knocked deaf, dumb and blind. They carried him up to the green room, and when the doctor came he found Bill's legs all mottled with greenyblue splotches.

"As the first doctor could make nothing of it he sent for a fellow physician, but before the second one came Bill came to his senses, and relieved the sawbones by explaining that as he was unable to procure a pair of colored tights to play Sprite in, he put on a pair of fleshings, and slipped up to the paint frame had the artist lay on a coat or two of size and color, which had oozed through and enameled his legs."

"That reminds me," remarked the rabbit skin ruff, "of a green apple pie and John E. Owens. You both remember what a petulent old bird he was. One night in Ellsler's house he bit into a pie in the dinner scene in The Cricket on the Hearth piece, and spat out the first mouthful. The curtain hadn't hit the stage before Owens was yelling for 'props.' When 'props' appeared he let fly the remainder of the pie and roared, 'What d'h—l kind of pie was that?' 'M-m-mince pie!' stammered the affrighted 'props.' 'Mince! Mince! you dod-gasted idiot, don't you know by this time that I'll eat nothing but apple pie in this scene?'"

"That's just like him," said the ginger-tinted coat, "always as hot as pepper. But talking of hot tempered men, how was Frank Chanfrau?"

"He was a cuckoo!" answered the rabbit-skin.

"Chanfrau was once rehearsing Kit, in Cincinnati, and things didn't go pat enough in the barroom scene to suit him. The company didn't fly around quick enough when the shooting began. He was particularly sore on one man who played the coon waiter, whose business it was to spring over and hide behind the bar as soon as the first shot was fired.

"He just simply crawled over. Frank was growing madder and madder every minute till at last he exclaimed, 'Look out there! This is the way I want it done.' Forgetting that he was no longer a youngster, he rushed across the stage and bounded over the bar; but his toes caught its edge, his nose cut a chip out of the edge of a flat and he fell all tangled up, so—"

"Say," interrupted the jack rabbit ruff, "there goes old man Bunnell! I wonder if he's looking for talent? Let's brace him!"

Thereupon the three Benjamins gave chase to the manager, running him to earth in an agent's office."

If You Were on the Moon.

If lunar conditions are favorable to human existence, and it is not certain that they are not, and you could be transported to the top of Pico or some other tall peak or rock on the surface of our "silvery sister world," how do you suppose things would look from such vantage ground? You would probably first turn your eyes in the direction of our earth, the world you had just quitted, but to you it would be a stranger. In place of the somber globe you would naturally expect to behold your eyes would be greeted with a most wonderful sight. The earth would appear to you to be sixty-four times larger than the sun appears to the residents of this mundane sphere; this because the earth has eight times the diameter of the moon, therefore she must necessarily show the moonites sixty-four times as much surface as the moon shows us. The sun, on the other hand, would appear no larger to you from your observatory on the moon than it does from our globe. The earth's atmosphere being blue it has been decided that the earth must appear as a blue ball to all outside on-lookers. What a glorious sight it must be to our lunarian neighbors to look upon a bright blue, swift-revolving ball sixty-four times larger than the sun!—St. Louis Republic.

SPORTSMEN NUMEROUS.

The United States Coming to the Front in the Matter of Gun Clubs.

Had the compilers of the last census given the same attention to collecting the statistics and data of the sportsmen as they did to all branches of trade the result would have furnished some startling information, bordering on the incredible. Harper's Weekly thinks it is safe to say that there is more wealth among the fraternity, more capital invested, more money spent annually, by the sportsmen of America than by any guild, society, order or whatsoever incorporated body in the United States. During the last ten years the increase and development of the sportsman have been phenomenal. A decade ago only the large cities had a gun club. To-day it is a small town, indeed, which does not boast of its "fine team." In fact, the modern gun club seems to have taken the place of the old-fashioned debating society, and the crack of the double-barrel has drowned the last echo of sky-scraping eloquence. The makers of fine guns in this country could be counted on the fingers of one hand ten years ago; now they are numerated by the score. The guns turned out by these factories, in which millions of dollars are invested, are of the very best, with all the latest improvements, and it is needless to add that the American manufacturer keeps pace with the world.

Of late the manufacture of fixed ammunition has increased. Formerly most sportsmen preferred to load their own shells, but it became apparent that the trade which made a specialty of that business could, by buying the ammunition in large quantities, furnish the shells loaded cheaper than the retail buyer could obtain the material to fill them, to say nothing of the time and labor expended. It is exceptional now to see any one who lives within reach of a railroad attempt to charge his shells, and even the small country stores offer loaded ones for sale, where only powder and shot could be obtained. The amount of ammunition used annually by the gun clubs would supply the armies of Europe. All this has awakened an enthusiastic love of real sport among the people. The time when the city youth fond of sport had to steal through the dark streets on his way to or from the country has passed away. The young man who confesses to a love of hunting is no longer pointed out as a "ne'er-do-well." America is fast becoming a nation of marksmen, and if there should ever be a war with foreign powers, the spectacle often witnessed on the late battlefields of Virginia, where fully one-third of the muskets borne were overloaded, underloaded, or in some way wrongly loaded, would not be repeated.

TOUGH GOOSE STORY.

But the Western Woman, Who Had Also Seen Queer Things, Believed It.

She was a Western woman and had been entertaining a room full of guests in an up town hotel with some extraordinary tales.

She had just finished one particularly a young Southerner present drawled:

"Madam, if any one else in the world had told that story I should have been compelled to doubt it, but, of course, I cannot refuse to believe you."

"Now," he continued, as if by way of retaliation, "you cannot fail to appreciate a most unusual occurrence in my state. The past winter, as you know, has been unusually severe in the South. Well, in November, when the wild geese were flying past us, a flock of them stopped to drink in one of the Carolina ponds.

"Being so much pleased with the water they loitered for a day or two. But one time while they were paddling around a sudden cold wave swooped down without any warning. A crust of ice formed over the pond in less than a minute, and there were the geese stuck as fast as if they had been nailed to a board.

"For several days the geese—there must have been a thousand of them—fluttered and squawked trying to extricate themselves, but to no purpose. The people in the neighborhood watched their struggles with more or less curiosity, and finally a mountaineer and his wife ventured on the ice to capture some of the game.

"The geese made one tremendous effort in unison and lifted the whole ascended until it became a mere speck in the sky and finally disappeared altogether. The neighbors are now watching every day when the weather moderates to see the old man and his wife drop from the clouds."

The Western woman looked up at the speaker and remarked: "Well, that certainly does seem incredible, but I don't doubt it, for I've seen too many queer things myself."—New York Herald.

Melliferous P. Chubbins, Naturalist.

There is an old negro in this city who swears he has seen flies eating glass. His name is Melliferous P. Chubbins, and he lives just a little distance beyond the popcorn vender's shop. People who use the electric lights often find small holes in the glass globes, which they have to patch up with putty. This old fellow says that he has seen the ordinary house fly, which often passes off for a caper with boiled mutton, alight on one of these globes, cut a ridge with its serrated hind legs and then with its saw-like teeth cut clear through the glass. It then goes inside to see if the light itself is not a big lump of extra clarified sugar. He says that the fly eats the fine glass dust and considers it an excellent substitute for calomel in removing bile from the system.—Florida Times-Union.

PROSPECT, O., March 20.

I had the Grippe and there has never been a waking moment since that I have not suffered with the headache, until I began using Kickapoo Indian Sagwa. Less than two bottles have completely cured me of headache; and I am satisfied that if I had not got some relief from some source within another year, I would have gone to my grave, or would have been a fit subject for the lunatic asylum. Nothing gave me any relief whatever except what I believe to be the greatest boon to humanity, Kickapoo Indian Sagwa.

FLIRTING IN SPAIN.

Several Ways in Which Young Men Declare Their Love.

One reason why the ladies of Spain enjoy so little freedom is because the Spaniard is fierce and bold in his passionate love-making. Young ladies are always chaperoned by an elderly one. Notwithstanding the guardianship, the Spaniard, on seeing the object of his affection approach the chapel door, will stride forward, and, deftly removing his long coat, spread it before the entrance for the fair ladies to step on.

Another way of love-making is for a number of young gentlemen to congregate near the font of holy water, which is always outside the door of the chapel, and as the lady approaches all the young gentlemen dip the two fingers into the holy water and proffer it to the young lady, and as every well-behaved young lady would never think of entering the chapel door without using the holy water, she generally touches the fingers of the young gentleman of her choice, and, making the sign of the cross, enters the place of worship.

Flirting in chapels or theaters is of common occurrence. The young man signals to the young woman by certain signs of the pocket handkerchief, which she returns with the expressive language of the "abanico," or fan. As all the women of the world are noted for their power of speech, the proverbial expression belongs to Spain—for ladies of that country are silent—their fan being the substitute for the tongue.—Syracuse Herald.

Birds Larger Than Ostriches.

At the last meeting of the Ornithological society in Berlin Dr. Reichnow communicated some of the particulars of the finding of remarkable remains of gigantic birds in Argentina double the height of the ostrich. In modern times many kinds of birds are becoming extremely rare, especially the dinornous races of New Zealand, which are beginning to die out. The lecturer presented a specimen of one of these birds, a very rare and costly apteryx hasselti, which inhabits the northern island of New Zealand, and, while resembling the ostrich, is very much larger. The government of New Zealand has determined to cut off some of the smaller island from all civilization in order, after destroying all the wild cats, pigs and other animals introduced there, to preserve as far as possible these birds.—London Daily News.

Mistress—That was a very nice letter of Patrick's offering you marriage, Mary. What shall I say in reply for you?

KNOWLEDGE
Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

"German Syrup"
Mr. Albert Hartley of Hudson, N. C., was taken with Pneumonia. His brother had just died from it. When he found his doctor could not rally him he took one bottle of German Syrup and came out sound and well. Mr. S. B. Gardiner, Clerk with Druggist J. E. Barr, Aurora, Texas, prevented a bad attack of pneumonia by taking German Syrup in time. He was in the business and knew the danger. He used the great remedy—Boschee's German Syrup—for lung diseases. 6

OFFICIAL PUBLICATION OF THE

General Laws of 1893

IN NEWSPAPERS.

Note by Secretary of State—This publication is made in accordance with section 43, chapter 5, of the General Statutes of 1878. In the effort to give this publication the most useful form, the title of every general law is given, and the same is numbered by chapters as they will appear in the official book publication; and where the law is not given in full a synopsis is made, whereby in many instances a better knowledge of the law is obtained than if it had been published in full.

CHAPTER 2—H. F. No. 694.

AN ACT to provide a New Capitol for the State of Minnesota:

Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Minnesota.

Section 1. That the governor be and he is hereby authorized, and it is made his duty forthwith to appoint by and with the advice and consent of the senate, seven suitable persons, one from each congressional district in the state, to act and be known as state capitol commissioners, who shall constitute a board to be known as the "board of state capitol commissioners," whose duty shall be to secure the erection of a new state capitol, according to the provisions of this act: Provided, however, that the governor shall be, ex-officio, the presiding officer of said board and shall have the right and opportunity to express his opinions and give his advice upon all measures or questions that may come before said board for consideration and determination, but shall not be deemed a member of said board, except for the purpose of presiding over their deliberations at their regular and special meetings, which shall be conducted according to the usual parliamentary rules. The persons thus appointed shall be subject to removal by the governor for cause, and should any vacancy occur in said board from death, resignation or otherwise, the governor shall fill the same by appointment, such appointment, however, to be subject to rejection or ratification by the senate at the first session of the legislature following such appointment.

Sec. 2. Each member of said board shall be entitled to receive his actual traveling expenses, and each member of said board, except the governor, shall receive the sum of five dollars per day for the time actually spent in the discharge of his duties under this act.

Sec. 3. Each of said commissioners, before entering upon the duties of his office, shall enter into bond in the sum of $25,000 with two or more good sureties to be approved by the governor, conditioned for the faithful performance of his duty under this act, payable to the State of Minnesota, and filed in the office of the secretary of state, and shall also take and subscribe the following oath, to be endorsed on said bond, and be administered by any one authorized to administer oaths, to wit:

"I, A. B., do solemnly swear that I will not, directly or indirectly, be interested or concerned, in any manner whatever, in the pieces or parcels of land or any of them, to be used as a site for a new state capitol building according to the provisions of this act, or in the purchase from the state of any lands or buildings to be sold under this act; and I will not, directly or indirectly, be interested or concerned in any manner with any contractor or contractors or person or persons, for the erection and location of the state capitol or any portion thereof, or in the proceeds or profits growing out of the same, or any work or labor done thereon, or material furnished in the erection of the same; so help me God."

And should the said commissioner offend against the true intent and meaning of this oath, he shall, upon indictment and conviction, suffer all the pains and penalties of perjury; and in case of a violation of the conditions of the bond provided for, he shall be liable to an action thereon in the district court of Ramsey county, and a judgment in favor of the state for such damages as may be awarded against the obligors thereto, by reason of failure of the principal.

Sec. 4. Within ten days after qualification as commissioners, the said board shall meet at the seat of government for the completion of their organization, and may elect one of their number vice president, whose duty it shall be to preside over the meetings of said board in the absence of the governor.

Sec. 5. The said board of commissioners shall appoint some proper person, not of their number, to superintend, under their direction, the erection of the state capitol as provided for in this act, whose duty shall begin after the contract for the building is let, and they shall also appoint a secretary, not of their number, whose duty shall be by them prescribed. Such superintendent and secretary thus appointed shall each receive for his services a reasonable compensation, to be established by the board, and before entering upon the discharge of his duties shall take the oath prescribed by the constitution for state officers, and give bond for the faithful performance of the duties of his office in the penal sum of ten thousand dollars.

Sec. 6. It shall be unlawful for either of the said commissioners to be interested, either directly or indirectly, in any manner whatsoever in the location of said new capitol site, or in any contract, or part thereof, for the erection of said capitol building, or for any work connected therewith, or for the furnishing of any supplies or material therefor, so as to receive any benefit therefrom, or the promise of any benefit therefrom, either by way of commission, rebate, bonus, division of profits, or otherwise; and any of said commissioners who shall violate this provision of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be subject to a fine not to exceed ten thousand dollars, and shall forfeit his right to, and be removed from his place on said board; and be found incapable of holding any office of trust or profit under the state; provided, further, that it shall be unlawful for said board of capitol commissioners to employ, or continue in employment, any person in the supervision or superintendence of the building of said capitol, or of any work connected therewith, who is in any manner connected or interested, directly or indirectly, in any contract for the erection of said capitol building, or for the furnishing of any supplies or material therefor; and the said board of commissioners are hereby charged with the rigid enforcement of this provision of this act.

Sec. 7. There shall be transferred in each of the years 1893 and 1894 from the general fund to the credit of the board of state capitol commissioners the sum of five thousand dollars, and in each succeeding year after the year 1894 until the completion of said capitol building, not exceeding ten years, a sum equal to the proceeds of a levy of two-tenths of a mill upon the assessed valuation of the state, for the purchase of a site, or part thereof, and the erection and completion of a new capitol building, in accordance with the terms and provisions of this act. Provided, that the total amount so transferred shall not exceed the sum of two millions of dollars.

Sec. 8. The board of capitol commissioners, as soon as practicable after the passage of this act, shall proceed to select a plan for a suitable capitol building for the State of Minnesota, said plan to be secured by competitive contest, and the following rules shall govern the board:

First.—The building shall be planned so that it can be properly built, with ample light and air, upon a lot surrounded by streets or open ground. The building shall be supplied with proper heating, lighting and ventilating apparatus, and with necessary sanitary arrangements.

Second.—The drawings required in the competition shall be as follows:

First—One plan of the cellar and each of the other floors.

Second—Three elevations of building front, one side and rear.

Third—One longitudinal and one transverse section.

Fourth—One perspective view on the scale of one-fourth inch to the foot (with point of site three hundred feet nearest the point to the building) which shall be rendered with cast shadows in brush wash in monotone, black or brown.

Third—All drawings submitted, except the perspective, shall be drawn on a uniform scale of one-eighth inch to the foot; and all shall be executed in india ink on heavy white paper without shading or shadows. Door and window openings may be tinted in india ink to show glass. Walls and partitions may be filled in solid with india ink. No landscape or figures shall be drawn on elevations, excepting one figure to indicate the scale.

Fourth—All drawings submitted shall be either mounted on stretchers or heavy book boards, with white or tinted paper borders, and no border lines or other framing will be allowed.

Fifth—The designs submitted shall be for a fire-proof building and one that can be completed at a cost, including site and all other expenses, not exceeding two million dollars.

Sixth—The drawings shall be sent to the board of capitol commissioners at St. Paul, Minn., and shall come with the real name and address of the architect or firm submitting the same distinctly printed or written on each sheet.

Seventh—There shall also be a type-written description designating the materials the author proposes using in the construction of building, and such other general information as cannot be shown on the several drawings herein called for, as may be necessary to accurately determine the cost of the building. No drawings or documents other than those herein called for will be received.

Eighth—Every design shall be excluded from competition as to which it appears that any attempt is made by its author to influence the decision of the members of the board, or their advisors; or, if in any particular violates the conditions herein stated; or if it be found that its probable cost will exceed the limits herein named.

Ninth—From the designs furnished which conform to these conditions the board may select one to be the design of the new state capitol. This design shall be in the possession of the state, but shall remain the property of the architect or firm who made it, and shall not be used in whole or in part except said architect or firm is employed as architect and superintendent of the building according to the rules of the American Institute of Architects, except as to fees which will not exceed two and one-half per cent of the amount named in said bill; but said board may reject any and all plans and proceed anew until a satisfactory plan is secured.

Tenth—The board shall secure two architects and one expert heating and ventilating engineer of reputation, who shall not be competitors, to assist them, and one of said architects shall be a resident of this state. One of these architects, who shall be a resident of the state, shall be selected by the board, the other by the Minnesota Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, and, with one of the members of the board selected by the board to serve them, shall form a committee to examine and recommend the most desirable plan.

Provided, however, that the commission shall not adopt any plan unless it shall first have received the endorsement of a majority of the committee provided for in subdivision ten of section eight and provided any plan shall have received such endorsement.

The architects on the committee provided for by this subdivision shall be subject to the provisions of section six of this act.

Four premiums shall be given to the aggregate amount of two thousand dollars, to be awarded to the designs adjudged to stand in point of merit; second, third, fourth, fifth, the accepted design to receive no premium other than the fee allowed by the board for designing and superintending the said building.

Eleventh—No design shall be received after the date fixed for submission of plans. All drawings shall be exhibited in public at least two weeks before the award is made.

All drawings shall be the property of the architects or firms submitting them and only used in whole or in part by agreement with and compensation to their authors. All rejected drawings shall be called for within thirty days after the decision of the competition, after which time the board shall no longer be responsible for them.

Twelfth—The board shall issue to all architects upon request a printed schedule of the requirements for the building, including a list of the number and approximate area of the rooms, and such other general conditions as are essential to clearly set forth the requirements of the building.

Sec. 9. No plan shall be adopted except upon detailed accurate specifications of the cost of supervision, labor, material and of other expenditures necessary for the erection and completion of said capitol building, including heating and ventilating apparatus, lighting and all other fixtures, nor until it shall be definitely ascertained that the entire cost of the same will in no event exceed the sum of two million dollars, it being understood that it is the object of this act to restrict the aggregate and entire cost of the capitol building and site thereof and all expenditures to be made or authorized by said board to this sum, and the board of commissioners herein appointed shall have this object in view, and all contracts awarded and plans accepted, shall be awarded and accepted only after the board shall be satisfied that the cost of the building when completed, shall not exceed this amount.

Sec. 10. The said board of state capitol commissioners, as soon as practicable after the passage of this act, shall give due and reasonable notice to all parties interested, by sufficient publication in two daily newspapers of general circulation in this state, designating a time and place when and where the board will receive sealed proposals to sell or grant to state of Minnesota land or grounds in the lots and blocks next to or immediately adjoining the block of land now constituting the site of the present state capitol, sufficient in area, together with the present capitol site and the intervening street or streets, for the site of the new capitol herein provided for; such sealed proposals to be in every case accompanied by a plat of the lands or grounds proposed as such site; the price at which the same will be conveyed to the state of Minnesota, and the terms and conditions upon which such conveyance will be made, and any other information that said board may deem desirable; and every such proposal to be accompanied by a bond in the sum of ten thousand dollars properly executed and signed by the party or parties making such proposal, and at least three financially responsible persons as sureties, conditioned for the faithful performance of such proposal in all its details. No proposals shall be received after the date designated in said notice for examining the same, and said published notice shall state that said proposals will be publicly opened and examined at a time and place in said notice named.

And at the time and place in said notice named the said board shall meet and then and there publicly open such sealed proposals and examine the same; and as soon thereafter as may be practicable shall go upon and view the lands or grounds described in every such proposal that shall conform in all respects to the requirements of said published notice and the provisions of this act, and shall thoroughly investigate the same to the end that they may be fully informed as to the merits of the different proposed sites.

Sec. 11. Said board are hereby authorized, after they shall have properly examined all such proposed sites to select and secure such a site for the capitol building of Minnesota, which shall include the present capitol site, as shall, in their judgment, be most advantageous to the state for the purpose contemplated in this act, and for that purpose said board are hereby authorized and empowered in the name and on behalf of the state to enter upon, purchase, take and acquire any lands and premises, public or private, that may be necessary, convenient or proper for the purpose of such site, or any part thereof, and in case the owner of any such lands or grounds and said board cannot agree as to the value of the premises taken or to be taken for such use, the value thereof shall be determined by the appraisal of three reputable free holders of the state, not directly or indirectly interested in the premises to be taken, and to be appointed on the application of said board by any judge of the district court of any judicial district of this state. And said commissioners in their assessment of damages shall appraise such premises and the respective estates and interests therein at their actual market value, and upon return into court of such appraisement and upon payment into the same of the appraised value of the premises so taken, said premises shall be deemed to be and shall become the property of the state, save as herein otherwise provided, all provisions of title 1, of chapter 34, of the general statutes of one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, so far as reasonably applicably, shall apply to and govern proceedings under this act.

Sec. 12. All labor, material, transportation, or construction required by the provisions of this act, as well as all job printing, advertising or other work which can be done under this act, shall be done or furnished by contract. The board are authorized to contract for the construction of the entire building by a contractor who may undertake the whole work, or the said board may divide the work into appropriate classes and make separate contracts as to either of them as may or may not seem to them to be for the best interests of the state; but in the event of separate contracts the total amount to be paid for the whole work, including the purchase or securing of the site, the plans, supervision and erection of the building and all expenditures of every nature to be made or contracted for by virtue of this act, shall not exceed said sum of two million dollars as aforesaid, nor shall any contract, or contracts, take effect until all of said work of erecting and completing said building shall have been contracted for, and said contracts shall be absolutely void if in the aggregate said contracts and expenditures to be made shall be for a sum so exceeding said sum of two million dollars. All lettings of the work exceeding in amount the sum of five hundred dollars shall be advertised in two daily newspapers of general circulation in this state for not less than thirty days, and shall call for sealed bids, accompanied by such security as said board shall prescribe. All bids received by said board may be by them rejected, and whether accepted or rejected, shall within thirty days after decision thereon by said board be deposited in the office of secretary of state. In all contracts the interest of the state shall be protected by proper bonds to be determined by said board; provided, that no such bonds shall be in a sum less than one-half of the contract price. All contracts for material and labor shall be in writing, and shall be signed by the contractor and the president or vice president of the board; in any cases where there are bidders and materials from other states, the preference shall be given, the quality and terms being equally favorable, to the bidders and materials within this state. All contracts with the builders, architects, engineers, superintendents or material men, shall reserve the right of the board, for good cause shown, to annul the contract, and the board shall make no allowance for damages, but only for expenses incurred and for labor performed. Such per cent, not less than ten, as in the judgment of the board shall seem proper, shall be reserved from payments on the monthly estimates on work contracted, until such contract, or the portion thereof to which such payments are by the terms of such contract made applicable, shall have been completed, inspected and accepted. All materials contracted for shall be of the best quality and so far as the said board are of the opinion that the same can be done consistently with the best interests of the state, preference shall in all cases be given to Minnesota material and labor, and the directions, plans and specifications of the work shall be executed by skilled and reputable architects, contractors, artists, mechanics and laborers.

No contract shall be made which shall bind the state to the payment of any sum until the same shall be by law made applicable thereto.

Sec. 13. For the due prosecution of the work hereby committed to their charge the said board are hereby authorized to and shall employ such architects, mechanics and laborers as may be deemed necessary, and payment of all expenditures made in or in any manner connected with the securing of a site and erection and construction of said building and for the services of the members of said board, of the governor, superintendent and secretary and consulting architects, and for traveling expenses of the governor and members of the said board in the performance of their duties under this act, shall be made upon full and complete statements or accounts, which shall be made and certified to by a majority of the members of said board and approved by the governor; such statement of account shall then be laid before the state auditor for examination, and if found correct and in compliance with this act, shall be audited and shall be paid by the state treasurer, upon the warrant of the state auditor, out of any money in his hands for such purpose, such warrant to be drawn in favor of and to the order of the person or persons entitled to receive the amount therein named.

And the said auditor shall forthwith deliver to the clerk of every city, town and village in his county the necessary copies of each of said blanks, and one copy of the said law, or abridgement thereof, for each judge of election in each of said cities, towns and villages.

Sec. 10. Whenever there is no election of any state or county officers, or of the required number of members of the house of representatives or senate, or of representatives in congress, by reason of any two or more persons having an equal and the highest number of votes for any such office, or whenever any vacancy occurs in any of the said offices, which said vacancy is not otherwise provided for, the governor, within ten days after he is informed of such vacancy or failure to elect, shall issue a proclamation directing that a special election be held in the proper election district or districts, at a time to be specified in the proclamation, not more than twenty days from the date thereof, to fill such office, and said election shall be called in the manner herein provided for calling elections. Sec. 13. The term "vacancy" or any equivalent phrase, as used herein, shall be deemed to mean such as exists when there is an unexpired part of a term of office without a lawful incumbent therein, or when the person elected or appointed to an office fails to qualify according to law, or when there has been no election to fill the office at the time appointed by law, and whether the vacancy is occasioned by death, resignation, removal from the state, county or district, or otherwise.

Sec. 14. Any state, county or district officer elected or appointed to fill a vacancy shall qualify and enter upon the duties of his office immediately thereafter. When elected he shall hold the office during the unexpired term for which he is elected, and until his successor is appointed and qualified; but if appointed to, he shall hold his office until the next general election, when his successor for the remainder of the unexpired term shall be chosen, and until his successor is elected and qualified.

Sec. 15. Uniform printed instructions to voters, printed in large type upon cards or heavy paper, shall be furnished by the secretary of state to the county auditor of each county, containing any information that will enable the voters to quickly make and correctly designate their choice.

Whenever the county auditor of any county notifies the secretary of state that the printed instructions are also needed in a foreign language or languages, and such foreign language is stated, then it shall be the duty of the secretary of state to furnish such printed instructions in such foreign language or languages.

Copies of any proposed amendment to the constitution or other question to be submitted to the electors shall be printed, distributed and posted as now provided by law.

Said cards shall be sufficient in number to allow one for each booth at each election district, and four for each district in addition thereto; and the county auditor shall deliver said cards to the city, village and township clerks in the county.

Said city, village or township clerks shall furnish such cards to each polling place, one of which cards shall be posted in each booth, two in the polling room and two on the outside of the building in which the voting takes place.

Sec. 17. No spirituous, malt or intoxicating liquor shall be sold or given away, nor shall any store, saloon or bar room where such liquor is sold or given away, be open on any general or special election day at any time between the hour of five o'clock in the forenoon and the hour of eight o'clock in the afternoon. Whoever violates any provision of this section shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than three hundred for each offense, and in default thereof shall be imprisoned in the county jail for a period not exceeding six months.

Sec. 18. It shall be the duty of the mayor, sheriff, constable and other officers and magistrates to see that the provisions of the next preceding section are strictly enforced, and the mayor on the day next preceding any election shall issue a proclamation that the provisions of said section will be strictly enforced; and if he fails to perform the duties herein prescribed, he shall be subject to a fine of one thousand dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail for sixty days, or both, in the discretion of the court; but no failure on the part of the mayor to issue said proclamation shall exempt any person violating said last preceding section from the penalty therein prescribed.

Sec. 19. The only method of voting at any election shall be by ballot, and all ballots hereafter voted at any election in the state of Minnesota shall be printed as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 20. There shall be one ballot on plain white paper, upon which shall be printed the names of all candidates for office who are to be voted for throughout the entire state, all amendments to the constitution, and all other questions or propositions that are to be submitted to the electors throughout the state.

Said ballots on plain white paper shall be printed under the direction of the secretary of state, and bound in blocks of one hundred ballots to the block, the expense whereof shall be defrayed from the state treasury, and shall by the secretary of state be distributed to the auditors of the different counties in such quantities as shall be necessary to enable the city, village or township clerks to fully comply with the provisions of this act, such ballots to be forwarded to the county auditors by express at least fifteen days before election, and a receipt, stating the number of ballots and the date on which they were received, shall be taken therefor. On the fourth Tuesday preceding the day of election a sample ballot shall be printed and placed on file for examination in the office of the said secretary of state.

Sec. 21. There shall be one ballot on pale-tinted red paper, upon which shall be printed the names of all candidates for office which are to be voted for in any city or municipality at a city or municipal election for city or municipal officers; and also all questions or propositions that are to be submitted to the electors of such city or municipality, and which pertain to the same only.

Said ballots on tinted red paper shall be printed under the direction of the city clerk or recorder and bound in blocks of one hundred ballots to the block, the expense whereof shall be defrayed from the city treasury, and shall, together with white and blue ballots, and printed instructions herein provided for, be distributed by the city clerk to the judges of election for each polling place, and a receipt, stating the number and color of ballots and the date on which they were received, shall be taken therefor. On the Tuesday next preceding the day of election a sample ballot shall be printed and placed on file for examination in the office of said clerk or recorder.

Sec. 22. There shall be one ballot on light blue paper, upon which shall be printed the names of all candidates for office other than those specified in the two preceding sections; and also all questions or propositions to be submitted to the electors which are not properly to be placed upon the ballots specified in said two preceding sections.

Said ballots on blue paper shall be printed under the direction of the county auditor of each county, and bound in blocks of one hundred ballots to the block, the expense whereof shall be defrayed from the county treasury, and shall be distributed by the county auditor, together with the ballots received from the secretary of state, to city, village and township clerks within his county in such quantities as shall be necessary to enable such clerks to fully comply with the provisions of this act. It shall be the duty of each of the county auditors to give written notice to each city, village and township clerk within his county as to the time when the official ballots will be ready for distribution; and it shall be the duty of the city, village or township clerks aforesaid to go to the county seat and receive the official ballots from the county auditors; such ballots to be furnished such clerks on the Thursday next preceding the day of election, and receipts, stating the number and color of ballots and the date on which they were received, shall be taken therefor. On the second Thursday preceding the day of election, a sample ballot shall be printed and placed on file for examination in the office of said county auditor.

Sec. 23. Each city, village and township clerk shall provide for each polling place or election district in his city, village or township one hundred ballots of each kind to be voted in the district for every seventy-five or fraction of seventy-five electors registered at the last preceding election in the district, and, in the event of known large increase in the number of voters in any district, said clerk shall provide such additional ballots as may be necessary.

Sec. 24. All ballots shall be printed with black ink on paper of sufficient thickness to prevent the printing thereon from showing through or being discernible from the back, and all ballots of the same color shall be substantially uniform as to style, size, thickness, shade of color and the type used, and the same sized type shall be used for all candidates to be voted for on the same ballot. In the event that ballots of any class shall be printed on paper of the same general tint, but varying in shade, all such ballots used at the same election district shall be of the same shade.

Sec. 25. Every ballot printed under the direction of the secretary of state, in accordance with the provisions of this act, shall be not less than four inches nor more than six inches in width, and of such length as the number of candidates to be voted for and questions submitted may render necessary, and shall contain the official designation of all offices proper to be placed thereon, such designation being followed by the name of the candidates for each of the respective offices whose nomination shall have been fully made and not withdrawn. The titles of said offices shall be arranged in such order as the secretary of state shall direct, not inconsistent with the provisions of this act. The name of each candidate and of the office to be filled shall be printed at right angles with the length of the ballot in plain Roman type, which type shall not be larger than the size known as "long primer" nor smaller than the size known as "brevier." The name of each candidate shall be printed in capital letters, preceded on the same line the title of the office for which he is a candidate, the same being printed in capitals and small letters, or what are known as upper and lower case. Each name shall be followed on the same line in upper and lower case letters by the party designation or politics of the candidate. Opposite and at the right of and on a line with said name and party designation, near the margin of said ballot, shall be left a vacant space so enclosed by rule work as to make a square three-eighths of an inch in size, in which the elector may designate his choice by a crossmark (X) as in this act provided. Above and below each name shall be printed across the ballot a narrow line except that above and below each office a heavier line shall be so printed. After the name of the last named candidate for each office shall be placed as many blank lines as there are like offices to be filled, and in all cases the lines separating the names of candidates shall be three-eighths of an inch apart. In each blank space wherein no name is printed shall be printed the title of the office next above stated therein. At right angles with said lines and at the right of said small squares shall be printed opposite each office the words, "vote for one," or "vote for two," or more, the number to correspond with the number to be elected. Small squares shall be left at the right-hand margin of blank lines, on which lines the voter may write the names of any persons for whom he desires to vote, whose names are not upon the ballot, and in which small squares he may make cross marks (X) as in the case of names printed thereon. The first name printed for each office or group of names, if more than one, is to be voted for for the same office, shall be that of the candidate of the political party which at the last preceding general state election polled the largest number of votes, the same to be determined by the average vote received by such of its candidates as were not endorsed by any other party. In like manner the second and additional lines shall be filled with the names of candidates of other political parties receiving respectively the next highest number of votes. Names of candidates nominated by petitioners shall follow the candidates of conventions in the order in which the same are filed. Each white ballot shall contain above the first name thereon the words, "Put a cross-mark (X) opposite the name of each candidate you wish to vote for in the squares indicated by the arrow," and on a line with said words and over said small squares shall be printed a small arrow or point thereof pointing downward. Said white ballot shall be headed in heavy-faced plain letters, not smaller than long primer nor larger than great primer in size, with heavy rule above and below the same, said heading to consist of the word "State" or "State Ballot," as the secretary of state may determine.

When a president and vice president of the United States are to be elected, the presidential electors of each party shall be grouped together and printed as aforesaid, the names in each group to be arranged in the order in which they are filed. The political or party designation shall be printed as in the case of other candidates, and following said designation and on the same line shall be printed in bold type the surname of the presidential candidate represented. The groups of presidential electors shall be separated from each other by a blank space at least one inch in width, but no blank lines shall be printed therein as in the case of other candidates or groups. When presidential candidates are to be elected the ballot shall be headed "Presidential," or "Presidential Electors," and the state ballot shall be printed below the same with a blank space one inch in width between the same.

Sec. 26. Every ballot to be printed under the direction of the county auditor, city clerk or other official other then secretary of state, shall be prepared as near as may be substantially in the same manner as provided for the state ballot, and when the election is to be held at the same time as the general state election, the various tickets shall be arranged in the same order as on the state ballot, regardless of the vote polled in any particular county or municipality. When, however, the election is not held in conjunction with a general state election the party tickets shall have the precedence on the ballot in the order of the vote polled at the last general election within the territory in which the election is to be held.

Sec. 27. On the back of each ballot shall be printed in plain type, not smaller in size than great primer, the words "Official Ballot," the date of the election, and a facsimile of the signature of the officer under whose direction the ballot is printed, together with his official title and a space for the initials of judges of election. Said printing to be so done as to be plainly visible when the ballot is properly folded and ready for deposit.

Sec. 28. Whenever a constitutional amendment or other proposition is submitted to be voted on by the people, the substance of such amendment or proposition shall be clearly indicated at the bottom of the ballot and upon the proper ballot, and two spaces shall be left upon the margin, one for votes favoring the amendment or proposition to be designated by the word "Yes" at the left of said space, and one for the votes opposing the amendment or proposition, to be designated by the word "No" at the left of the second space.

Said constitutional amendment or other proposition shall be printed at the lower part of the ballot, separated from other printing by a blank space at least one-half inch in width. The elector shall designate his vote by a cross-mark opposite the word "yes" or "no," as the case may be, in the small square or space provided therefor.

Sec. 29. Each officer shall place upon the ballot by him to be printed only the names of candidates who are nominated for offices properly to be placed upon such ballot by him to be printed under the provisions of this act.

No ballot shall be furnished to any judges of election which contains the name of any candidate who is not properly to be voted for in the election district where such judges are to sit on the day of election.

Sec. 30. If any person employed or authorized to print official ballots; or any person employed in printing the same, shall give or deliver, or knowingly permit to be taken any of said ballots, by any person other than the official under whose direction such ballots are being printed, or shall knowingly print or cause or permit to be printed any ballot in any other form than the one prescribed herein, or with any other names thereon, or with the names spelled or the names or offices thereon arranged in any other way than that authorized and directed by the said official, he shall be guilty of felony and on conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for a term not less than six months, nor more than one year, or by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars nor more than two thousand dollars, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 31. Any assembly or convention of delegates, held for the purpose of making nominations to public office, or electors to the number hereinafter specified, may nominate candidates for public office, to be filled by election within the state.

Said nomination shall be made by delivering to and leaving with the officer charged by this act with directing the printing of the ballots upon which the name is to be placed, within the time prescribed by this act, a certificate of nomination for each candidate.

Sec. 32. The certificate of nomination, which may consist of one or more writings, shall contain, first, the name of the person nominated; second, the office for which he is nominated; third, the party or political principle he represents (expressed in not more than three words); fourth, his place of residence, with street and number thereof, if any. In case of electors of president and vice president of the United States, the names of the candidates for president and vice president may be added to the party or political appellation.

Sec. 33. The certificate of nomination of a candidate for office selected by any convention of delegates, as herein defined, shall be signed and certified by the presiding officer and secretary of said convention, who shall also take and subscribe an oath before some proper officer that the facts stated in the certificate are true, and the secretary shall immediately deliver such certificates of nomination to the officer charged with directing the printing of the ballots, upon which the name is to be placed, and in case he shall neglect to do so he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sec. 34. An assembly or convention of delegates within the meaning of this act, is an organized assemblage of delegates representing a political party, which at the last general election before the holding of such convention or assembly polled at least one per cent of the entire vote cast in the state, county or other division or district for which the nomination is made.

Sec. 35. The certificate of nomination of a candidate selected otherwise than by a convention of delegates, shall be signed by electors resident within the district or political division from which the candidate is presented, to a number equal to one per cent of the entire vote cast at the last preceding election in the state, county or other political division or district from which the nomination is made.

Provided, however, that the number of signatures required in the case of any state officer shall not exceed two thousand.

Sec. 36. No certificate of nomination shall contain the name of more than one candidate. No person shall join by certificate signed by electors in nominating more than one nominee for the same office, unless more than one person is to be elected thereto, in which event he may sign as many certificates as there are officers to be elected.

Sec. 37. Following the facts required to be stated in each certificate of nomination to be signed by electors shall be written or printed an oath in the following form: "I solemnly swear (or affirm) that I know the contents and purpose of this certificate, and signed the same of my free will." Each signer, at the time of signing, shall be sworn by some proper officer.

Sec. 38. If any certificate of nomination shall contain the name of more than one candidate for any office to be filled, neither name shall be printed as a candidate for such office.

Sec. 39. If any elector shall join in nominating by petition more than one nominee for any office to be filled, there being but one such office to be filled, such person shall not be counted as a petitioner for either nomination.

Sec. 40. In case a vacancy occurs from any cause after nominations have been made, as heretofore specified, such vacancy may be filled at any time before the official ballot is posted by filing with the proper officer a certificate of nomination in form and substance as hereinbefore provided, containing the name of the person substituted to fill the vacancy.

Such substitutional certificate shall be executed by the chairman and secretary of the proper committee of the party making the nomination, the vacancy of which is to be filled, under such directions and regulations as the convention shall have specified, or in case none have been specified, then under the direction of the proper state, county, district or city committee, as the case may be.

Sec. 41. In case of the death, removal or resignation of any candidate, after the printing of such ballots and before such election, it shall be lawful for the campaign committee of the state, district, county or other political organization of which such candidate was a member to make a nomination to fill such vacancy, and the chairman of said committee may provide the boards of election in each election district in which such candidate is to be voted for with a number of adhesive pasters, containing only the name of such candidate, at least equal to the number of ballots provided each precinct, but no pasters shall be given to or received by any one except such board of election from such chairman, and it shall be the duty of the said board of election to put such pasters in a careful and proper manner and in the proper place on each ballot be fore either of said board shall sign his initials thereon.

When said vacancy shall occur before the official ballots shall have been delivered by the secretary of state, the county auditor or the city clerk, as provided in this act, said adhesive pasters may be delivered to either of said officers, as the case may be, and shall by them be delivered with said official ballots, and boards of election, on receiving the same, shall put said pasters on said ballots as hereinbefore provided.

Sec. 42. In case of members of congress, judges of the district court and all other candidates voted for in any district or division smaller than the entire state, but larger than an entire county, whenever such candidate is nominated by any convention of delegates, as specified in this act, it shall be the duty of the president and secretary of such convention to file a certificate, as therein specified, with the county auditor of each county in the congressional, judicial or other district for which the nomination is made.

Whenever any such nomination in any such district is made by a certificate of nomination by petitioners, such original certificate containing the original signatures shall be filed with the county auditor in the county where the candidate resides, and the said auditor shall certify to as many correct copies of the same, if presented to him, as there are other counties in the district, and one of said certified copies shall be filed within the proper time with the county auditor of each said county in the district, and shall be authority for such auditors to place the name upon the blue ballots.

Sec. 43. Whenever it shall appear by affidavit presented to any judge of the supreme or district courts of the state that an error or omission has occurred in the printing of the name or description of any candidate on official ballots, or that any other error has been committed in printing the ballots, or that the president or secretary of any caucus or convention have failed to properly make or file any certificate of nomination, or that the name of any person has been wrongfully placed upon said ballots as a candidate, such judge shall, immediately, by order, require the officer or person charged with the error or neglect, to forthwith correct the error, or perform his duty, or to show cause forthwith why such error should not be corrected or such duty performed. Failing to obey the order of such judge shall be contempt.

Sec. 44. Names must be handed to and filed with the secretary of state, to be placed upon the white ballots, in accordance with the provisions of this act, on or before the fifth Saturday preceding the day of election.

Names must be handed to and filed with the county auditor to be placed upon the light blue ballots on or before the third Tuesday preceding the day of election.

Names must be handed to and filed with the city clerk or other proper officer to be placed upon the tinted-red ballots on or before the second Saturday preceding the day of election.

In all cases provided for in this section the secretary of state, county auditor, city clerk or other proper officer shall immediately give or send the person handing in any name or names to be placed upon the ticket an acknowledgment thereof, upon the same day which it is received and shall file and preserve such certificates, and they shall be subject to inspection like other records. But no filing of any name shall be deemed complete until the necessary fee shall be tendered the proper officer, when the name is handed or presented to him as aforesaid.

Sec. 45. The secretary of state and county auditors and city clerks shall respectively place upon the several ballots printed by them the name of each candidate for office, who shall have been nominated as hereinbefore provided, and whose certificate of nomination has been presented within the time specified, and on payment of the fee prescribed by law which shall be as follows:

For each name tendered to be placed upon the white ballot, fifty dollars to be received by the secretary of state and by him paid into the state treasury; for each name tendered to be placed upon the red ballot five dollars to be received by the city clerk and by him paid into the city treasury; for each name tendered to be placed upon the blue ballot, ten dollars, to be received by the county auditor and by him paid into the county treasury. Provided, that when any candidate is nominated for the same office by more than one political party, the name after party by whom he was first nominated shall be given the first place following his name, and

Provided, that where the person whose name is to be placed upon the blue ballot, is to be voted for in more than onecounty, as in case of members of congress, judges of district courts, etc., then the fee shall be twenty dollars, and shall be divided among the several counties as nearly equal as may be, and the portion due each, paid at the time and in the manner as provided for single counties.

Sec. 46. Every township, city and village clerk at least fifteen days before the holding of any general election and twenty days before the holding of any special election, shall give public notice of the time and place of holding such election and the hours during which the polls will be open by posting in three public places in every election district three notices each containing a list of the officers to be elected at such election, one of which notices shall be posted up at the place of holding the election: Provided, that no failure of the clerk to give such notice as aforesaid shall invalidate an election.

Sec. 47. The election shall be held in each election district at the place where the last preceding election was held, except as hereinafter provided; but, if in any town a vote is taken to hold it elsewhere, the next ensuing election shall be held at the place designated by such vote.

Sec. 48. The municipal council of every incorporated city or village shall, by ordinance or resolution, appoint the place of holding the election in each election district in said city or village. When the place shall not be so designated the election shall be held as near as may be, at the place of holding the then last preceding election, subject, however, to change or removal before the opening of the polls, as elsewhere provided in this act.

Sec. 49. When in any township the supervisors shall have divided the same into two or more election districts, as provided in section three of this act, they shall designate the place for holding the election in each of such districts, at least thirty days before the day of election, and shall give notice thereof by posting proper notices in three public places in each election district at least twenty-five days before the day of election, which said notices shall contain the designation of the boundaries of and the place for holding said election in the election district wherein the same are so posted.

Sec. 50. The township supervisors shall be judges of election in the election districts in which they reside, unless all of said supervisors shall be members of one political party and reside in the same election district, in which event not more than two shall so serve as judges of election, to be determined by lot if not otherwise agreed upon.

But no supervisor shall be required so to serve as judge of election, and if he declines so to serve he shall so notify the town clerk in time for the appointment of judge of election as in this section provided. Whenever it shall become necessary to appoint one or more judges of election by reason of the disqualification or unwillingness of one or more supervisors so to serve or by reason of the division of the township into two or more election districts, said supervisors shall on the first day they meet for registration appoint the same, and shall give notice thereof by posting proper notices in three public places in each election district at least ten days before the day of the election.

Sec. 51. The city council of all incorporated cities, and the municipal councils of all incorporated villages, which constitute one or more separate election districts, shall, at least twenty-five days before any election, appoint three qualified electors of each election district of said city or village, as hereinafter provided, who shall be judges of election in their election districts, respectively, and who shall appoint two qualified electors of their election districts as clerks of election. Provided, that members of any village council, in villages having but one election district, and not included in any township election district, shall be judges of election, however to the qualifications and restrictions provided for township supervisors in like cases.

Sec. 52. Two qualified electors in each election district shall be appointed by the judges of election therein to serve as clerks of election for such district, except that in towns the town clerk, and in villages having but one election district and not included in any township election district, the village clerk shall serve as one of the clerks of election in the election district in which he resides. No more than two judges and one clerk of election shall belong to the same political party, and no person shall be eligible or serve as judge or clerk of election unless he be a qualified voter within the election district in which he sits, nor unless he can read, write and speak the English language understandingly, nor if he be a candidate for any office.

Sec. 53. At least thirty days before any election in any city or in any incorporated village having two or more election districts, the local committees of the several parties participating at the last preceding election may furnish to the city council, or other appointing authorities, a list of qualified electors for the various election districts to act as judges of election, which lists shall be certified to by the several secretaries of such committees. Said judges of election, in cities and incorporated villages, shall be selected from the lists submitted by said local committees in the following manner:

One for each election district from each of said lists so recommended by the said different parties; the first to be selected from the list submitted by the party polling the largest number of votes in said city or village at the last preceding general election; the second from the list submitted by the party polling the second largest number of votes at the last preceding general election; the third from the list submitted by the party polling the third largest number of votes at the last preceding general election.

If either of the local committees of the three parties respectively polling the first, second or third largest number of votes at the last preceding general election shall fail to furnish a list as hereinbefore provided, and a list shall be so furnished by the committee of the party polling the fourth largest number of votes at said preceding election, then one judge shall be selected from said list.

In case there are not three lists submitted to such council, or other appointing authorities, then said council, or other appointing authorities, shall select one from each list submitted as above provided; and said council or other appointing authorities shall themselves select the remaining judge or judges, but in no case shall more than two of such judges belong to the same political party.

Sec. 54. If either of the judges of any election district in the state shall fail to attend at the time and place appointed for correcting the lists of registers, or holding an election, or if either of said judges be a candidate at such election, or refuse to act as judge, the qualified electors of such election district present shall elect viva voce some qualified elector of said election district, of the same political party as the judge so absent (if only one judge in attendance belongs thereto, but otherwise if of another party) to act as judge instead of such such judge so absent, disqualified or refusing to act.

If any clerk of election be absent, disqualified or refuse to act, the judges of election shall appoint some qualified elector of the same political party as the clerk so absent, disqualified or refusing to act, in place of such clerk.

Before any judge or clerk of election enters upon the discharge of the duties imposed upon him by this act, he shall take and subscribe to the following oath, to wit:

"I, A. B. (judge or clerk of election as the case may be), do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will perform the duties of judge (or clerk) of election (as the case may be) according to law and the best of my ability, and will studiously endeavor to prevent fraud, deceit and abuse in conducting this election, so help me God."

Said oath so taken, subscribed and certified, shall be affixed to the said list or register provided for in this act.

If there be no person present authorized to administer oaths, then the judges of election may administer to each other, and to clerks, the oath provided.

Said judges and clerks shall, prior to the opening of the polls, constitute a board of registration, and subsequent thereto shall be known as the board of election; and all registry lists by them made or used shall be headed or prefixed substantially in the following form, to-wit:

"List of qualified electors in the election district composed of the ...., (township, village, ward or precinct, as the case may be) of ...., in the county of........, State of Minnesota, for an election to be held in the said election district on the .... day of ...., eighteen hundred and ...."

All registry lists shall contain the names of electors in separate groups, to be inserted in alphabetical order, according to the first letter of the surnames of such electors, each letter of the alphabet to form a group, and not more than one group to be on any one page of such register; and each group shall be separately numbered (commencing each with number one), in the order of registry.

Section 55. Except in cities having over twelve thousand inhabitants, the board of registration in each election district in the state, at least twenty days before any election, shall make a list or register of the names of all persons who are entitled to vote in their respective districts at such election, which list shall contain the surnames of such persons in their alphabetical order, and their places of residence.

Three copies of said list shall, at least ten days before such election, be posted in each election district, together with a notice of the time and place when and where the board will be present for the purpose of making corrections in said list.

The judges of election on the Tuesday next preceding election, from the hour of nine in the morning until the hour of four in the afternoon of said day (and in cities containing a population of over two thousand and less than three thousand inhabitants, on Tuesday two weeks preceding the election and on the Tuesday next preceding such election, from nine o'clock in the forenoon until nine o'clock in the afternoon of said days), shall be present at the place appointed for the holding of such election in their respective election districts, for the purpose of making such corrections in said list or register.

In making such corrections said board of registration shall enter upon such lists the additional names of all persons properly shown to be entitled to vote in that election district at such election, and erase from said list or register the names of all persons properly shown not to be entitled to vote in that district at such election.

The said board, on first making out said list, shall consult the poll lists used at the last preceding general election in their election district, and shall place in said list or register the names of persons whom they know, or can with reasonable diligence ascertain, to be entitled to vote at such election in their respective election districts.

Section 56. In cities having less than twelve thousand inhabitants either of the judges may administer the following oath or affirmation to persons appearing for registration:

"You do solemnly swear (or affirm) that you will fully and truly answer such questions as shall be put to you touching your place of residence, place of birth and your qualifications as an elector, and your right to register and vote under the laws of this state."

Section 57. At the end of each day's registration in all election districts (except in cities having over twelve thousand inhabitants) the board shall carefully compare the registers and make them to correspond and agree, and the judges of election shall sign their names at the end of their list on every page of such register, so that no new name can be added without discovery, and shall also sign and attach to such register a certificate in substance as follows:

"We, the undersigned judges of election in the ....district of the .... of ...., in the State of Minnesota, do jointly and severally certify that at the general registration of electors in said election district, on the ...... day of ...., 18....., there were registered by us in said election district the names which in this book are inserted, and that the number of registered and qualified voters was and is the number of ...., of whom ...... are males and ...... females." (Number to be written in figures and words.)

Section 58.—The board of registration shall make or cause to be made a duplicate of such lists or registers, so that there shall be two registers or lists at every election.

Section 59. The population of the various grades of cities shall be determined by the last officially promulgated state or national census.

Sec. 60. At such ensuing election in all districts (except in cities having over twelve thousands inhabitants) any person offering to vote, whose name is not upon the list and register at the opening of the polls, who produces evidence which satisfies a majority of the judges that he has the qualifications of an elector in said district, and is entitled to vote at such election, but whose name has been omitted from said list or register, then the name of such person shall be added to the lists or registers, and he shall be allowed to vote, but not in any other event; and said person shall not, unless the judges require it, be obliged to make the oath or produce the evidence provided by section ninety-eight of this act, but if required by the judges he shall do so.

Nor shall the vote of any person be rejected whose name is upon said lists at the time of opening the polls; provided that if evidence satisfying a majority of the judges be produced showing that the name was registered by mistake, and that the person so offering to vote has not the qualifications of an elector in said district, and is not entitled to vote at said election, then the name of such person shall be stricken from said list and he shall not be allowed to vote.

But in all such cases an entry shall be made opposite to each name added to or stricken from said lists or registers after the opening of the polls.

Sec. 61. The board of registration, in all election districts throughout the state, in determining the residence of any person for the purpose of ascertaining who are qualified electors, shall be governed by the following rules so far as they are applicable:

1. The place shall be considered and held to be residence of a person in which his habitation is fixed, without any present intention of removing therefrom, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning.

2. A person shall not be considered to have lost his residence who leaves his home to go into another state, or county in this state, for temporary purposes merely, and with the intention of returning.

3. A person shall not be considered to have gained a residence in any county into which he comes for temporary purposes merely, without the intention of making such county his home.

4. If a person go into another state, with the intention of making it his residence, he loses his residence in this state.

5. If any person remove to another state with the intention or remaining there for an indefinite time as a place of residence, he loses his residence in this state, notwithstanding he entertains the idea of returning at some future time.

6. The place where a man's family resides shall be held to be his place of residence; but if it be a place of temporary establishment for his family, or for transient purposes, it shall be otherwise.

7. If a man have a family fixed in one place and he do business in another, the former shall be considered his place of residence; but any man having a family, who has taken up his abode with the intention of remaining, and whose family refuses to reside with him, shall be regarded as a citizen and voter where he has taken up his abode.

8. The residence of a single man shall be where he usually sleeps.

9. The mere intention to acquire a new residence without the fact of removal, shall avail nothing; neither shall the fact of removal without the intention.

10. No person employed temporarily in the pineries for the purpose of cutting timber for saw logs or railroad ties, or even in the construction or repair of any railroad, canal, municipal or other work of public nature, shall acquire a residence in any election district into which he came for that purpose, so as to entitle him to vote therein, but this provision shall not be held to extend to station agents and section men, who permanently reside in such election district.

In any question that may arise as to the right of any person in the employment of any railroad corporation or employed upon public work, as aforesaid, to be registered or to vote in any election district, it must first satisfactorily appear to all the judges of such election that the said party is an actual bona fide resident of said election district, and not there for temporary purposes merely, and the mere affidavit of such person shall not be received as conclusive as to any fact necessary to entitle him to vote.

Any person being a permanent inmate of any soldiers' home in this state, shall for the purpose of this act, have a legal residence thereat.

Sec. 62. In all incorporated cities of over twelve thousand inhabitants, the persons authorized by or appointed pursuant to law, to act as judges and clerks of election in any such city, or in any ward or other election district in such city in this state, shall constitute a board of registration for their respective cities, wards or election districts, and shall meet on Tuesday three weeks preceding any general, state or city election and fourteen days before any special election. Said board shall meet at nine o'clock in the morning at a place where the last election was held, or such other place as may be lawfully designated for the polling place in the election district in which said board are judges and clerks, and shall continue in session until nine o'clock in the afternoon. They shall proceed to make a registration as hereinafter prescribed, of all persons entitled to vote at the ensuing election in such election districts. Such registration when completed shall constitute and be known as the register of electors of such election district. Two such registers shall be made by said board, unless ballot judges are required or provided for, in which event three registers shall be so made. Such board shall have and exercise the same right to preserve order at their meetings as is given to judges of election to preserve order on election day, and vacancies in said board shall be filled in the same manner as such vacancies are filled at election.

Sec 63. In cities having over twelve thousand and less than forty thousand inhabitants, the registers, the form of which shall be prepared by the secretary of state, shall contain columns under the following headings and sub-headings, viz.: "Names," "Voted," "Residence," "Number," "Street or Avenue," "Place of Nativity," "Color," "Length of Residence," "United States—years," "State—years, months," "District—years, months, days," "First or Second Papers," "Date of Papers," "Court or Place," "Able to Read English," "Where Last Registered—ward, district," and "Remarks." The board of registration in each district therein shall enter all names in such registers, alphabetically by surnames. They shall enter therein the names of all persons residing in their election district whose names appear in the poll-list and register in said district at the last preceding election as having voted thereat, except such as are known to the board to have since died, removed from the district or become disqualified; and so far as known to any of said board, the proper entries shall be made opposite each name in the different columns of said registry. In case the boundaries of the district have been changed since the preceding election, at which such poll-list was made, then the board shall place on the registers only the names of the persons appearing by such poll-list to be residents within the new district in which they are sitting.

In addition to the names on said poll-list and register, the board shall enter on said registers the names of all proper persons who shall personally appear for registration, as well as the name of any person who shall make and have presented to the board at any time while sitting to correct the registry list an affidavit in form substantially as follows:

"I, ..., being first duly sworn, on oath say that I am a legally qualified voter in the State of Minnesota; and that I now reside at No. .... street (or avenue)' in the .... election district in the .... ward in the city of ....,in said state; that I have not been and will not be able to be present at said election district for the purpose of registration for the reason that ....; that I make this affidavit because of such inability so to attend for registration and for the purpose of being registered in said election district; that my full name is ....:; I was born at ....; am .... State of ...., County of ....

ss.—On this .... day of ...., 18...., before me, the subscriber, a .... in and for said county, personally appeared ...., to me personally known, and being by me first duly sworn, subscribed to the foregoing statement. ....

Such affidavit shall be subscribed and sworn to before some person qualified to administer oaths, who shall attach his official certificate thereto, according to the above form.

If it shall appear by such affidavit that the affiant has removed from another election district, or is registered elsewhere in the city, a certificate of removal from such other district shall also be required as provided in the next succeeding section.

Sec. 64. When it shall appear by the answer or affidavit of the applicant for registration, or shall be known to the board of registration that the applicant has or is registered in another election district in the same city than the one at which he makes his application, the board shall not enter his name in said register until a certificate of removal is procured from the board of such other district, which may be in the following form:

"This is to certify that the name of ...., heretofore residing at ...., in this election district, has been by us, the board of registration of this district, stricken from the registration of this district at his request, upon his affidavit of removal. The following entries appear upon the register of this election district, concerning him (add entries in various columns of register)."

Signed by the board of registration of former place of registration.

Except as hereinafter provided, the above certificate shall be granted by such board upon and only upon the applicant for registry making and subscribing the following affidavit, which shall be sworn to before such board, or before the board in the district to which the removal is to be made, and if made before the latter board, upon being presented to the former, such affidavit shall warrant such former board in issuing the above certificate to the bearer.

"I, ———, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I now reside at number ——— (street or avenue), in ward number ———, in the city of ———. That I am duly entered as a qualified voter in the registers of the ——— district, in the ——— ward, of said city, as residing at number ——— (street or avenue); that I have removed from the last mentioned residence, and do hereby request the proper entry and record to be made, and that my name be erased from the register of the last mentioned district, and a certificate of removal furnished me."

If a person remove from one place in a district to another place in the same district, his vote shall not be received at any election unless the registers are changed as herein provided.

Provided, that whenever a "registry oath of an absent person," specified in section sixty-three of this act, is presented to the board in the district where such affidavit shows such person to have formerly resided, and such affidavit further shows the person subscribing the same to be a resident of and voter in another election district, then if affiant's name appears upon the registers, the board shall erase it therefrom and give the person presenting the affidavit a certificate of removal for the person mentioned in the affidavit, making upon the registers the following entry: "Removed to ——— district, ——— ward, by affidavit presented by ———."

Sec. 65. The board of registration in the district from which the removal, in a case specified in the proviso to the last preceding section, is made shall not retain the affidavit so presented to them, but it, together with the certificate of removal, shall be deposited with the board of registration in the district to which the removal is made.

Sec. 66. In cities having over forty thousand inhabitants, the registers shall be substantially as those provided for in section sixty-three of this act, except that in place of the heading "Where last registered—ward—district," the heading shall be "Householder—boarder—lodger—employe."

The board of registration in each district therein shall enter all names in said registers, alphabetically by surnames, but there shall be no name of any person registered unless he shall appear personally before said board, or register by affidavit of absent person as provided by section sixty-three of this act; and no copy shall be made of any names on the poll lists of any previous election.

Sec. 67. In all election districts in cities having over twelve thousand inhabitants one of the judges of election shall administer to all persons appearing personally before him for registration the following oath or affirmation:

"You do solemnly swear (or affirm) that you will fully and truly answer such questions as shall be put to you touching your place of residence, place of birth, and your qualifications as an elector, and your right to register and vote under the laws of this state."

One of the judges shall then ask each of the said persons appearing before them the questions necessary to properly fill out the spaces opposite the names of such persons in the various columns of the register.

The clerks or other members of the board shall enter the names of such persons in the registers, and the answers to the questions in appropriate columns therein.

In the columns headed residence, there shall be the name and number of the street, or other location of the dwelling, if there be a definite number; if not, such clear and definite description of the place of such dwelling as shall enable it to be readily ascertained.

If more than one family be residing in a house, there shall be entered the floor on which the applicant resides, and the room or rooms occupied by him.

The register shall be ruled, and one name shall be written on each line, but no name shall be written between the lines, and if the name of any person be so written, such person shall not be entitled or allowed to vote, unless his name shall also appear properly on a line in said register.

At the end of the first day's registration the board shall carefully compare the registers and make them to correspond and agree, and one or more of the judges of election shall sign his name at the end of the list on every page of such register, so that no name can be added without discovery, and all the judges shall also sign and attach to such register a certificate in substance as follows:

"We, the undersigned, judges of election in the ——— district of ——— ward, of the city of ———, in the State of Minnesota, do jointly and severally certify that at the general registration of electors in said election district, on the ——— day of ———, 18—, there were registered by us in said election district the names which in this book are inserted, and that the number of registered and qualified voters was and is the number of ———." (Number to be written in figures and words.)

If any females shall have registered, then the certificate shall read, after the blank following the words "number of ———," "of whom ——— are males and ——— are females."

Such registers shall, before ten o'clock in the forenoon of the next day be deposited by one of said board in the office of the city clerk or recorder, whose duty it shall be to safely keep the same.

Sec. 68. In said cities having over twelve thousand inhabitants, on Tuesday, two weeks preceding any general election, and on the thirteenth day preceding any special election, said board of registration shall again meet at the same place as before, and remain in public session from nine o'clock in the forenoon until nine o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of registering all qualified voters whose names are not yet registered.

They shall obtain from the city clerk or recorder, and use the same registers as on the first day, and the same forms shall be observed in regard to registration as were required upon the first day of registration.

At the end of such day's registration the registers shall be compared and made to agree, and shall be signed as at the first day's registration, and similar certificates attached with this addition thereto, "making the total number registered to date hereof, inclusive, ———, of whom ——— are males and ——— are females."

It shall be the duty of the clerks of election composing said board during the session of that day and before the board adjourns to make a copy of all the names upon such registers, together with the addresses as indicated in such registers.

Immediately after its completion, said copy shall be conspicuously posted up outside the place of registration, with a notice of the time when such board of registration will meet for a completion and final correction of its registers, and shall be accessible to any elector who may desire to examine or copy the same.

The registers shall be returned by one of said board to the office of the city clerk or recorder before 10 o'clock in the forenoon of the day succeeding the day of registration.

Sec. 69. On the last Tuesday preceding any general election and on the day one week preceding any special election, the boards of election in cities having over twelve thousand and less than forty thousand inhabitants shall again meet at the same place for the completion and final correction of said registers.

And in like manner, in cities having over forty thousand inhabitants, the boards of registration shall again meet on the second Saturday preceding the day of any general election, and again on the last Wednesday preceding said day of any general election.

Prior to each of said meetings said boards of registration shall again obtain the same registers before used from the office of the city clerk or recorder, and on each of said days shall be in session from twelve o'clock noon until nine o'clock in the afternoon.

Any qualified elector not already registered, may apply to either of said board to have his name inserted in said register; and the same rules for registration required on previous days shall be observed by the board.

It shall be the duty of each of said boards at any meeting thereof, to erase from the registers the name of any person inserted therein who shall be proven, by the oath of two qualified electors of such district, to the satisfaction of the board, to be in any way disqualified to vote in such district at the ensuing election.

At the end of each meeting the registers shall be again compared, and be made to agree and correspond, and shall be signed and certified by the board as at their second meeting and deposited in the city clerk's or recorder's office before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the next succeeding day.

When said registration shall have been wholly completed, and before the said board shall adjourn or separate they shall prepare a copy of all the names and their respective addresses, appearing upon such registers, and post the same conspicuously forthwith outside the place of registration, or in such a manner as to be plainly discernible and easily read from the outside thereof.

Sec. 70. The vote of no person whose name does not appear in said register as a qualified voter shall be received by the judges at any election, in any city having over twelve thousand inhabitants, except the vote of a person whose name was registered and erased, as provided in section sixty-nine and who takes the oath as required by section ninety-eight of this act.

Sec. 71. Any person who shall cause his name to be registered in more than one election district, or who shall cause his name to be registered knowing that he is not a qualified elector in the district when such registry is made, or who shall falsely personate any registered voter, and any person causing, aiding or abetting any person to do either of said acts, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished for each offense by imprisonment in the state prison for a term not exceeding two years or by a fine not exceeding three hundred dollars or both, in the discretion of the court.

All intentional false swearing before a board of registration shall be deemed willful and corrupt perjury, and, on conviction thereof, punished as such.

Sec. 72. Any person who shall take or deface any list of names posted by any board of registration as hereinbefore provided for, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof be punished by a fine of fifty dollars or be imprisoned in the county jail for a term not exceeding sixty days, or both, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 73. The polls in the several election districts in towns, villages and cities of less than four thousand inhabitants shall be opened at nine o'clock in the morning and kept open until five o'clock in the afternoon.

In cities of four thousand or more, and less than twelve thousand inhabitants, the polls shall be open at seven o'clock in the morning and shall be kept open until six o'clock in the afternoon.

In cities of twelve thousand inhabitants and over, the polls shall be open at six o'clock in the morning and closed at seven o'clock in the afternoon.

No adjournment or intermission whatever shall take place until the polls shall be closed and until all the votes cast at such poll have been counted and the result publicly announced; but this shall not be deemed to prevent any temporary recess, while taking meals or other necessary delay, provided that the board shall remain in session and that not more than one member of the board of election shall at any time be absent from the polling place.

Sec. 74. No election shall be held, nor shall any election be appointed to be held, in any saloon or barroom, or in any room used or occupied as a place of resort for idlers or disreputable persons, or in any room contiguous with or adjoining either thereof.

Nor shall such election be held in any room or place wherein the requirements of this act relative to booths, railings and distances cannot be substantially complied with.

Said polling places having a population of over twelve thousand inhabitants, shall, in all cases be upon the ground floor, in the front room, the entrance to which is from a highway or public street which is at least forty feet wide, and as near the center of the voting population of the district as is practicable.

Sec. 75. Should any place be designated or appointed for holding an election in violation of the next above section, or become subject to such objection after having been so designated, the judges of election shall have power, and it shall be their duty, on or before the day of such election, and before the opening of the polls on such day, to procure a suitable place as near thereto as may be and not subject to like objection.

Such change shall, when practicable, be ordered on the first of the days herein provided for registration, and the change made immediately thereafter.

Sec. 76. When a change of the place for registration, or for holding the election, or both, shall have been determined upon, said judges shall meet at the place first designated and, after any vacancies in their number shall have been filled, adjourn to the place chosen by them, and at the time of such adjournment give public notice by proclamation to the electors present of such change.

Said judges shall, at said first designated place, post in a conspicuous manner notice of the place where such election shall be held, and all expense attending such change shall be certified by such judges to the proper authorities, and shall be allowed and paid accordingly.

And, in like manner, said judges shall at the place where said place for registration or election, or both, post in a conspicuous manner notice of the change made; and, if either of the judges shall deem the same necessary, three additional notices shall be posted in as many public places in said election district.

Sec. 77. At all polling places the following arrangements shall be substantially observed:

There shall be provided boxes for voting, as many in number as the kind of ballots voted; one ballot box painted white, one painted red and one painted blue.

Said boxes shall be sufficiently large to easily contain all the ballots liable to be placed therein without being forced into the same, and with apertures large enough to receive the ballots when folded as provided in this act.

There shall also be a separate box for each polling place where women are entitled to vote, in which shall be placed all ballots cast by women.

There shall be provided, in the room in which the inspectors of election sit, or immediately adjoining thereto, not less than two booths or compartments for every hundred electors registered.

Said booths shall be at least three feet square and six feet high, and shall contain a shelf at least one foot wide and extending from side to side at a convenient height for writing. Each booth shall be provided with a door or curtain and properly lighted, and shall be so constructed that the voter can therein retire from observation for marking his ballot.

In each booth shall be posted cards of instruction, as provided in this act, and it shall contain an indelible pencil and such other articles as this act may provide or circumstances require.

Sec. 78. In case the booths shall be in the same room in which the judges of election sit to receive the ballots, the place where they sit and the position of the room were the compartments are constructed shall be separated from the rest of the room by a railing so constructed as to leave a space of at least six feet in front of the booths and ballot-boxes, and said railing shall be so constructed as to provide a separate passage for entrance and for exit.

The judges of election may make such arrangements for entrance to and exit from the room or place where the ballot-boxes and compartments are situated as to them may seem the most advantageous and convenient, providing they disregard none of the foregoing requirements.

Sec. 79. The judges of election may appoint one or more special constables to attend each place of election. It shall be the duty of the sheriff, constable or special constable to keep the surroundings of the polls quiet and orderly, and during voting hours to allow no person to approach within six feet of the ballot boxes or to pass behind the railing or within six feet of the booth or ballot compartments herein provided for, except electors engaged in receiving, preparing or depositing their ballots, without permission of the judges of election.

If any of the above-named officers neglect to perform said duty, then the judges of election shall swear in enough private citizens to enforce order, who shall have power as constables, or conservators of the peace, to make arrests for breach of the peace.

Sec. 80. Any police officer, constable or special constable attending the election may call to his aid a sufficient number of citizens to arrest any disorderly person or suppress any riot or disorder during the election. Whoever conducts himself in a riotous or disorderly manner at any election, and persists in such conduct after being warned to desist, may be arrested without warrant; but such person, so taken into custody, shall not be prevented from voting, if disposed so to do in a quiet and orderly manner.

Provided, that no police officer shall remain within the voting room unless he shall be ordered to do so by the judges of election, and shall in no manner interfere with or seek to influence any voter, under the penalty hereinafter provided.

Sec. 81. Before the hour of three o'clock in the afternoon on the day preceding any election the judges of election shall procure the registers provided for in this act from the office of the official with whom they are required to be deposited, one being procured by a judge representing one of the two leading political parties, and the other by a judge representing another leading political party.

The ballot boxes and the ballots shall be delivered by the officer in whose custody they are to the judges of election of the respective districts; also the keys of such boxes and the poll books and all stationery and material necessary to such election.

Such judges and clerks shall be held responsible for the safe-keeping of said registers and ballots unaltered, as provided in this act, and shall have all of said ballots, boxes, registers, poll books, printed instructions and materials at the polling places in which they are the judges and clerks at the hour of the opening on the day of election.

Sec. 82. In case neither of the judges of election shall appear at the office of the official charged with the delivery of the ballots, as provided in the last preceding section, said official shall forthwith dispatch a special messenger to the proper election district with a package containing the ballots therefor, securely wrapped, tied and sealed, which messenger shall deliver such package to said judges of election or either of them, or failing therein shall deliver them at the polling place at the hour for opening the polls. Said messenger shall take a receipt for official and file such receipt with him, and an affidavit stating when, where and to whom said package was delivered. Said judges of election and each of them shall be chargeable with all expense incident to such delivery and report, together with mileage, which shall be the same as allowed sheriffs for serving process, but nothing herein shall relieve any such judge of election from the penalty provided by law for neglect of duty in the premises.

Sec. 83. If the ballots to be furnished to judges of election, as herein provided, shall not be delivered, or if after delivery they shall be destroyed or stolen, it shall be the duty of the county auditor or other proper official, as the case may be, to cause other ballots as nearly in the form prescribed as practicable, with the word "substitute" printed in brackets immediately over the words "official ballots" as endorsed on regular ballots, to be immediately prepared (unless additional regular ballots can be had, and when so prepared and endorsed, when practicable, with the fac simile signature of the officer preparing the same, and accompanied by a statement under oath that the same have been so prepared and furnished by him, and that the original ballots have so failed to be received or have been destroyed or stolen, the judges of election shall cause the ballots so substituted to be used at the election.

Sec. 84. If from any cause none of the official ballots nor substitute ballots prepared by the county auditor or other official, as herein prescribed, shall be ready for distribution at any polling place, or if the supply of ballots shall be exhausted before the polls are closed, unofficial ballots, printed or written, made as nearly as possible in the form of the official ballots, or of any ticket forming a part or parts thereof, may be used until substitutes prepared by the clerk, as provided in this last preceding section, can be printed and delivered, and the fact shall be certified and accompany the returns of election.

Sec. 85. The judges of election, or one of them, immediately before the proclamation is made of the opening of the polls, shall open the ballot boxes in the presence of the people there assembled, and turn them upside down, so as to empty them of anything that is in them, and then lock them, and the key thereof shall be delivered to one of the judges, and the said boxes shall not be reopened until for the purpose of counting the ballots therein at the close of the polls; and the judges forthwith shall proclaim that the polls are open, and cause written or printed notice of the hour of closing the polls to be conspicuously posted up outside the polling place.

Sec. 86.—The judges of election shall allow one eligible voter of each political party casting 1 per cent of the entire vote at the preceding election in that district to be chosen by each of said parties respectively, and each to have a certificate in writing from the chairman of an authorised committee of the party he represents, to be in the room when the election is held, to act as challengers of voters at the election, and such challengers may remain, with the board until the votes are all canvassed and the result declared.

In case of temporary absence of any challenger for meals or by reason of sickness or otherwise he may substitute for himself some other person of like political belief, such substitute to be known to one or more of the judges by an affidavit of the person first so selected or so substituted.

Sec. 87. The judges of election may authorize a constable or special constable to act as gatekeeper, in which event he shall direct voters how to pass to and from the booths.

No person shall in any manner interfere with a gatekeeper in the discharge of his duty, and it shall be unlawful for the gatekeeper to aid, assist, suggest, advise or entreat an elector to prepare his ballot in a particular manner.

Sec. 88. If any clerk of election, after entering upon the discharge of his duties, shall, by reason of the sickness of himself or family or other personal disability, be unable or fail for any reason to complete the performance of his duties, another may be appointed in his place by the judges. In such case the person appointed shall take an oath to faithfully and impartially discharge his duties, and the fact of the appointment and the time when and circumstances under which it took place shall be noted in the poll books, if the polls shall not have been closed; if after the closing of the polls, the fact, time and circumstances shall be certified with the returns, and proper measures taken to show the exact stage of the work done and to be done at the time of such appointment.

Sec. 89. Two judges of opposite political parties shall, before the voting begins, or as soon thereafter as possible, place their initials on the backs of all the ballots they have, immediately under or opposite the fac simile of the officer under whose direction the ballots were printed, and shall not otherwise mark the same.

Sec. 90. No official ballot shall be distributed except in the voting room to electors about to vote, and no ballot not officially endorsed or which has not the initials of two judges of election, in said judges' own handwriting, on the back thereof, shall be placed in the box.

If any person during the day of election and until the closing of the polls remove from the polling room any of the ballots printed for that election, said person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or imprisonment not exceeding six months, or both.

Sec. 91. No person or persons shall be allowed in the room containing the ballot boxes, or in case the ballot boxes and compartments are in the same room, no person or persons shall be allowed to go or remain inside the railing, except members of the board, officers of the peace, one representative for each of the political parties represented on the ballots, and electors who are about to vote, except an elector who may be called upon, as provided in this act, to assist a voter who cannot read English or is physically disabled, in marking his ballots.

Sec. 92. The judges of election and ballot boxes shall at all times be in public view. The number of electors about to vote who shall be admitted at one time shall in no case exceed the number of compartments by more than three.

Sec. 93. No elector shall vote except in the district in which he actually resides. When, however, a person duly registered and so entitled to vote removes from one district to another within ten days of an election, it shall be lawful for him to vote in the district from which he has removed until he has acquired the right to vote in the district to which he removes.

The judges of election may make such regulations as they deem proper, limiting the time in which electors may remain in the polling-room or place while receiving, preparing and voting his ballot; such limitation, however, shall not be less than three nor more than ten minutes, unless the delay is occasioned by the elector's vote being challenged, or is the fault of one or more members of the board of election.

Sec. 94. All the electors shall be allowed to go unmolested to the polling-room for the purpose of voting, and to return therefrom in the same manner, but neither voters nor others shall be allowed to congregate in any numbers within one hundred feet of the polling-room in any election district.

In cities having over twelve thousand inhabitants, none save officers of election and electors who have not voted but are ready so to do, shall be permitted to stand within fifty feet of the entrance to the polling place.

Sec. 95. One of the judges of election shall have charge of and hand to and receive the ballot or ballots from each elector voting. The other two judges shall use and handle the two registers delivered to the judges, each using one, as specified in this act.

Sec. 96. When an elector presents himself for the purpose of voting, he shall give his name and residence, with street and number, if any, and it shall be first ascertained that his name is on both the registers and not erased; also that the residence given by the elector corresponds with the residence in such registers, and if challenged, as provided in the next succeeding section, that he is entitled to vote.

Sec. 97. At any time before any registered person presenting himself to vote receives the ballots from the judges of election, as provided in the last preceding section, each judge of election shall, and either of the authorised challengers or any other person in the voting room or coming in for that purpose, may challenge the person about to vote at the election, whom he knows or suspects to be not duly qualified as an elector.

The challenging party, at the time when he interposes said challenge, shall state the ground or grounds upon which the same is made, whereupon one of the judges of election shall tender the challenged party the following oath:

"You do solemnly swear (or affirm) that you will fully and truly answer all such questions as shall be put to you touching your qualifications as an elector at this election."

The judges, or one of them, shall then proceed to question the challenged party in such a manner as will tend to reveal the particular facts in dispute concerning which the challenge is made, to which end questions may be asked as to his name, his age, his then place of residence, how long he has resided in the town, ward or election district where the vote is offered; where was his last place of residence before he came to the town, or ward; as to his citizenship, whether a native or naturalized citizen, and if the latter, when, where and what court, and before what officer he was naturalized; whether he came into the town or ward for the purpose of voting at that election, and how long he contemplates residing in the town or ward, and such other questions as tend to test his qualifications as a resident in the town or ward, and his right to vote at the polls.

If the person so challenged refuse to answer the questions that are put to him, as aforesaid, the judges shall refuse to have his name inserted in the poll lists, and he shall not be allowed to vote unless he at once reconsiders and shall answer said questions. Nor shall he be allowed to vote if he leaves the polling place and afterwards returns, even though then prepared to answer said questions.

Section 98. If, after the questions provided for in the last preceding section shall have been answered, the challenge is not withdrawn, one of the judges shall tender the challenged party the following oath:

"You do swear (or affirm) that you are a citizen of the United States, or that you have declared your intention to become such citizen conformably to the laws of the United States on the subject of naturalization; that you are twenty-one years of age, and have been a resident of the United States for one year and an inhabitant of this state for four months immediately preceding this election, and an actual resident of this election district for ten days immediately preceding this election; that you have not voted at this election, and are a qualified voter in this election district."

Upon taking such oath such person shall be allowed to vote; provided, that if it appear that the name of the person offering to vote has been registered and erased as in this act before specified, he shall not be allowed to vote, unless in addition to the above oaths he produces a person known to a majority of the judges, who makes and subscribes an oath before one of them in their presence as to the identity of the person so offering to vote, and as to his place of residence. Having done so he shall be allowed to vote.

If any person refuse to take either of the oaths as provided in this and the next above section to be tendered, or if in the case so provided he shall refuse to produce the person to swear to his identity and residence, then his name shall not be inserted in the poll list, and he shall not be allowed to vote.

If any person challenged as unqualified to vote be guilty of false or corrupt swearing or affirmation in taking any oath or affirmation prescribed by this act, he shall be deemed to have committed wilful and corrupt perjury, and upon conviction thereof shall suffer the punishment attached by the laws of this state to the crime of perjury.

Sec. 99. It appearing to the satisfaction of the judges that the person applying therefor is a qualified elector, the judge having charge of the ballots shall tear from each of the blocks a ballot of each kind that is to be voted, having the proper initials thereon, and hand the same to the voter, who shall retire alone to one of the booths or compartments above mentioned and there prepare the ballot or ballots.

Voters may be allowed to carry with them to the booths sample ballots for use in assisting them in marking the official ballots, but the same shall not be printed on red, white or blue paper, and it shall be a misdemeanor to print or distribute sample ballots printed upon such paper.

Provided, however, that sample ballots may be printed in newspapers as matter of news.

Sec. 100. On receipt of his ballots the elector shall forthwith retire alone to the then nearest unoccupied voting booth, and without undue delay mark each of said ballots, in whole or in part, as he shall see fit, with the indelible pencil to be found in such booth.

If he soils or defaces either of said ballots he shall at once return the same and get other ballots as hereinafter provided.

In marking the ballots, and each of them, he shall observe the following rules:

1. If the elector desires to vote a straight party ticket, or for each and every candidate of one party for each and every office named on his ballot, he shall make a cross-mark (X) in the small square immediately at the right of such candidates as shown by the party designation following such names.

2. If the elector desires to vote a mixed ticket or for candidates of different parties he shall make a cross-mark (X) in each of the small squares opposite the names of the candidates for whom he desires to vote, regardless of party designation, being careful not to vote for more candidates for an office than are to be elected, as indicated on the margin of the ballot.

3. If the elector so desires he may write the name or names of one or more persons in the blank spaces following and under the names of candidates printed on any ticket, and such names so written shall be counted as balloted for whether the same be marked in the small square places or not.

4. If the elector mark more names than there are persons to be elected to an office, or if for any reason, it is impossible to determine the voter's choice for an office to be filled, his ballot will not be counted for such office; but the rest of his ballot will be counted if properly marked.

5. No ballot shall be rejected for any technical error which does not make it impossible to determine the voter's choice, even though such ballot be somewhat soiled or defaced.

6. When an elector has prepared his ballot, he shall so fold it, concealing the face thereof and all marks thereon, as to expose only the endorsement and the facsimile signature and initials of the judges at the back thereof.

7. Each ballot should be marked and separately folded, after which the elector shall at once withdraw from the voting booth.

Sec. 101. Having prepared his ballots as provided in the last preceding section the elector shall hand the same to the judge of election, who is in charge of the ballot boxes, and said judge shall, without opening the same or permitting the same to be opened or examined, deposit the same in the proper boxes, indicated by the color thereof, and shall first announce the name and residence of the elector in an audible voice; and the judges having charge of the registers, shall, in a column prepared thereon, in the same line with the voter's name, marked "Voted," or the letter "V."

At any time before said ballots, or either of them, shall have been deposited in the ballot boxes, said elector shall be subject to challenge by either of the judges, or by any person who was not present at the time said elector first procured said ballots; but no party-challenger or other person, other than a judge of election, present when such ballots were delivered to said elector shall, if at the time knowing of such delivery, afterwards interpose a challenge. In the event of challenge, proceedings shall be had as hereinbefore provided; and, if the party offering to vote shall be found to be disqualified, said ballots, so prepared by him, shall be placed among the spoiled ballots and not opened.

If no challenge shall be interposed, the elector shall at once retire from the voting-room; and in event of challenge, as provided in this section, he shall so retire as soon as the challenge is determined, and shall not again return thereto, unless by permission of all the judges.

Sec. 102. If any elector shall spoil a ballot so that he cannot conveniently vote the same he may on returning such ballot receive another in place thereof. If he shall spoil such second ballot, he shall before receiving a third ballot, state under oath whether or not he can read English; if he claims to be able to read English said third ballot, and, if necessary, a fourth ballot shall be so delivered to him, but no ballot shall be so delivered until the ballot previously issued shall have been returned, nor shall more than four ballots of any one color be delivered to any one elector.

If said elector shall, after spoiling two ballots as aforesaid, claim under oath not to be able to read English, proceedings shall be had as provided in the next succeeding section.

When a spoiled ballot is returned the board shall preserve and deliver the same, together with all unused ballots, to the county auditor or city clerk or recorder, as the color of the ballot may determine; and all ballots so spoiled or not cast shall be preserved by such officer until ten days next following the county official canvass.

Sec. 103. Whenever any elector shall declare upon oath that he cannot read English, or that because of physical disability he cannot mark his ballot, he shall have the right to call to his aid one or more of the judges of election, who shall mark his ballot as he may desire and in as secret a manner as circumstances may permit.

When any voter in addition to said declaration shall also declare that he cannot speak and understand when spoken the English language, the judges may select two persons, one from each political party, who shall act as interpreters and who shall take the oath taken by judges as nearly as may be, and who shall as such interpreters assist such persons who cannot speak the English language in making up their ballots.

If said elector shall so prefer he may call to his aid any qualified elector in the same district who may retire to one of the booths with him and there mark the ballot for him; but no such person shall so mark the ballots of more than three such electors at any one election, and said electors shall, before depositing the same, privately show his ballot, so prepared as aforesaid, to either of the judges or clerks of election to ascertain that it is marked as directed, but a physically disabled voter who is able to determine whether his ballot is marked as directed need not so show his ballot.

No judge of election or other person who may assist a voter in the preparation of his ballot, as herein provided, shall in any manner request, persuade, or induce, or seek to persuade or induce and such voter to vote for any particular candidate or candidates, but shall mark the ballot as directed by the elector; and shall not reveal to any other person the name of any candidate for whom the elector has voted, or anything that took place while he was assisting such elector in preparing such ballot for voting.

Any judges of election, or person marking the vote of an elector, or any other person who discloses to any other person the name of any candidate for whom such elector has voted, or shall mark the vote of an elector, in any other manner than directed by such elector, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall on conviction thereof be punished by a fine of not less than thirty dollars nor more than two hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than ten nor more than ninety days, or both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 104. If it shall be announced to the judges of election than an elector is at the door who is unable to enter the polling place without assistance, in their discretion they may appoint one of their number to take an official ballot or ballots and present it or them to such physically disabled person and assist him in marking the same if he so desires; and if the elector so requests, also in the presence of another person to be selected by such elector. And when the ballot or ballots shall have been marked and folded the same shall be taken back to the polling place and handed to the judge in charge of the ballot-boxes, who shall make the statement, "Ballot (or ballots) offered by (naming the elector) a person unable to enter the room by reason of physical disability; does any one object to the reception of this ballot (or these ballots)?" If no objection be made the ballot or ballots shall be deposited; but if objection is made a challenge shall be deemed to have been interposed and proceedings had, as near as may be, as hereinbefore provided in such cases.

Sec. 105. No voter shall divulge to any one within the polling place the name of any candidate for whom he intends to vote or has voted; nor shall he ask for or receive the assistance of any person within the polling place in the preparation of his ballot, except as provided for persons under physical disability or who are unable to read the English language.

If any elector, after having marked his ballot, shows it to any one, except as herein provided, the judge of election shall refuse to receive or place in the ballot-box such ballot, but shall place the same among the spoiled ballots; and if such showing was clealy intentional no other ballot shall be delivered to such elector.

Sec. 106. Intoxication shall not be regarded as a physical disability, and no intoxicated person shall be entitled to assistance in marking his ballot. Nor shall any grossly intoxicated person be permitted to vote while so intoxicated.

Sec. 107. Every elector, at the time of applying for or offering his ballot, shall truly state the name of the street in which he resides, and if the house, lodging or tenement where he resides is numbered, the number thereof, and, if required, whether he is a householder, or a boarder, lodger or employe therein, and such other matters as may be proper for purposes of identification. In case of refusal to make such statement his ballot, if he has received any, shall be placed among the spoiled ballots, and he shall not be allowed to vote at such election.

Sec. 108. It shall be unlawful for the judges of election or any of them, or any person in the polling room or compartments therewith connected, or within twenty-five feet of the entrance to the polling room, to ask or persuade or to endeavor to persuade any person to vote for any particular candidate or to suggest that he do so.

Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor for each and every person so approached, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding ninety days.

Sec. 109. Any person entitled to vote at any general election in this state shall, on the day of such election, be entitled to absent himself from any service or employment in which he is then engaged or employed for the whole of the forenoon, or from the opening of the polls until twelve o'clock noon, and such voter shall not, because of so absenting himself, be liable to any penalty, nor shall any deduction be made on account of such absence from his usual salary or wages; but such person shall on so absenting himself proceed at once to the polling place wherein he is entitled to vote, and having so voted, return at once to his employment, otherwise he shall not be entitled to such salary or wages.

Application for such leave of absence shall be made prior to the day of election; and, if not so made then, such person may make application on the morning of election day, in which event he shall be allowed, between the hour of twelve o'clock noon and an hour one hour before the hour for closing the polls, for the purpose of voting, one full hour, and in addition thereto one-half of an hour for each mile that he may be distant from said polling place, and said employer may specify the hours during which said employe may absent himself as aforesaid.

Any person or corporation, or officer or member thereof, who shall refuse to an employe the privilege hereby conferred, or shall subject an employe to a penalty or deduction of wages because of the exercises of such privilege, or who shall, in any manner, attempt to influence or control such voter as to how he shall vote, by offering any reward or by threatening his discharge from employment or otherwise intimidating him from a full and free exercise of his right to vote, or shall, directly or indirectly, violate the provisions of this section, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sec. 110. No person shall, during the election, remove or destroy any of the supplies or other conveniences placed in the booths or compartments aforesaid for the purpose of enabling the voter to prepare his ballot.

No person shall, before or during an election, remove, tear down, or deface the cards printed for the instruction of voters

Any person wilfully violating the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sec. 111. Whoever, after proclamation is made of the opening of the polls and at any time before the vote is fully canvassed, shall wilfully offer or deliver to a judge of election, to be placed in a box or boxes, more than one ballot of the same kind and color, or shall fraudently put a ballot into any box or boxes, is guilty of a felony, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for a term not less than six months nor more than one year.

Sec. 112. Whoever, not being a qualified voter, votes at any election with unlawful intent is guilty of felony; and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison not less than one month nor more than one year.

Sec. 113. Any resident of another state who votes in this state is guilty of felony; and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for a term not less than one month nor more than one year.

Sec. 114. Whoever votes more than once at the same election shall be guilty of a felony, and on conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for a term not less than one year nor more than five years.

Sec. 115. Whoever, by threat or bribery, attempts to influence any elector in giving his vote for any person or measure, or by such means attempts to deter him from voting for any person or measure, is guilty of a misdemeanor; and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment in the county jail not less than one month nor more than six months.

Sec. 116. Whoever aids, assists, counsels or advises another to vote, knowing that such person is not duly qualified to vote at the place where and at the time when the vote is to be given, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be subject to a fine of not more than five hundred dollars, nor less than one hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not less than one month nor more than six months.

Sec. 117. Whoever procures, aids, assists, counsels or advises another to go or come into any county, town or election district for the purpose of giving his vote therein, knowing that the person is not duly qualified to vote therein, is guilty of felony, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for a term not less than six months nor more than one year.

Sec. 118. The judge having charge of the ballots in the voting room shall not tear them from off the block upon which they are bound, except as they are required by the electors for voting, and the judges shall preserve the unused ballots, together with the ballots that have been spoiled, and return the white and blue ballots to the county auditor, and the red ballots to the city clerk or recorder, with a statement of the number of ballots used, and the county auditor and city clerk or recorder shall respectively give the judges of election receipts therefor.

Sec. 119. Each clerk of election shall make a poll list which shall contain one column headed "Number," one column headed "Residence," one column headed "Names of Voters," and as many additional columns as there are boxes kept at the election, to be headed to correspond with the color of one of the boxes so kept, viz.: "White," "blue" and "red." There shall also be a column headed "Remarks."

Sec. 120. The name of each elector voting shall be entered by each clerk in the column of his poll list headed "Names of Voters," the place of residence of each voter so voting in the column headed "Residence," and when there shall be more than one box kept, opposite such name shall be written the figure one in every remaining column of such poll list corresponding in heading with the name of each box in which a vote of the elector shall be deposited.

In the column headed "number" the clerk shall write consecutively the number of each person voting, the first vote being numbered one.

Said clerk shall enter in the column headed "Remarks" and opposite the name of each person not registered the words "not registered," and if any vote is sworn in such fact shall be noted. The clerks of election shall also enter in the same column on the line containing the name of any elector who received assistance in marking his ballot a brief memorandum of the fact, such as "marked by judge," "marked at door," "marked by........," and if marked by any person other than one of the judges the name of such person shall be added.

Sec. 121. At each of the polling places as provided in this act it shall be the duty of the judges of election to make oral proclamation at the door of such polling place, thirty minutes before the hour fixed by law for the closing of said polls, substantially the following words: "Hear ye, hear ye, hear ye; the polls will be closed in thirty minutes."

When the hour of closing the polls shall have arrived the same shall be closed, regardless of the fact that electors are on the outside who have not yet voted.

Provided, that all electors who shall have received ballots, as well as all electors then present in the polling place as provided by law preparatory to receiving ballots, shall be allowed to prepare and vote such ballots; but no person not then present and inside the polling place shall receive any ballot or ballots after such hour for so closing the polls shall have arrived.

To the end that there shall be no question as to the proper time, the members of the board shall compare time or fix upon the same at or before the opening of the polls, and the standard used for the hour for such opening shall be the standard for the hour for closing the same.

Sec. 122. As soon as the polls are finally closed the judges of election shall prepare at the end of each of the poll lists (which said poll list shall be prefixed by a statement showing the election district and the election in and for which it was used), a statement substantially as follows:

"The number of persons whose names appear above and who were present and voting at the above named election was ......, of whom...... were women; the number of white ballots cast was ......; the number of red ballots cast was ......; and the number of ballots cast by women (such ballots not being included in the numbers above given) was ...."

The blanks in said form shall be filled by the proper number in each case to be written in words and figures, thus: "One hundred and twenty-seven (127)," the figures being in parentheses. Said form shall be signed by each of the judges and attested by each of the clerks, and immediately thereafter they shall prepare, sign and attest a statement at the end of each of the registers substantially as follows:

"The whole number of the above named persons who were present and voting at the above named election was ......" (the number to be written in words and figures.)

Sec. 123. After having prepared and signed the statements in the poll lists and registers, as provided in the last section, the judges shall proceed to canvass the votes taken at such election, and the said canvass shall be public and continued without intermission (except as provided in section seventy-three of this act) until complete and the result declared.

Sec. 124. The ballot boxes shall be opened and the votes canvassed and results declared, one box at a time, and as nearly as may be in the following order: First, the box containing the white ballots. Second, the box containing the ballots tinted blue. Third, the box containing the ballots tinted red.

The ballots in the box provided for women shall then be canvassed for such officers as they are entitled to vote for.

The returns shall not be prepared until all the votes in all the boxes shall have been counted, so as to allow for the correction of errors if any shall have occurred by reason of the deposit of ballots in wrong boxes.

Sec. 125. The canvass shall commence by taking out of the box the ballots unopened (except so far as to ascertain whether every ballot is single), and counting the same to ascertain whether the number of ballots correspond with the number appearing on the poll list to have been cast in such box.

If two or more ballots be found to be so folded together as to present the appearance of a single ballot, they shall be laid aside until the counting of ballots in all the boxes is otherwise completed, and if it shall then appear, on comparison of the said ballots with the number of ballots of the same class appearing by the poll lists to have been cast, that the two ballots so found folded together were cast by one elector, they shall be preserved and laid to one side and not counted; nor shall either of said ballots so folded together be counted if both be marked and both clearly cast by one elector.

If the ballots in any box are found to exceed in number the number of votes cast in such box, they shall be first examined to ascertain if they are all properly marked with the initials of the judges having charge of the ballots, and, in case any are found not so marked, they shall be preserved and laid to one side and not counted if the total number still be in excess of the proper number as shown by the poll lists.

If there is still an excess of ballots they shall be replaced in the box, and one of the judges, without looking, shall draw from the box a number of ballots equal to such excess, and the same shall be laid aside and not counted.

Sec. 126. If the number of ballots found in the proper box shall equal or exceed the number shown by the poll lists as proper to be found therein, no ballots proper to have been deposited therein, but found in another box, shall be counted; but if the number shall be less than the number shown by the poll lists and additional ballots proper to have been deposited in such box shall afterwards be found in another box, such ballots shall be counted in the same manner as if found in the proper box.

Provided, that the counting of such ballots shall not produce an excess of votes above the number of votes designated on the poll lists, in which event the number of ballots so found shall be reduced by drawing therefrom as in the last preceding section provided in cases of excess.

Sec. 127. If one or more ballots not proper to be found among the ballots being canvassed shall be so found the same shall be laid aside until the canvass of the class of ballots to which said ballots belong, when if there be a deficiency in the number of ballots as shown by the poll list for such class said ballots so found in the wrong box shall be included and counted with the ballots to which they belong.

Sec. 128. The number of ballots agreeing or being thus made to agree with the number of votes appearing in the columns of the poll lists, corresponding to the respective boxes, the ballots so laid aside and not counted as aforesaid shall be attached to a certificate made by the judges, stating the reason why the ballots were so laid aside, and the certificate and the ballots attached shall be sealed up in a separate envelope and, except the red ballots, returned to the county auditor with the other returns, and the red ballots shall be returned to the city clerk or recorder.

Sec. 129. The judges of election shall then proceed to count and ascertain the number of votes cast for each person voted for at such election, counting each ballot separately, and numbering the same consecutively in the order in which they are counted, said numbering to be in some uniform place and so done as not to deface or disfigure the ballot in any manner; and the clerk of election shall carefully enter and keep an account of each of said votes so cast in tally-sheets or tally-books as hereinafter provided, and when all the ballots shall have been counted, and from time to time previously thereto if the judges shall so require, said clerks shall compare their tallies, and if necessary, correct the same; and the same shall be done in the case of each separate tally-sheet, or each sheet of the tally-book, before work shall be commenced on another sheet.

Sec. 130. Two tally-books or two sets of tally-sheets shall be furnished for each election district by the official charged with the printing of the ballots and at the same time and in the same manner that such ballots are furnished, and shall be substantially as follows:

Each tally sheet or the first sheet of each tally-book to be furnished by the secretary of state shall be headed "Tally sheet for white ballots, ... election district, ... November, ... 18..." directly under which and extending across the sheet from side to side shall be printed or ruled in red ink two heavy lines one-half of an inch apart.

At the left hand side of each sheet in a column of suitable width, commencing just below said red lines, there shall be printed in plain type the titles of the several offices to be filled and the name of each and every candidate for the same, with as many blank lines as appear on the printed ballot, as well as proposed constitutional amendments or other questions to be voted upon, the whole being as near as may be in the same order as they appear on the official ballot with the squares for marking the same omitted therefrom.

Under each set or group of candidates and blank lines for any one office there shall be a similar line in red ink, extending across the sheet, and another such line across the bottom of said sheet.

Heavy red lines shall be printed or ruled from the red line nearest the top to the red line at the bottom of each of said sheets as follows: Three lines so as to form two spaces, each three-eighths of an inch wide, the first of said lines to be close to the column of names hereinbefore provided for; then lines so as to form ten spaces each one-half inch in width followed by one space three-eighths of an inch wide, and as many additional sets of lines as may be convenient, each set to form ten spaces each one-half of an inch in width followed by one space three-eighths of an inch in width.

Under the name of each candidate or blank line, except where a red line is herein provided, shall be printed or ruled a light blue line extending across the entire sheet, and in each of the spaces one-half of an inch in width and extending from the second line from the top to the bottom line as aforesaid shall be printed or ruled four light-blue lines in such a manner as to divide each of said spaces into five smaller spaces, each one-tenth of an inch in width.

Immediately below the red line across the sheet and nearest the top thereof, there shall be printed in the first of the spaces three-eighths of an inch in width the words, "brought forward," and in the similar space at the extreme right shall be printed the words "carried forward." In each of the other spaces three-eighths of an inch wide shall be printed the word "number," or its abbreviation "No." And over the column of names shall be printed the words "offices and candidates."

On the same line and in the spaces one-half an inch in width shall be printed in figures, in numerical order, commencing at the left, "five," "ten," "fifteen" and so on in multiples of five.

In each column headed "number" or "No." shall be printed in figures in numerical order, "one," "two," "three," and so on, the figure "one" to be placed in the line with and opposite the name of the candidate nearest the top, the figure "two" opposite the name of the next candidate thereon, and in like manner down the entire column, each column so headed "number" to be the counterpart of each and every other column so headed; but no number shall be placed opposite any blank line, but only on the line of a printed name, save that numbers may be placed after "yes," and after "no," when constitutional amendments or other questions are being voted upon.

Sec. 131. The tally-sheets or tally-books to be furnished by county auditors shall be substantially the same as provided in the last preceding section, except that the word "blue" shall be substituted for the word "white" in the heading; and the tally-sheets or tally-books to be furnished by the city clerk or other official charged with the printing of the red ballots shall be similar thereto except that the word "red" shall be substituted for the word "white" in said heading, and except that the column containing the names of candidates may be printed or written or partly printed and partly written, as may be most convenient to said city clerk or other official.

Sec. 132. The tally-sheets, prepared as provided in this act, may be printed separately and consecutively numbered or a sufficient number thereof for an election district may be stitched together in book form, and in all cases the number furnished shall be sufficient for the proper tallying of all votes which may be cast in such district, even though all such votes be cast for one candidate or set of candidates.

Sec. 133. When, for any cause, proper tally-sheets shall not have been received by any board of election, and the same cannot readily be secured, the judges shall cause the clerks to prepare tally-sheets, as near as may be in conformity with the provisions of this act, in which event they shall certify on said sheets the fact that they were so prepared and used because of the non-receipt of official tally-sheets.

Sec. 134. In canvassing the votes cast as herein provided, a memoranda shall be kept of the name of the reading judge and of the numbers of the ballots read by him, of the name of the judge watching such reading, and of the name of the judge who shall string the ballots and watch the clerks; and when they shall change places or clerks are relieved temporarily or otherwise, a memoranda of the same shall be kept. Said memoranda shall be certified in duplicate and one copy thereof shall be attached to each of the tally-books or set of tally-sheets.

Sec. 135. In counting the votes as the reading judge announces the name of a candidate and the office voted for, each of the clerks shall make a small straight mark, substantially like the figure one, in the small unoccupied space nearest said name, as provided therefor on the tally-sheet, and on a line with the name of such candidate, and one of the clerks shall at the time of making such mark say "one," "two," "three," "four," or "five," according to whether the blank space is first, second, third, fourth or fifth in any space one-half an inch in width and formed by red lines as aforesaid. If the other clerk shall find the same small space the proper one in which to make such mark he shall so enter the same, but if not he shall at once call attention thereto and the two tally-sheets shall be made to correspand and the record made correct.

In like manner as other names are read the proper marks shall be made on each of the tally-sheets, until a line on which is the name of any one candidate shall contain no more unoccupied small spaces, whereupon, the sheets having been compared, a mark in ink shall be made after the last tally opposite each of the names thereon in such a manner that no additional tallies can be made thereon without detection.

In the vacant space under the heading "carried forward" shall then be entered, in figures the total vote so far received by each of the candidates, opposite their respective names and the same figures shall be entered under the head "brought forward" and opposite the proper names on the sheet next to be used; whereupon the clerks shall use said last named sheet in the same manner as before, except that under the heading "carried forward" shall be included the vote entered thereon under the heading "brought forward."

And said clerks shall use said sheets in the order in which they are paged or numbered, until all the votes shall have been counted, after which they shall place, immediately after a small mark to prevent other tallies being made, the total vote received by each candidate, the same to be in both words and figures, but the same shall not be done until it is known that there are no more ballots, erroneously placed in other boxes, to be counted in connection with the canvass then being made.

Sec. 136. In the counting of ballots cast at any election, all ballots shall be counted for the persons for whom they were intended, so far as such intent can be clearly ascertained from the ballot itself, and in determining the intent the following rules shall be observed:

1. When the elector shall place a mark against two or more names for the same office, there being but one to be elected, he shall be deemed to have voted for none of them, and the vote counted for none.

2. When the elector shall have written the name of a person in the proper place for writing the same, he shall be deemed to have voted for that person, whether he makes or fails to make a crossmark (X) opposite such name.

3. A mark made out of its proper place, but on a name or so near it as to clearly indicate that it was intended for that name, shall be deemed a vote for that name; and if the mark is so near a space for marking as to indicate that it was intended for that space, it shall be deemed intended for the name to which such space applies.

4. When a number of persons are to be elected to one office all crossmarks in the small squares opposite names, not exceeding the total to be elected, including names written thereon, shall be counted. If less than the number to be elected are marked only those so marked shall be counted.

5. The judges shall disregard misspelling or abbreviations of the names of candidates for office if it can be clearly ascertained from such ballot for whom it was intended.

6. Any ballot from which the judges can determine the elector's choice for a part of the offices shall be counted for such part; but the remainder of the ballot from which it is impossible to determine the elector's choice shall be void as to such defective part, and such defective part shall not be counted.

7. If an elector in marking his ballot shall use a mark other than a crossmark (X), as V, or I, or —, or O, or other mark clearly indicating an intent to mark against any name, it shall be deemed a sufficient vote for the candidate or candidates against whose name or names so marked; but not if the crossmark (X) be used elsewhere on the same ballot.

8. If a ballot shows that a mark has been made against the name of two candidates, and an attempt made to erase or obliterate one of such marks, the ballot shall be counted for the candidate for whom the elector evidently intended to vote.

9. All ballots prepared as provided in section one hundred in this act shall be counted for the candidates or measures therein shown to be voted for.

Sec. 137. When any ballot or part of a ballot shall not be counted because of inability of the judges to determine the intent of the elector, said ballot shall be marked "defective" on the back thereof, or "defective as to ......," naming the office wherein found defective, and a memoranda of the numbers of such ballots and, if defective in part only, of the defective parts not counted shall be made out and certified by the judges and accompany the returns of such canvass. Said defective ballots shall be strung in regular order, with ballots which are duly counted.

Sec. 138. As soon as the ballots are read and canvassed, and in the order in which the same is done, said ballots shall be strung by one of the judges upon a stout string, and they shall be replaced in the ballot box, from which they were taken and in which they belong, the string being first tied and sealed. And when the correct result shall have been ascertained one of the judges so engaged in said canvass shall in a loud voice announce to those present the number of votes cast for each candidate voted for.

Sec. 139. In election districts in cities having a population of over twelve thousand inhabitants, to facilitate the casting of the ballots of electors and the counting and canvassing of the same, there shall be one additional judge of election, to be known as ballot judge, and two additional clerks of election, to be known as ballot clerks, to be chosen and appointed and vacancies filled as in the case of other judges and clerks, not more than two of the four judges nor more than two of the four clerks to belong to the same political party. Said ballot judge and ballot clerks to perform no duties in the matter of registration of voters or to render any service prior to the election or after the canvass except as expressly provided in this act.

Sec. 140. In all election districts in cities having a population of less than twelve thousand inhabitants, as well as in all villages and towns, a ballot judge and two ballot clerks shall be chosen and appointed as provided for in the last preceding section, and their powers and duties shall be as provided in this act.

Provided, that the city council, village council or town supervisors shall, at least thirty days prior to the election, order that such ballot judge and ballot clerks be chosen, the system to be uniform in all election districts throughout such city, village or town in which the same may be ordered, and the system followed at one election to be thereafter followed unless otherwise ordered by the city council, village council or town supervisors, as the case may be.

Sec. 141. Whenever a ballot judge and ballot clerks shall be chosen they shall each be in attendance at the opening of the polls and shall serve until all the votes are counted. They shall receive from the judges of election the blocks of ballots and the same shall be issued to electors by them, as hereinbefore provided to be done by the judges of election and in lieu thereof. Said ballot judge and one of the ballot clerks (the two not being members of the same political party) shall place their initials on the back of the ballots, and said ballot clerks shall under direction of the ballot judge show electors how to fold their ballots, and if requested so to do, in general terms how to mark the same, but shall not mark it or allow it to be marked in their presence.

One of said ballot clerks shall have a copy of the register (of which three copies shall be prepared by the board of registration), which shall be conspicuously marked "ballot register," in which shall be checked the name of each elector to whom ballots shall be issued. If a challenge be interposed, the same shall be referred to the board of election proper, and no ballots issued until the same shall have been determined.

The ballot judge shall also have charge of the door, and shall see that electors retire promptly to voting booths, and that the gatekeeper does his duty. And any and all things otherwise required to be done by the judges of election prior to receiving the ballots from electors, shall, as far as consistent with the provisions hereof, be done by said ballot judge and ballot clerks.

Sec. 142. Whenever the board of election proper shall determine that the same is advisable the ballot judge shall deliver to the elector at the time he receives his ballots a small card or paper on which shall be written or printed the first letter of the surname of the said elector and a number corresponding with the number opposite his name in the registers; and said elector shall hand the same with his ballots to the judge in charge of the ballot boxes, who shall, in addition to other announcements, state said number to aid the other judges in quickly finding the name of said elector on the registers used by them.

And in like manner, if the same be deemed advisable, said judge in charge of the ballot boxes may, after an elector has voted, hand him a card or cards to be delivered by him to the ballot judge, before leaving the polling place, as evidence that the ballots delivered to him have been properly disposed of.

Sec. 143. After the polls have been closed said ballot judge shall attach to said ballot register and at the end thereof a statement substantially as follows:

"The whole number of the above named persons who were present and received ballots for the purpose of voting was .... The number of persons returning spoiled ballots and receiving other ballots was ......, the spoiled ballots being: white ballots, ...; blue ballots, ...; red ballots, ...; total, ..." The blanks to be filled in by both words and figures, and the statement to be certified by the ballot judge and attested by the ballot clerks, and said ballot register to be delivered to the city, village or town clerk.

Sec. 144. The statements provided by this act to be made, certified and attested in the poll lists and registers, and other necessary arrangements for the canvass having been made, the same shall be commenced. The ballot judge and one of the other judges, not of the same political party, with the aid of the ballot clerks, shall count and canvass the white ballots and make out the returns therefor, and the other judges and clerks shall count and canvass the blue ballots and make out the returns therefor. If there be a third ballot box the red ballots therein shall be counted, canvassed and return made by the board which shall the soonest complete its other work, or the members may relieve one another as they think best. In any event the memoranda provided for in this act shall be kept, and the counting and canvassing done and returns made substantially as required where no ballot judge or ballot clerks are provided for, and all the judges and all the clerks shall sign the returns. Each political party shall be entitled to one watcher for each counting board.

Sec. 145. In cities in which the municipal election is held on the same day as the general state election, the city council may, at least thirty days before election, direct that in all election districts in said city, in addition to other officers provided for in this act, there shall be two special judges of election and two special clerks of election, in which event they shall be chosen and appointed as are the regular judges and clerks, and subject to like restrictions. They shall have no authority to act during the election, but shall be present at the hour for closing the polls, and if not so present the vacancies may be filled as in other cases provided. Said special judges and special clerks shall count and canvass the red ballots only, and make return of the same as provided by law.

Sec. 146. Said ballot judges, ballot clerks, special judges and special clerks shall possess the same qualifications and be paid the same compensation, for like services, as other judges and clerks of election, and shall be subject to like penalties for any violation of this act. They shall deliver all returns made by them to the board of election proper, as well as election supplies and furnishings of every description; and the said board of election shall do or cause to be done all things thereafter by this act required to be done by them to the same extent as though no ballot judges or special judges or ballot clerks or special clerks had been provided for or in attendance.

Sec. 147. Nothing in this act shall be deemed to authorize the employment or service of ballot judges, ballot clerks, special judges or special clerks at any save at a general state election.

Sec. 148. When the canvass shall have been completed, and as soon as practicable thereafter, in the presence of all the judges, each box shall be locked and sealed by pasting firm paper across the lid and body of each box in such a manner that the box cannot be opened without breaking the seal; and each judge shall write his name upon said paper in such place that the box cannot be opened without tearing the name. Said sealings shall not be done, however, until it shall have been ascertained, by a canvass of the ballots in all the boxes, that all the ballots so to be sealed up in said box have been placed therein; but the same shall in all cases be done before the board shall separate or adjourn.

Sec. 149. Each ballot box as soon as practicable after the same is sealed as provided in the last preceding section, shall be deposited in the office of the town, city or village clerk, and carefully preserved therein with unbroken seals until the next general election, unless sooner opened by the proper authority for a recount or for examination. If, however, any committee of either of the political parties represented on the ticket voted at such election shall, on or before the day of election, apply to the legal custodian of the ballot box or ballot boxes for permission to affix additional seals and securities to the ballot boxes within the control of such custodian, said custodian shall give such permission, and immediately notify the party so applying of the time when the same shall be done, which time shall not be later than two days after election.

Sush custodian shall forthwith, after receipt of such application, notify all parties upon such election ticket, or their representatives of the fact of such application, and the time when such seals will be affixed, and that at such time so designated at the office of said custodian, in the presence of such custodian and of the representatives of the political parties upon said ticket, the party so applying shall have the right to affix additional seals and securities, and in any manner secure and mark the same, and any of the other parties then present shall have the same right and privileges as the party so applying; but none of said parties shall in any manner injure or impair any of the seals on said box hereinbefore provided.

Sec. 150. After the canvass of the votes shall have been completed one of said poll lists and one of said registers so kept and checked as aforesaid shall be attached together, and on the following day shall be filed in the office of the city, town or village clerk, together with the ballot register, if any, and the other of said poll lists and registers and poll books so kept and checked shall be returned to the office of the county auditor at the time the returns of the election are made.

Said poll lists and registers shall at all times be open to public inspection at the office of the authorities in which they shall be deposited, without charge.

Sec. 151. In making out the statement to be known as the returns of election, on blank forms to be furnished as provided in this act and to be prepared by the clerks of election when not so furnished, said clerks of election shall set down the total number of names entered upon the registers of election, male and female separately, in columns prepared therefor, and the total number of ballots actually cast and counted the name of each and every person voted for, written out at length, the office for which such person received any votes, and the number of votes he received, the number being written out in words and also in figures. The said returns shall be as nearly as possible in the following form, to-wit: "At an election held at ...... in the (number, if any) ...... election district, composed of ...... (township, ward or town, as the case may be), in the county of ......, in the state of Minnesota, on the ......day of ......, eighteen hundred ......, the following named persons received the number of votes opposite their respective names for the following described offices, to-wit:

For (specifying the office) A. received (the number to be written in figures and also at length) votes," (and likewise for every person voted for for any office.)

Said returns shall be made in duplicate and each copy thereof shall be signed by the judges of election and attested by the clerks of election.

In any city having a population of forty thousand or more inhabitants the city council may require said judges of election to insert on forms to be prepared by the city clerk a preliminary statement of the votes cast as soon as the count of any one class of ballots shall have been completed, and in like manner as soon as any other class of ballots shall have been completed. Said statement or statements shall be signed by one or more of the judges of election, and, as soon as practicable after the result shall be known for state, county or city offices, as the case may be, shall be delivered to a special messenger to be designated by the city clerk, which special messenger shall at once take the same to the office of such city clerk; but said statement shall not be deemed an official return or used for any purpose save for general information in advance of the preparation and filing of the official returns.

Sec. 152. After the canvass is thus completed the judges of election, before they are dispersed, shall enclose the said returns in envelopes, seal the same, and endorse thereon the following words: "Election returns of the election district of (naming the name of the town or ward or city), in the county of ......," and direct one of the same to the county auditor of that county and the other to the town, or village clerk; and in the case of a city election, to the city clerk or recorder.

Sec. 153. One copy of the returns provided for in the last preceding section shall (except in cities having over twelve thousand inhabitants) be carried by one of said judges, to be chosen by lot if not otherwise agreed upon, and delivered to the said county auditor at his office and the other copy shall be delivered to the clerk of the town, city or village wherein said election district is located. And in case of any town, city or village or town election, the returns thereof shall be so certified, attested and delivered to the clerk of such town, city or village.

Sec. 154. Returns of election in unorganized counties shall be made to the auditor of the county to which they are attached for election purposes; and the vote shall be canvassed and certificates of election issued to the persons elected in the same manner provided in this act for canvassing the votes and issuing certificates of election in unorganized counties.

Sec. 155. Except in cities having over twelve thousand inhabitants, the judges of all election districts, situate within fifty miles of the county seat, shall file their election returns within twenty-four hours after the time of closing the polls; and in all other cases the returns shall be filed within seventy-two hours after the closing of the polls.

Provided, however, that sufficient time has intervened between the time of closing said polls and the time for so filing said returns, in which to canvass the votes and make out and deliver said returns.

Any judge or judges failing to file returns as provided in this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sec. 156. In all cities having over twelve thousand inhabitants, the judges and clerks, immediately after the completion of the canvass of votes and making out of returns, shall, without separating one from the other and without stopping at any place or leaving their ballot boxes or returns at any place or with any person, deliver said returns and ballot boxes, and all things by this act required to be delivered by them, to the city clerk or recorder at the office of said city clerk or recorder.

Said city clerk or recorder, or his properly authorized deputy, shall remain in his office to receive such returns or ballot boxes and ballots, until all of the same from all of the election districts within his said city have been so returned to him.

Said city clerk or recorder shall keep a book in which he shall enter in the presence of said judges and clerks the names of said judges and the hour at which they returned and delivered to him said returns and ballot boxes and ballots; which book shall be preserved by said officer as a public document for the same length of time as he is required to preserve the ballots cast at such election.

Said judges of election shall select one of their number, to be chosen by lot if not otherwise agreed upon, to deliver the returns and ballots, as provided herein, to the county auditor.

Said judge, so selected, shall so deliver said returns and ballots and all things required by this act to be so delivered to the county auditor or his deputy, within twenty-four hours after the delivery of the ballot boxes and returns at the office of the said city clerk or recorder as aforesaid.

Any one violating any provision of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sec. 157. There shall be paid out of the county treasury of each county to the person carrying the election ballots from the office of the county auditor, for the election districts in his town, city or village, and also for the carrying of the returns of election to the county auditor the sum of one dollar, and also the sum of ten cents for every mile necessarily traveled in going to and returning from the office of the county auditor for each of the purposes above named. This provision to extend to unorganized counties, and to be paid out of the treasury of the county to which they are attached.

All expenses for printing the blue ballots and for the carrying of the ballots and returns as herein provided shall be audited and allowed by the board of county commissioners of the proper county in the same manner as other claims are allowed, and may be paid upon the warrant of the county auditor.

Sec. 158. At all elections to be held under this act each member of a board of election shall receive as compensation for his services the sum of thirty cents per hour for each and every hour necessarily engaged therein, but no allowance shall be made for time spent by them in arranging for polling places, arranging booths or other services not specifically required by this act to be done by them or either of them.

Special constables shall be paid the sum of twenty cents per hour, for such time as the judges shall require their services, not exceeding twenty-four hours, their bills to be certified by the judges.

The compensation provided for in this section, as well as the expenses of providing ballot boxes and polling places, shall be borne by the several townships, cities and villages where the election is conducted; and the city or village council or town supervisors shall, in the event of disputes, determine whether or not the said judges or clerks were "necessarily engaged" for the length of time for which compensation is claimed.

Sec. 159. If any judge or clerk of election, or any other officer or any other person required by this act to keep safely and produce the ballots intrusted to him on the day of election, or to perform any act or thing whatever, shall wilfully fail or refuse to perform such act or thing, or shall be guilty of any fraud, corruption, partiality, misbehavior in canvassing or making any returns of votes, or shall wrongfully refuse to make or deliver any certificate of election, or shall wilfully perform any act or thing falsely or corruptly in any manner, he shall be guilty of a felony, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for a term not less than six months nor more than one year, or by a fine of not less than five hundred dollars nor more than two thousand dollars, or both, in the discretion of the court. The provisions of this section to apply in all cases coming within the provisions of this act where other punishment is not specially provided for.

Sec. 160. Whoever shall wilfully take or carry away from the place where has been deposited, or shall deface or mutilate, damage or add to any poll book, ballot, list or register, or any name or figure therein, shall on conviction thereof, be fined in a sum not exceeding one thousand dollars, or be imprisoned in the state prison not longer than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 161. If, from any cause, the judges of elections shall fail to make return as provided by this act it shall be the duty of the county auditor or clerk to whose office such returns ought to have been made to dispatch a special messenger to obtain such returns and said messenger shall be entitled to the same compensation as a judge of election for such services and be subject to the same penalties.

Sec. 162. No election returns shall be refused by any county auditor, or town, city or village clerk or recorder for the reason that the same are returned or delivered to him in any other than the manner directed herein, except that they must be sealed.

Sec. 163. No canvassing board of any county, town, city or village shall refuse to include any returns in its canvass of votes on account of any informality in holding any election or making returns thereof; but all returns shall be received and the votes canvassed by such canvassing board, and included in its statements provided there is a substantial compliance with the provisions of this act.

Sec. 164. The county auditor, the chairman of the board of county commissioners, and two justices of the peace of the same county, of opposite political parties, if possible, to be selected by the auditor, shall constitute the county canvassing board, and on or before the tenth day after the election, said board shall proceed, after taking the usual oath of office, to openly and publicly canvass the returns made to the auditor's office.

Sec. 165. Said county canvassing board shall make and prepare separate statements, the same to be signed and certified by said board and deposited in the office of the county auditor.

Any three of said county canvassing board shall constitute a quorum, and are authorized to make the canvass provided in the last preceding section, and to certify to said statements, which shall be as follows:

A statement containing the whole number of votes given in such county for the office of governor and lieutenant governor, chief or associate justices of the supreme court, secretary of state, auditor of state, treasurer of state, clerk of the supreme court, judges of the district court, and all other officers of the state, the names of the persons for whom such votes were given, and the number of votes given for each, also upon the same return there shall be entered the total number of registered names, male and female separately, in each election district, and the total number of ballots actually cast therein.

2. A statement for all county officers voted for, and the names of the persons for whom such votes were given.

3. A statement of the votes for presidential electors, and the names of the persons for whom such votes were given.

4. A statement of the votes given for representative in congress in each district, or any or either of them, and the names of the persons for whom such votes were given.

5. A statement of the votes upon any proposed change of county line or county seat.

6. A statement of the votes given for and against proposed amendments to the constitution.

Sec. 166. Two copies of each of the separate statements provided for in the last preceding section shall be made, and the same shall be certified under the official seal of the auditor, one of which shall be enclosed and directed to the secretary of state and be forwarded to the seat of government by mail, and the other copy shall be enclosed and forwarded to the secretary of state in a like manner as the first copy, but by different mail, and within five days after such first copy shall have been so transmitted.

In the event that neither of said copies so transmitted shall be received by the secretary of state within twenty days after the election, the county auditor shall transmit, by a messenger to be deputed by him, upon notification from the secretary of state, another copy of such statement.

If within twenty days after such election, no such copy shall have been received by the secretary of state from each county in the state, it shall be his duty to immediately notify the auditors of each county from which such returns have not been received, of such fact.

The county auditor shall endorse on the envelope enclosing each of such statements or copies the names of the auditor and his official residence, and the words "election returns."

Sec. 167. At the close of the canvass by the county canvassing board it shall declare the person having the highest number of votes for any county office, duly elected, subject to an appeal to the district court of the proper county.

And, in case said county contains a senatorial or representative district, then the persons having the highest number for senator or representative shall be declared by said board duly elected.

In case of an appeal, notice thereof shall be entered with the clerk of said court within twenty days after the day of election.

Sec. 168. The county auditor shall make out for every county officer elected, and also for each of the senators and representatives elected to the legislature, if such county constitutes a senatorial or representative district, a certificate of such election and shall deliver the same to the person entitled thereto, upon demand, without fee.

The county auditor shall also make out for any candidate or elector of his county a certified copy of any statement of votes, as made by the county canvassing board, on being paid or tendered one dollar therefor.

Sec. 169. The county auditor of each county which does not constitute a senatorial or representative district shall make out from the returns in his office a statement of the votes for members of the senate and house of representatives, which he shall seal and direct to the county auditor of the senior county in each senatorial or representative district respectively.

If there be two or more counties in such district of the same age, then the returns shall be directed to the auditor of the county polling the greatest number of votes at the last preceding general election; and said auditor shall forward such statement to the proper auditor within fifteen days after the election.

Sec. 170. When two or more counties are comprised in one senatorial district, the auditor of the senior county, or of the county to which the returns are to be made, shall, on the twentieth day after election, with such other county auditors of the district as choose to attend at his office, call to his assistance two justices and the chairman of the board of county commissioners of his county, and then and there open the returns of the votes given in the several counties, or portions of counties, comprising such senatorial districts.

Said auditor of the county to which the returns are made shall immediately make out certificates of election for the persons having the highest number of votes in such senatorial district for the members of the legislature, which certificates shall be delivered to the persons entitled thereto.

Sec. 171. If on proceeding to canvass the votes it shall appear to said senatorial district board of canvassers, or a majority thereof, that in any statement produced certain matters are omitted in such statement that should have been inserted, or that any mistakes that are clerical merely exist, they shall cause the said statement to be sent by one of their number, or by a messenger whom they shall depute for that purpose, to the county or district canvassers of the county, town or district from which such statements were received, to have the same corrected, and the persons so deputed shall immediately proceed and give notice to the said county, town or district canvassers.

Said county, town or district canvassers shall forthwith assemble together and make such corrections as the facts of the case may require; but shall not change or alter any decision before made by them, but shall only cause their canvass to be correctly stated.

Said senatorial district board of canvassers are authorized to adjourn from day to day for the purpose of revising such statements, such adjournments not to exceed ten days.

Sec. 172. Every auditor, chairman of the board of county commissioners and justices of the peace shall receive for services performed under this act the following fees:

For each mile necessarily traveled in going to and from the place where the official canvass is made, ten cents; for making the statements, for every one hundred words, eight cents; for every certificate with seal attached to statements, thirty cents.

Said fees shall be allowed by the board of county commissioners of the proper county and paid by the county treasurer upon the warrant of the county auditor.

Sec. 173. The secretary of state shall call to his assistance two or more judges of the supreme court, and two disinterested judges of the district court of the state, who shall constitute the state canvassing board.

The secretary of state shall appoint a meeting of the state canvassing board to be held in his office the third Tuesday of December after each general election, and within thirty days after a special election.

If a majority of said board shall be unable, or shall fail to attend on the day appointed, he shall select from the disinterested judges of the supreme court, and notify to attend, as many as may be necessary to constitute the required number.

Upon being notified, said judges shall attend without delay, and with the officers attending shall form the board. Members of said board shall receive three dollars for each day's attendance and ten cents for each mile necessarily traveled in going to and from the place where the state official canvass is made, to be paid in like manner as are presidential electors.

Sec. 174. The state canvassing board, when formed, shall, upon the certified copies of the statements made by the county canvassing boards, proceed to make a statement of the whole number of votes given at such election for the various state officers, which statement shall contain the names of the persons for whom such votes have been given for any state office, and the whole number of votes given to each, distinguishing the several counties in which they are given.

Said board shall certify such statement to be correct, and shall subscribe to the same with their proper names.

Sec. 175. At the same time said canvassing board shall open the returns made to the secretary of state for members of congress, and for electors of president and vice president of the United States, and shall forthwith proceed to make a statement of the number of votes given for the different persons voted for for the said offices, and the person or persons having the highest number of votes for each office shall be considered duly elected.

But if it appears that more than the number of persons to be elected as electors of president and vice president have the highest and an equal number of votes, the secretary of state, in the presence of the officers present, shall decide by lot which of the persons shall be elected as such electors, and to each person duly elected the governor shall give a certificate of election signed by him, sealed by the great seal and countersigned by the secretary of state, and shall transmit the said certificate to each person so elected, and shall cause the election of electors to be published in the newspapers printed at the seat of government, immediately after the said canvass is completed.

If there shall be a tie in the number of votes received by candidates for representatives in congress who receive the highest number of votes, a special election shall be called, as hereinafter provided, for the election of a representative or representatives in congress, in the district or districts in which said tie vote occurred.

Sec. 176. The presidential electors chosen as aforesaid shall, at twelve o'clock on the day directed by the congress of the United States, meet at the seat of government of this state, and then and there perform the duties enjoined on them by the constitution and laws of the United States.

Sec. 177. Every elector of president and vice president of the United States shall, before the hour of twelve on the day next preceding the day fixed by law for congress to elect a president and vice president, give notice to the governor that he is at the seat of government and is ready at the proper time to fulfill the duties of an elector.

And the governor shall forthwith deliver to the electors present a certificate of all the names of the electors, and if any electors named therein fail to appear before nine o'clock on the morning of the day for the election of president and vice president of the United States, the electors then present shall immediately proceed to elect by ballot in the presence of the governor, persons to fill such vacancies.

Sec. 178. If more than the number of persons required to fill such vacancies as aforesaid have the highest and an equal number of votes, the governor, in the presence of the electors attending, shall decide by lot which of said persons shall be elected; otherwise, those, to the number required, having the greatest number of votes shall be considered elected to fill such vacancies.

Sec. 179. Immediately after such choice is made, the names of the persons so chosen shall be certified to the governor by the electors making such choice, and the governor shall immediately cause notice to be given in writing to the electors so chosen to fill such vacancy; and the persons so chosen shall be electors and shall meet the other electors at the same time and place, and then and there discharge all and singular the duties enjoined on them as electors aforesaid by the constitution and laws of the United States and of this state.

Sec. 180. Each presidential elector attending at the seat of government, as provided in this act, shall receive three dollars for every day's attendance, and three dollars for every twenty miles traveled in going to and returning from the seat of government, estimated from his place of residence, by the most usual route.

Such sums shall be allowed by the auditor upon the certificate of the governor and paid by the state treasurer, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Sec. 181. Any candidate or elector of the proper county, senatorial, judicial or election district, wishing to contest the validity of the election, or the right of any elector declared duly elected to the senate or house of representatives in this state, or to contest his right to a seat therein, shall give notice thereof in writing to the person whose election or right to a seat he intends to contest, or leave a written notice thereof where such person last resided, within twenty days after the votes have been canvassed by the county canvassing board, specifying the points on which the election will be contested, and naming two justices of the peace of the county in which he resides who will officiate at the taking of the depositions and when and where they will attend to take the same.

All notices shall be served at least ten days before the day designated therein for the taking of such depositions, but the time fixed for the taking of the same shall not exceed forty-five days from the day of the election.

Sec. 182. Said justices, or either of them, shall issue subpoenas to all persons whose testimony is required by either of the parties; and said two justices shall take, under oath, all testimony relating to such contested election, and certify the same under seal to the presiding officer, in that branch of the legislature where the person whose seat is contested is returned to serve at the next session.

Sec. 183. If a person whose election is contested desires to offer testimony upon points not specified in the notice of the contestant, he shall within ten days after the contestant's notice is served upon him as aforesaid, serve upon said contestant in the manner provided in section one hundred and eighty-one of this act, a notice specifying such additional points, and specifying a place and day (which shall not be more than ten days later than the time fixed by the contestant in his notice for taking depositions) at which time testimony therein will be taken before two justices of the same county, which notice shall be served at least ten days previous to the time of taking such testimony.

No testimony shall be taken by said justices which does not relate to some point specified in said notice, copies of which shall be delivered to the justices taking testimony and by them transmitted to the presiding officer of that branch of the legislature where the contest is decided, with the other documents provided for by section one hundred and eighty-two.

Sec. 184. In conducting any contested election in the house of representatives, the following rules shall be observed:

1. On the day and at the hour appointed for that purpose, the house, with proper officers, shall assemble at the usual place of meeting. The speaker of the house of representatives shall preside, but when he is a contestee a speaker pro tem. shall be elected.

2. The parties to the contest shall then be called by the clerk, and, if they answer, their appearance shall be recorded.

3. The contestant shall then first introduce his testimony, and, after the testimony is closed on both sides, the contestant, by himself or by his counsel, may open the contest, and the officer-elect may then proceed, by himself or counsel, to make his defense, and the contestant be heard in reply. After the argument of both parties is concluded, any member of the house may offer the reasons for the vote he intends to give.

4. The clerk shall keep a regular journal of the proceedings.

5. In deciding the contest the members shall vote viva voce, and the majority of the votes given shall decide; but no party to the contest shall vote, either upon the final decision or upon any preliminary question that has reference thereto.

If the contest is in the senate it shall proceed as nearly as may be according to the rules above prescribed.

Sec. 185. Any candidate or elector of the proper city or county may contest the election of any person declared elected to any city or county office. He shall give notice thereof in the manner provided in section one hundred and eighty-one for services of such notice.

If the person whose election is contested desires to offer testimony upon points not specified in the notice of the contestant, he shall, in the manner provided in section one hundred and eighty-three, serve notice on the contestant specifying such additional points.

Upon such notices, which are not to be taken as true until proved, and which may be amended if the court under all the circumstances deem it just, all testimony shall be taken as in civil actions, and all matters relating to said contest shall be heard and tried by the district court of the proper county in the manner that civil actions are tried by the court.

Sec. 186. Said contest relative to a city or county office shall be brought on for hearing and the costs therein taxed by said district court in the manner that civil actions are conducted. Said district court at the next general or special term, after the expiration of thirty days after the votes are canvassed, shall hear and determine the contest; and the judge of the said court, in case no general or special term occurs within ninety days after the canvass of the votes, shall appoint a special term of said court, to convene within ten days after notice of such contest shall be given to him.

Sec. 187. When the judgment or decision of the district court in any contest shall be removed to the supreme court, the party removing the same shall file in the district court a bond to the opposite party, in such sum not less than five hundred dollars, and with such sureties as shall be approved by the judge, conditioned for the payment of all costs incurred by the respondent in case the appellant fail on his appeal.

The return on said appeal shall be made, settled, certified and filed in the supreme court within fifteen days after the date of service of notice of appeal, and upon perfecting said appeal the same may be brought on for hearing and determination before said supreme court at any time when the same shall be in session, and upon ten days' notice from either party; and the same shall be heard and determined in a summary manner. Such notice of hearing may be served during the term or in vacation.

Sec. 188. After any contest has been instituted, either party to the contest shall have the right to have the ballots referred to inspected for the purpose of enabling him to prepare his contest for trial; and, upon application by such party to the district court upon a verified petition, stating that he cannot prepare his case for trial without an examination and inspection of the ballots cast at the preceding election, the judges of said court shall appoint three persons, one to be selected by each of the parties to the contest, and these to select a third, to whom the inspection and examination of said ballots shall be referred.

Provided, that said inspection and examination shall be had and conducted in the presence of the proper custodian of the ballots; and provided further that the party making such application shall file with the clerk of the district court a bond in the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars, with two sureties, to be approved by the judge of said court, conditioned that he will pay the cost and expense of such examination and inspection, in the event that he shall fail to maintain his contest.

Should either party to the contest neglect or refuse to name the persons to whom said inspection shall be referred, on his part, such person shall be selected and appointed by the judges of the district court to whom the application is made.

Sec. 189. On the trial of any contested election for any of the offices named in the one hundred and seventy-fourth, the one hundred and eighty-first, or the one hundred and eighty-fifth sections of this act the parties to the contest may introduce written or oral testimony, but no depositions shall be read at such trial, unless the other party has reasonable notice of the time and place of taking the same.

Sec. 190. In any county in which there is a vote for the removal of the county seat, or changing the county line of said county, or upon any other subjects which by law may be submitted to the vote of the people, any elector therein may contest the validity of such election as to the right of the place declared to be selected for the county seat to be such; or as to the result when the proposition to remove a county seat is declared defeated, or as to any county line declared established by said vote; or as to the result of any vote upon any subject submitted as aforesaid.

Such elector shall give notice in writing of such contest to the county commissioners, or one of them, in the county in which said vote was taken, by serving copies of said notices personally upon said commissioners within thirty days after the result of said vote is declared or proclaimed.

Sec. 191. The notice provided for in the last preceding section shall specify the points on which said election will be contested, and a copy thereof shall be filed with the clerk of the district court of the proper county within ten days after the service thereof upon a county commissioner; and the district court, at its first general or special term shall hear and determine on such contest upon the oral and written evidence of the parties; and depositions may be taken by any of the parties to the proceedings in the same manner as in civil actions, but no appeal to said district court shall be necessary in any such case.

Such commissioners, or upon their failure, any elector of the proper county, may appear and defend in such contest, and introduce evidence as in other actions.

Sec. 192. Whenever in any contested election, the tribunal trying the case shall decide that the ballots used in one or more election districts were, by reason of the omission, addition, misplacing, misspelling or misstatements of one or more titles of offices, or names of candidates or parties or policies represented by them, so defective as to the office in contest as to be calculated to mislead the voters in regard to any of the candidates nominated for the said office, and that the defective condition of the said ballots may have affected the result of the entire election for the said office the said tribunal shall declare the election to be invalid as regards the said office.

Sec. 193. The provisions of this act relative to contests shall not apply to any case now pending, or growing out of any election heretofore held, but such contests shall be determined in the same manner as though this act had not been passed.

Sec. 194. Whoever writes, prints, posts or distributes, or causes to be written, printed, posted or distributed, a circular or poster or other written or printed paper, which is designed or tends to injure or defeat any candidate for nomination or election to any public office, by reflecting upon his personal character or political actions, unless the same shall be published in a newspaper avowedly responsible therefor, or unless there appears upon such cir cular, poster or paper in a conspicuous place either the names of the chairman and secretary, or at least the names of two officers of the political or other organization issuing the same, or the name of some duly registered elector with description of his election district, as responsible therefor, shall be punished by fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or by imprisonment in jail not exceeding six months, or both; and if the statements are untrue the person so offending shall also be deemed guilty of libel and may be prosecuted in the civil or criminal courts or both thereof.

Sec. 195. The punishment for any of the offenses in this act declared to be misdemeanors, not herein specifically provided for, shall be a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding two years, or both such fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 196. It shall be the duty of the county attorney in each county in this state to prosecute any person violating any of the provisions of this act, and to sue for and enforce all penalties incurred for a violation of this act or any part thereof, upon his own motion, or upon the complaint of his county, accompanied by the requisite proof of such offense or offenses.

Sec. 197. All fines incurred or collected under this act shall be paid into the county treasury of the county wherein the offense was committed for the use of the common schools of such county.

Sec. 198. In city elections this act shall be construed in connection with laws authorizing such elections, which shall be held at such time or times as such laws may provide; nor shall the terms of city officials be affected by any of the provisions of this act.

Sec. 199. This act shall apply to all general and special elections in the state of Minnesota, except township and village elections, and shall be known as the general election law of the state.

Sec. 200. Chapter four of the general laws of one thousand eight hundred and ninety-one, being an act entitled "An act to regulate elections," approved April 20, 1891, and all other acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

Sec. 201. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after the first day of June, eighteen hundred and ninety-three.

Approved April 21, 1893.

CHAPTER 5—S. F. NO. 465.

AN ACT to confirm the location and establishment of the Minnesota hospitals for the insane, to provide for commitment thereto, the management and supervision thereof, and the licensing and supervision of all other hospitals for the insane.

Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Minnesota:

Section 1. The location and establishment of the three present hospitals for the insane, at St. Peter, Rochester and Fergus Falls, and all conveyances and transfers of land, buildings, property and funds heretofore made to, or for either of said hospitals, is hereby ratified and confirmed, and continued in force under a board of trustees consisting of five members, of whom at least two shall not be of the same political party as the governor, to be appointed as hereinafter provided, and the superintendent and corps of physicians at the Fergus Falls hospital shall continue to be of the school of homeopathy.

Sec. 2. The hospital at St. Peter shall be known and designated as the St. Peter state hospital; the hospital at Rochester shall be known and designated as the Rochester state hospital; and the hospital at Fergus Falls shall be known and designated as the Fergus Falls state hospital.

Sec. 3. These hospitals shall be under the charge and supervision of five trustees, three of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; such trustees shall be appointed by the governor, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, as follows: Two for the term of one year; two for the term of two years and one for the term of three years, and at the expiration of their respective terms of office their successors shall be appointed by the governor, by and with the advice and consent of the senate for the full term of three years. Vacancies occurring at any time shall be filled by the governor for the unexpired term. The governor may remove any or all of such trustees for good cause shown.

Sec. 4. All appropriations made in any act which have heretofore, or shall hereafter be passed for the benefit, care or treatment of the insane of this state, for the purchase of land, or for the erection, purchase or lease of any buildings for their accommodation, shall be placed under the charge of the board of trustees, and shall be drawn from the state treasury by the treasurer of the hospital in accordance with the provisions of chapter 209, general laws of 1889.

Sec. 5. The trustees, before entering upon the duties of their office, shall take and subscribe an oath or affirmation to support the constitution of the United States and that of this state, and to faithfully discharge the duties required of them by law. They shall be paid their necessary expenses during the time they are actually engaged in the discharge of their official duties, out of any money appropriated for the support of the insane. They shall hold an annual meeting on the second Wednesday in August of each year, at one of the state hospitals, and such other regular or special meetings as they shall provide in their by-laws. At the annual meeting they shall choose one of their number president and another secretary, and shall elect a treasurer for each hospital, who shall hold their offices for one year and until their successors are elected and qualified. No member of the board of trustees or any other officer or employe of said hospitals or either of them, shall be interested directly or indirectly in any contract, purchase or sale, for or on account of said hospitals or either of them, with which he is connected, and any such trustee or other officer or employe offending against the provisions of this section in relation to such contracts, purchases or sales, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, in addition to the other penalties prescribed by law, shall be thereafter disqualified from holding any office or position in or connected with any state hospital mentioned herein.

Sec. 6. The said trustees shall have the general control of these hospitals, and such others as hereafter may be placed under their charge. They shall have power to make all by-laws necessary for the government of the same, not inconsistent with the constitution and laws of the state of Minnesota, and to conduct the affairs of these institutions in accordance with the laws and by-laws regulating the same. They shall appoint for each hospital a medical superintendent and an assistant medical superintendent, who shall be well educated and regular physicians; a steward or accounting officer; such assistant physicians as in their judgment are necessary, and such other officers as they may deem necessary for the welfare of the hospitals. All officers so appointed by the board of trustees shall be governed by, and subject to, all the laws and by-laws established for the government of the hospitals.

The board of trustees shall fix all salaries not otherwise determined by law, and may, at their pleasure, remove all officers appointed by them, save and except the superintendent, who shall only be removed for good cause shown, and then only with the approval of the governor.

Sec. 7. The board of trustees may take and hold in trust for any one of the hospitals, any lands conveyed or devised, and any money or other personal property given or bequeathed, to be applied in any way for the benefit of any hospital or the welfare of the inmates thereof.

Sec. 8. The trustees shall report to the governor after their annual meeting in August of each alternate year, and before the meeting of the legislature, and as much oftener as the governor may require, or they may deem necessary, the condition and wants of the hospitals under their charge. The biennial reports shall be accompanied by the reports of the superintendents, stewards and treasurers. They shall account for the disbursements of the biennial period just ended, and submit an estimate of the current expenses of the hospitals for the ensuing biennial period, and an estimate of the appropriations needed for building, repairing and other purposes.

Sec. 9. The board of trustees are authorized to district the state between the several state hospitals, determining from what counties patients shall be committed to each, and to change the same from time to time as they may deem advisable; but they shall keep the probate judge of each county advised as to the hospital to which patients are to be sent from his county. They shall furnish to all probate judges in the state any new by-laws adopted by them, and shall notify such judges of the time when any institution or department will be open for the reception of patients. They shall report to the board of fuel commissioners on or before the 10th day of June in each year an estimate of the amount of coal necessary for each institution under their charge for the fiscal year next ensuing, as provided in chapter 118, general laws of 1883.

Sec. 10. The board of trustees shall cause an annual inventory to be taken of all property of the state belonging to the institutions under their charge on the last day of each fiscal year.

In such inventories, lands and buildings shall be listed at their actual cost to the state, as nearly as known. Movable property, shall be listed at its acutal estimated value when the inventory is taken. Said inventories shall be kept on file with the records of such trustees, and an abstract of the same published in their biennial reports. They shall see that the buildings under their charge are insured in accordance with the provisions of the law relating to such institutions.

Sec. 11. The said board of trustees, before letting any contract for the erection of any new building, or the enlarging or improving of any building, where the expense of the building or improvement shall exceed two thousand dollars, shall advertise for proposals for four consecutive weeks prior to said letting in a newspaper published at the place where said building is to be erected or improved, and also for the same length of time in some newspaper having a general circulation, published at the capital of the state, stating the time and place when said proposals will be received and opened; and said contract so advertised for shall be let to the lowest responsible bidder.

Sec. 12. The superintendent of each state hospital shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, take and subscribe an oath or affirmation to support the constitution of the United States and of this state, and to faithfully and diligently discharge the duties required of him by law and the by-laws regulating the institution. He shall have the control and management of the hospital, and may employ and discharge all attendants, servants and employes at his pleasure, and may, at his pleasure, suspend any subordinate officer until an examination is had before the board of trustees, and immediately upon such suspension he shall report the fact to said board. He shall have the care and custody of any funds of inmates which may come into his hands, as provided in section 4, chapter 209, general laws of 1883. He shall report to the board of trustees from time to time, as shall be provided in the by-laws.

Sec. 13. The superintendent of each state hospital shall give immediate notice to the next of kin of each patient under his charge of the death, serious illness or any special change in the condition of such patient, and answer promptly and fully all letters of inquiry received from the relatives of any patient in said hospital. He shall forthwith after the decease of any person dying in said hospital furnish for registration to the proper clerk or health officer, and to the judge of probate of the county from which he was committed, a certificate of the duration of the last illness, the name of the deceased, his age, the disease of which he died and the date of his death. The expense of all coroner's inquests held at the various state hospitals upon the bodies of inmates dying therein or while under commitment thereto, shall be paid from the current expense fund of such hospitals.

Sec. 14. The accounting officer and treasurer of each state hospital shall report to the board of trustees from time to time, as shall be provided for in the by-laws. They shall, in the performance of their official duties, follow the system of accounting provided for such officials in chapter 209, general laws of 1889.

Section 15. Every insane person who is a legal resident of this state, and who is recommended for commitment under the provisions of section seventeen of this act, may be admitted to one of the state hospitals for the insane and maintained at the public expense, free of charge to his or her relatives or friends, and upon equal terms with every other insane person. Every person adjudged to be insane under the provisions of this act, who is not an actual legal resident of this state, shall, by order of the probate court, duly made and entered, be taken by the sheriff of the county where such person is adjudged insane, to the state where such person has a legal residence and delivered either to the friends or relatives of such person, or to the sheriff of the county where such person has a legal residence.

Sec. 16. The term "insane" as used in this act includes every species of insanity, but does not include idiocy or imbecility.

Sec. 17. No person shall be deprived of his liberty in this state by being committed to custody as insane, unless his insanity be established in manner and form as prescribed in this act, and his commitment to custody be recommended, either because (1) he has perpetrated acts dangerous to himself or to others, or to property; or (2) it is reasonably certain, by his threats or otherwise, that he has dangerous tendencies or uncontrolable propensities towards crime; or (3) he wanders about and is exposed to want of food or shelter, or to accidents; or (4) he is ill-treated or neglected by relatives or friends; or (5) his disease is of such a nature, or in such a stage, as to require, for his recovery, care and treatment while under legal restraint.

Sec. 18. After the first day of January, A. D. 1894, it shall not be lawful for any physician to certify to the insanity of any person for the purpose of securing his commitment to custody, unless said physician be of reputable character, a graduate of some incorporated medical college, a permanent resident of the state, and shall have been in the actual practice of his profession for at least one (1) year next preceding the making of such certificate, and shall at the time of making such certificate be registered as licensed by the state board of medical examiners. The possession of such qualifications shall be certified to by the judge of probate of the county in which such examiner resides, according to form "A" appended to this act, and such certificate shall constitute said physician an examiner in lunacy for the purpose of this act. A copy of said certificate shall be filed in the office of the judge of probate of the county in which such physician resides.

But it shall be unlawful for any examiner in lunacy to certify to the insanity of any person for the purpose of committing him to a hospital or institution devoted to the custody, care and treatment of the insane, of which said examiner is either the superintendent, proprietor, an officer or regular medical attendant, or when said examiner is a near relative of the alleged insane person.

Sec. 19. Whenever the probate judge, or in his absence the court commissioner of any county, shall receive information in writing that there is an insane person in his county needing care and treatment (form "B"), the said judge or court commissioner shall, by an order in writing (form "C"), direct two examiners in lunacy to examine the alleged insane person, and certify to him within one day after their respective examinations (form "D"), the result of such examination, with their recommendation as to the special action necessary to be taken in the case. If the examiners certify that the person so examined is not insane, the judge of court commissioner shall dismiss the case. If they disagree, he shall call other examiners, or take further testimony. But if they certify that he is insane and a proper subject for commitment for any of the reasons specified in section 17 of this act, said judge or court commissioner shall visit the alleged insane person, or require him to be brought into court, but he shall cause him to be fully informed of the proceedings being taken against him. He may, if he deem it advisable, take further testimony or call other examiners; but in all cases before issuing a warrant of commitment the judge of probate or court commissioner shall notify the county attorney, who shall appear on behalf of the alleged insane person, and take such action as he may deem necessary to protect the rights of such person. If satisfied that the person is insane and that the reason for his commitment is sufficient under the provisions of this act, he shall approve the certificate of the examiners and issue a duplicate order and warrant (form "E"), committing said person to the custody of the superintendent of the proper state hospital for the insane, or to the superintendent or keeper of any private licensed institution for the care of the insane, and shall place said order and warrant, together with a certified copy of the certificate of the examiners in lunacy, in the hands of the sheriff, or some other suitable person whom he shall authorize to convey said insane person to the hospital; provided, that in case said insane person is a female, she shall be accompanied, while being conveyed to the hospital, by her husband, father, mother, brother or son, daughter, or by a woman designated by the judge of probate or court commissioner. Said order and warrant shall be issued within two days after the date of the last medical certificate, or, if any further hearing is had by the court, within two days after the completion of said examination, which shall in no case be more than ten days after the filing of the information of insanity, in the office of the judge of probate, and said sheriff, or authorized person, shall forthwith execute said warrant after its reception by him. The duplicate warrant and certified copy of examiners' certificate shall be filed in the office of the superintendent, and the original, with the superintendent's endorsement thereon, shall be returned to the judge of probate and filed in his office; provided, that until the first day of January, A. D. 1894, the judge of probate or court commissioner, with whom such information of insanity is filed, shall appoint as examiners, in each case, two physicians who, in his judgment, have the necessary qualifications.

Sec. 20. Each certificate of insanity must contain, in addition to other information, answers to the following inquiries as far as they can be obtained:

Inquiries were made and answers obtained as follows:

12. On what subject, or in what way, is derangement now manifested? State fully.

13. Has the patient shown any disposition to injure others?

14. Has suicide ever been attempted? If so, in what way? Is the propensity now active?

15. Is there a disposition to filthy habits, destruction of clothing, furniture, etc.?

16. Has the patient's father or mother, or any relative, on either side, been insane?

17. Did the patient manifest any peculiarities of temper, habits, disposition or pursuits before the accession of the disease; any predominant passions, religious impressions, etc.?

Recommendations. (Give the special reasons for recommending commitment, according to section seventeen.)

Name and address of family physician, if any.

Sec. 21. The examiners in lunacy may jointly execute the certificate provided for in section nineteen of this act, or each one may execute a separate certificate. In either case the certificate shall be duly sworn to or affirmed before the judge of probate or court commissioner issuing the commission, who shall, when he approves the certificate, certify to the genuineness of the signature, and to the fact that the signers are duly qualified examiners in lunacy.

Sec. 22. Whenever the superintendent of any state hospital shall require, for the better understanding and treatment of a patient, more medical information than is contained in the certificate accompanying the order of commitment, he shall prepare a blank, containing such additional questions as he deems necessary to secure the requisite information, concisely and categorically arranged, and forward the same to the judge of probate of the county from which the patient was committed, with the request that these additional questions be answered as fully as possible. The judge of probate, on receipt of such blank, shall immediately employ the family physician of such patient, or in case he had none, some qualified examiner in lunacy, to prepare, with the aid of the family and relatives of such patient, as full and responsive answers as can be obtained, which shall be properly verified.

Sec. 23. Whosoever for any corrupt consideration or advantage to himself, or through malice, shall make, or join in, or advise the making of any certificate aforesaid, or shall knowingly or wilfully make any false representation for the purpose of causing any such certificate to be made, whereby any person is declared to be insane, and committed to, or held in, any institution for the custody, care and treatment of the insane, shall be deemed guilty of a felony.

Sec. 24. No alleged insane person shall be arrested and committed to jail unless he has committed some crime, or is dangerous or disorderly, or there are reasonable grounds to believe that he will do injury to himself or others, or to property, and when arrested and committed to jail for any of the reasons herein enumerated, it shall not be lawful to confine him in the same room with any charged with or convicted of any crime.

Sec. 25. When any person indicted for any offense is, on trial, acquitted by the jury by reason of insanity, the jury in giving their verdict of not guilty shall state that it was given for such cause; and thereupon, if the discharge or going at large of such insane person is considered by the court manifestly dangerous to the peace and safety of the community, the court may order him to be committed to any of the state hospitals for the insane for safekeeping and treatment, or may order him to be committed to prison, or may give him into the care of his friends, if they shall give bonds with surety, to the satisfaction of the court, conditioned that he shall be well and securely kept. Otherwise he shall be discharged.

Sec. 26. Whenever any district judge shall be informed by the affidavit of any reputable affiant that any person indicted or held for hearing before the grand jury for any criminal offense, is in such state of idiocy, imbecility, lunacy or insanity as to be incapable of understanding the proceedings or making his defense, said judge shall immediately proceed (whether it be term or vacation time) to determine the fact, either by testimony before himself, or by a jury, in his discretion; and if it shall be found on such hearing that said defendant is at the time incapable of understanding the proceeding in the case and making his defense therein, he shall order said defendant to be committed to the care and custody of the proper state hospital for the insane, to be there safely kept, cared for and treated, until he so far recovers his reason as to be capable of understanding the proceedings and making his defense in said case; and that when he so recovers his reason, the superintendent of the hospital to which he has been committed shall notify the sheriff of the county in which said defendant was indicted or held for examination. On the receipt of such notice said sheriff shall take charge of said defendant and commit him to the jail in said county until the further order of the district court.

Sec. 27. Any officer or authorized person who shall receive into his custody any person for the purpose of conveying him to any hospital for the insane in the state of Minnesota, under any of the provisions of this act, who shall not in due time deliver him into the lawful care and custody of the proper officer of such hospital, taking his receipt therefor, provided he be admitted or who shall wilfully leave, abandon, neglect or abuse such patient, either going to or returning from the hospital, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sec. 28. It shall be the privilege of each and every inmate committed to any public or private hospital, or asylum for the insane in this state, on entering the institution, or at any time thereafter, to choose one individual not connected with the said institution as a correspondent with whom the said inmate shall be allowed to communicate freely in writing; and there shall be no censorship exercised or allowed by any of the officers or employes of such institution over letters written by inmates to such correspondents. Each inmate shall have the right to choose a new correspondent instead of the one previously chosen, every three months if he or she desires so to do.

Sec. 29. It shall be the duty of the superintendent of each hospital or asylum for the insane to keep registered and posted in some public place at the institution the name and postoffice address of each individual chosen as correspondent under this act, and the name of the inmate chosing such correspondent. When any person is chosen as correspondent by any inmate, the superintendent shall notify the said correspondent within three days that he has been so chosen, and inquire whether he will act as such correspondent. In case the correspondent shall decline to act, the superintendent shall notify the inmate without delay and give opportunity for a new choice.

Sec. 30. It shall be the duty of the superintendent of each hospital or asylum for insane to provide a register of correspondence.

Sec. 31. It shall be the duty of each assistant physician, or the superintendent, if there be no assistant physicians, in any hospital or asylum for the insane, on the day when any inmate is committed to the institution, or at any time thereafter when the said inmate shall so request, to record correctly in the said register the name and postoffice address of said person chosen by said inmate as correspondent in accordance with this act. It shall be the duty of said assistant physicians on their daily rounds to receive the requests of any inmates who may desire to write to the correspondents so chosen, and forthwith furnish or cause to be furnished to the said inmates one or more sheets of writing paper, a stamped envelope and a postal card, addressed to the superintendent, and having printed on the reverse side a receipt in the following form:

"Received of the superintendent of the ......state hospital, a letter written by ...... an inmate of the institution.

Signed, ..."

Provided, that the said assistant physician shall not be required to furnish stationery for this purpose to any one inmate oftener than once a week. The inmate shall enclose the said postal card with the letter in the stamped envelope, which shall be legibly addressed to the said correspondent, and shall deliver the same, sealed, to the said assistant physician, who shall deliver the said letter on the same day to the superintendent, taking his receipt therefor, on the register of correspondence. Whenever any letter or postal card from any correspondent chosen under this act shall be delivered to any assistant physician by the superintendent, he shall deliver the same to the inmate to whom it is addressed without unnecessary delay, taking the receipt of said inmate therefor.

Sec. 32. It shall be the duty of the superintendent, upon receipt of such letter from the assistant physician, if he shall find that the said letter is addressed to a correspondent duly chosen under this act to place such letter or cause it to be placed in the United States mail without opening or reading the same. It shall be the duty of the said superintendent to request the said correspondents to write their name on the outside of letters sent by them to inmates. The said superintendents shall deliver such letters to the assistant physicians, to be given to the inmates to whom they are addressed, unless, in the judgment of the said superintendents, the receipt of such letters would be injurious to such inmates, in which case they shall forthwith notify said correspondent that such letters are withheld, stating the reasons therefor, and record the facts in the register of correspondence. No letter written by a correspondent to an inmate shall be opened by any superintendent unless he has good reason to suspect that it contains such matter as ought not to be delivered to the said inmate, in which case he shall record the fact that such letter has been opened, and the reasons therefor, in the register of correspondence.

Sec. 33. Each and every inmate of any hospital or asylum for insane in this state shall have the privilege of communicating in writing with the governor and the secretary of the board of trustees in the same manner and under the same regulations as with the correspondents chosen under this act.

Sec. 35. It shall be the duty of the superintendent of each hospital or asylum for the insane in this state and every trustee of such institution to investigate any alleged violation of the provisions of this act which may be brought to their attention when visiting any asylum or hospital for insane in this state, or otherwise.

Sec. 38. Whenever any person who now is, or hereafter becomes, a convict in the state prison or state reformatory, shall, in the opinion of the board of inspectors or managers thereof, have become insane, said board of inspectors or managers shall file with the judge of probate of the county in which said prison or reformatory is located information thereof in writing. Sec. 39. Upon the receipt of such duplicate warrant and certificate by said warden or superintendent, he shall cause said convict to be removed to the state hospital named in the warrant, and shall also cause the duplicate warrant and certified copy of examiners' certificate, and a certified copy of the prison records relating to such convict to be filed in the office of the superintendent of the hospital, and the original with the superintendent's endorsement thereon, to be returned to the judge of probate issuing the same.

Said warden or superintendent shall cause the substantial facts contained in said warrant and certificate, including the dates thereof, to be entered upon the prison records. Said warrant and the superintendent's endorsement thereon shall each specify that the said insane person is a state prison or state reformatory convict.

Sec. 40. Whenever, in the opinion of the hospital superintendent, such convict has sufficiently recovered from the mental disability on account of which such committal was made, his term of sentence not having expired, he shall notify the warden of the state prison, or superintendent of the state reformatory, and such warden or superintendent shall immediately cause such convict to be returned to said prison or reformatory) of the fact.

Said superintendent shall by himself or some one of the medical staff of such hospital, or some one delegated by him, cause such insane person to be visited as often as once in three months, and whenever, in the judgment of said superintendent, he is not properly cared for in the family where he has been placed, or for any reason he deems it best that he should be again cared for and treated in the hospital, he shall immediately cause his return thereto.

Sec. 44. Whenever in the judgment of the superintendent of any state hospital for the insane it will be beneficial to any patient therein, as part of the treatment, and that it is prudent so to do, or that it will be conducive to the recovery of any patient to return home or to his friends, or to be absent on trial, in case such patient has not been committed while under charge of any criminal offense, said superintendent may allow such patient to be absent on parole for such specified time as he may deem advisable, not exceeding six months. The order of commitment in such case shall remain in full force until the patient is discharged according to law, and his parole may be at any time revoked, in the discretion of the superintendent.

Sec. 45. Sec. 46. It shall be the duty of the superintendent of any such state hospital to select from time to time from the patients of the hospital under his management such idiotic and feeble-minded children and youths as in his opinion are proper subjects for training and instruction, and to transfer the same to the directors or managers of the Minnesota institute for defectives at Faribault, provided there is room for the reception of such persons in said institute for defectives, subject to the approval of the board of trustees.

Sec. 47. Every person committed to a state hospital for the insane shall, while he remains in the hospital, be furnished with proper and suitable clothing at the expense of the state; and, when discharged, he shall be furnished by the accounting officer of the hospital, upon the order of the superintendent, with suitable clothing, and also a sum of money sufficient to defray his expenses home, or to his friends; all of which shall be paid out of the current expense fund of said hospital.

Sec. 48. There shall be printed by the state one thousand copies of each biennial report of the trustees of the state hospitals for the insane, of which 700 shall be at the disposal of the trustees and 300 at the disposal of the secretary of state.

Every application for such license shall be accompanied by a plan of the premises proposed to be occupied, describing the capacities of the buildings for the uses intended, the extent and location of grounds appurtenant thereto, and the number of patients of either sex proposed to be received therein, together with such additional information as the trustees may require; and it shall not be lawful for said board of trustees to grant any such license without first having caused an examination by at least three of its members of the premises proposed to be licensed, and being satisfied by such examination that they are as described, and are otherwise fit for and suitable for the purposes for which they are designed to be used.

It shall be the duty of the board of trustees at their first visit to each institution licensed in accordance with the laws of this state, to have the care, custody or treatment of the insane or persons of unsound mind to examine the terms of the existing license, and determine how far the institution is conducted in compliance with said license; the board of trustees shall have power to continue, amend or revoke any existing license, as in their opinion the interests of the insane in the respective institutions demands.

Sec. 51. In all cases where the board of trustees has reason to believe that any person is wrongfully deprived of his liberty, or is cruelly, negligently or improperly treated in any institution for the care and custody of the insane, or inadequate provision is made for the skillful medical care or proper supervision and safekeeping of the insane, it shall, in its discretion, order an investigation of the facts in the case by one or more of its members and the attorney general or his deputy.

The trustee or trustees conducting such inquiries are hereby empowered to issue compulsory process for the attendance of witnesses and the production of papers, to administer oaths, and to examine persons under oath, and to exercise the same general powers as belong to referees appointed by the courts of the state. Upon the completion of such investigation said trustee or trustees shall make a concise statement of the facts found by him or them, with such suggestions and recommendations as to him or them seem advisable, and transmit a copy of the same, together with the whole or such portion of the testimony taken by him or them as they deem necessary to the governor. Upon the receipt by the governor of the report of such investigation he shall, if in his opinion the facts and conclusions warrant, order the attorney general to prosecute the superintendent, officers, managers, servants or employes of such institution or any of them that have in any manner been guilty of any offense punishable by the laws of this state.

It shall also be the duty of the officers and employes of the bureau to collect, assort, arrange and present, in biennial reports to the legislature, on or before the first Monday in January, statistical details relating to all departments of labor in the state; to the subjects of co-operation, strikes or other labor difficulties; to trade unions and other labor organizations and their effect upon labor and capital; and to such other matters relating to the commercial, industrial, social, educational, moral and sanitary conditions of the laboring classes, and the permanent prosperity of the respective industries of the state as the bureau may be able to gather.

In its biennial reports the bureau shall also give an account of all proceedings of its officers and employes which have been taken in accordance with the provisions of this act or of any of the other acts herein referred to, including a statement of all violations of law which have been observed and the proceedings under the same, and shall join with such account such remarks, suggestions and recommendations as the commissioner may deem necessary.

Sec. 3. AN ACT to regulate the receipt, storage and shipment of grain at elevators and warehouses on the right of way of railroads in the state of Minnesota, at stations and sidings other than terminal points.

Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Minnesota:

Section 1. All elevators and warehouses in which grain is stored and handled, and which are situate on the right of way of any railroad at any station or siding in this state, other than at terminal points, are hereby declared to be public elevators and shall be under the supervision and subject to the inspection of the railroad and warehouse commission of the state of Minnesota, and shall, for the purposes of this act, be known and designated as public country elevators or country warehouses; it shall be unlawful to receive, store, ship or handle any grain in any such elevator or warehouse, unless the owner or owners thereof shall have procured a license therefor from the state railroad and warehouse commission, which license shall be issued for the fee of one dollar per year, and only upon written application under oath, specifying the location of such elevator or warehouse, and the name of the person, firm or corporation, and the names of all the members of the firm or the names of all the officers of the corporation owning and operating such elevator or warehouse. Such license shall confer upon the licensee full authority to operate such warehouse or elevator in accordance with the laws of this state and the rules and regulations prescribed by said commission, and every person, company or corporation receiving such license shall be held to have accepted the provisions of this act and thereby to have agreed to comply with the same.

If any such elevator or warehouse is operated in violation or in disregard of the laws of this state, its license shall, upon due proof of this fact, after proper hearing and notice to the licensee, be revoked by the said railroad and warehouse commission.

Sec. 2. No person, firm or corporation shall in any manner operate such public country elevator or country warehouse without having a license as specified in the preceding section, and any attempt to operate such elevator or warehouse without such license shall be deemed a misdemeanor, to be punished as hereinafter provided, and any attempt to operate such elevator or warehouse in violation of law and without having the license herein prescribed, may, upon complaint of the party aggrieved, and upon complaint of the railroad and warehouse commission, be enjoined and restrained by the district court for the county in which the elevator or warehouse in question is situate, by temporary and permanent injunction, conformably to the procedure in civil actions in the district court.

Sec. 3. The railroad and warehouse commission shall each year, and as much oftener as they shall deem proper, make and promulgate all suitable and necessary rules and regulations for the government and control of public country elevators and public country warehouses, and the receipt, storage and shipment of grain therein and therefrom, and the rates of charges therefor, and the rates so fixed shall be deemed prima facie reasonable and proper, and such rules and regulations shall be binding and have the force and effect of law, and a printed copy of such rules and regulations shall, at all times, be posted in a conspicuous place in each of said elevators and warehouses, for the free inspection of the public.

Sec. 4. The party operating such country elevator or country warehouse shall keep a true and correct account in writing, in proper books, of all grain received, stored and shipped at such elevator or warehouse, stating the weight, grade and dockage for dirt or other cause on each lot of grain received in store for sale, storage or shipment, and shall, upon the request of any person delivering grain for storage or shipment, receive the same without discrimination during reasonable and proper business hours, and shall, upon request, deliver to such person, or his principal, a warehouse receipt or receipts therefor, in favor of such person or his order, dated the day the grain was received, and specifying upon its face the gross and net weight of such grain, the rate of dockage for dirt or other cause, and the grade of such grain, conformable to the grades fixed by the state railroad and warehouse commission and in force at terminal points, and shall also state upon its face that the grain mentioned in such receipt or receipts has been received into store to be stored with grain of the same grade under such inspection, and that, upon the return of the said receipt or receipts, and upon the payment or tender of payment of all lawful charges for receiving, storing, delivering or otherwise handling said grain, which charges may have accrued up to the time of the return of said receipt or receipts, such grain is deliverable to the person named therein, or his order, either at the elevator or warehouse where it was received for storage, or, if the owner so desires, on track at any terminal point, at the election of said owner, where official inspection and weighing under the rules and regulations of the railroad and warehouse commission of the state of Minnesota is in force, such grain to be consigned to said owner, or his order, and subject to such official inspection and weight as may be determined upon its arrival at such terminal point. In case of such shipment at the election of the party delivering such grain, the party receiving such grain shall deliver to the party from whom the shipment is made, a certificate in evidence of such shipment, stating upon its face the date and place of such shipment, the name of consignor and consignee, and the place of destination, and shall also specify upon the face of such certificate the grade and gross and net weights of such shipment, in the same manner as provided herein as to warehouse receipts.

Provided, however, if the party receiving such grain for storage or shipment shall elect to have the same delivered at a terminal elevator or warehouse at any of the terminal points as hereinbefore provided, he shall have a prior right and liberty to do so, and in such case the party delivering said grain shall have the right to designate at which of said places said grain shall be deliverable, in quantities not less than a car load, and the party receiving such grain shall have the right to designate the particular elevator or warehouse in the place so named, as the warehouse at which the grain mentioned herein shall be deliverable, and the said party receiving such grain shall in such case issue a written order upon such designated terminal elevator or warehouse in favor of the owner of such grain, or his order, for the delivery of a like quantity and quality of grain as that mentioned in the original warehouse receipt or in quantities not less than a car load, subject to official inspection and weight at such designated terminal point.

Such written order or shipment shall be subject to all freight or transportation or other lawful charges which may have accrued upon said grain represented by such written order or shipment (from the date of the issue of said order or of such shipment, and the date of actual delivery within the meaning of this act in case of shipment), or the date when the grain, in case of a written order, is demanded for delivery at the terminal warehouse.

All warehouse receipts issued for grain received, and all orders issued in lieu of such receipts as hereinbefore provided, shall be consecutively numbered, and no two receipts or orders bearing the same date shall be issued during the same year from the same warehouse, except in case of a lost or destroyed receipt or order, in which case the new receipt or order shall bear the same date and number as the original, and shall be plainly marked on its face "Duplicate."

No such receipt or order shall be issued except upon grain which has actually been delivered in said country or terminal elevator or warehouse. The grain specified in such receipt or order shall be made deliverable to the person delivering the grain for storage, or to his order. Such receipt shall not be issued for a greater quantity of grain than was contained in the lot or parcel stated to have been received. Such receipt or order shall not contain language in anywise limiting or modifying the liability of the party issuing the same as imposed by the laws of this state, and any such language, if inserted, shall be null and void.

A failure to specify in such warehouse receipt or order the true and correct grade and gross and net weight of any lot of grain so received shall be deemed a misdemeanor on the part of the person issuing such receipt, for which, on conviction, he may be punished as hereinafter provided.

On the return or presentation of such receipt or order by the lawful holder thereof, properly endorsed, at the elevator or warehouse where the grain represented therein is made deliverable, and upon the payment or tender of payment of all lawful charges, as hereinbefore provided, the grain shall be immediately delivered to the holder of such receipt or order, and it shall not be subject to any further charge for storage, after demand for such delivery shall have been made. The grain represented by such receipt or order shall be delivered within twenty-four hours after such demand shall have been made, and cars or vessels or other means of receiving the same from the elevator or warehouse shall have been furnished. If not delivered upon such demand within twenty-four hours after such car, vessel or other means for receiving the same shall have been furnished, the warehouse in default shall be liable to the owner of such receipt for damages for such default in the sum of one cent per bushel, and in addition thereto one cent per bushel for each and every day of such neglect or refusal to deliver; provided, no warehouseman shall be held to be in default in delivering, if property is delivered in the order demanded by holders of different receipts or orders and as rapidly as due diligence, care and prudence will justify.

Provided, that if a state public elevator or elevators are at any time established by law, the owner of the grain shall have the right when delivering such grain to demand and receive a receipt for such grain, deliverable at such state elevator as he may designate, subject to the provisions of this section as to grade, dockage and charges.

Sec. 5. In case there is a disagreement between the person in the immediate charge of and receiving the grain at such country elevator or warehouse, and the person delivering the grain to such elevator or warehouse for storage or shipment, at the time of such delivery, as to the proper grade or the proper dockage for dirt or otherwise, on any lot of grain delivered, an average sample of at least three quarts of the grain in dispute may be taken by one or both parties and forwarded in a suitable sack, properly tied and sealed, express charges prepaid, to the chief inspector of grain at St. Paul, which shall be accompanied by the request in writing, of either or both of the parties aforesaid, that the said chief inspector shall examine the same and report what grade or dockage or both the said grain is, in his opinion, entitled to and would receive if shipped to the terminal points and subjected to official inspection.

It shall be the duty of said chief inspector, as soon as practicable, to examine and inspect such sample of grain and adjudge the proper grade or dockage, or both, to which said sample is, in his judgment, entitled and which grain of like quality and character would receive if shipped to the terminal points and subjected to official inspection.

As soon as said chief inspector has examined, inspected and adjudged the grade and dockage, as aforesaid, he shall at once make out in writing and in triplicate a statement of his judgment and finding in respect to the case under consideration, and shall transmit by mail to each of the parties to said disagreement a copy of the said statement of his judgment and finding, preserving the original, together with the sample, on file in his office.

The judgment and finding of the said chief inspector shall be deemed conclusive as to the grade or dockage or both of said sample, submitted for his consideration, as herein provided, as well as conclusive evidence of the grade or dockage or both that grain of the same quality and character would receive if shipped to the terminal points and subjected to official inspection.

Sec. 6. Whenever complaint is made, in writing, to the railroad and warehouse commission, by any person aggrieved, that the party operating any country elevator or country warehouse under this act fails to give just and fair weights and grades, or is guilty of making unreasonable dockage for dirt or other cause, or fails in any manner to operate such elevator or warehouse fairly, justly and properly, or is guilty of any discrimination, then it shall be the duty of the railroad and warehouse commission to inquire into and investigate said complaint and the charge therein contained, and to this end and for this purpose the commission shall have full authority to inspect and examine all the books, records and papers pertaining to the business of such elevator or warehouse, and all the scales, machinery and fixtures and appliances used therein.

In case the said commission find the complaint and charge therein contained, or any part thereof, true, they shall adjudge the same in writing and shall at once serve a copy of such decision, with a notice to desist and abstain from the error and malpractice found, upon the party offending and against whom the complaint was made, and to afford prompt redress to the party injured, and if such party does not desist and abstain and does not give the proper redress and relief to the party injured, it shall be the duty of the said commission to institute and carry on, in the name of the complainant, such actions, civil and criminal, as may be necessary and appropriate to redress the wrongs complained of and to prevent their recurrence in the future.

Sec. 7. On the presentation of the order or orders referred to in section four of this act, by the lawful owner thereof, properly endorsed, at the terminal elevator or warehouse where the grain represented therein is made deliverable, the owner or operator of such terminal elevator shall accept the same, if the party issuing the same shall have in store in such terminal elevator grain in quantity and quality as represented in such order or orders, and deliverable therein, and issue in exchange for such order or orders to the lawful holder of the same, or his order, a terminal receipt bearing date when issued, and which shall state upon its face the net quantity and grade of the grain, and that the grain mentioned therein has been received and is held in store, and shall also state separately the transportation and other charges against said grain existing at the date the receipt is issued, and that upon the return of such receipt properly endorsed by the person to whose order it was issued and the payment of all proper and lawful charges against said grain, the same shall be delivered to the lawful owner of such receipt; provided, that the charges of the terminal warehouse shall be computed for a period beginning at the date of the maturity of the order issued by the local warehouseman for such grain, and the same may include interest at the lawful rate, upon moneys advanced for payment of transportation charges.

Such terminal receipts shall be consecutively numbered. No two receipts bearing the same number shall be issued by the same warehouse during any one year, except in case of a lost or destroyed receipt, in which case the new receipt shall bear the same date and number as the original, and shall be plainly marked upon its face "Duplicate."

If such local orders when presented at such terminal elevator are not accepted by the owner or operator of such elevator, the party issuing such order or orders shall be liable for such default to the owner of such order or orders for all damages that shall arise from such default, not less however, than the sum of one cent per bushel for all the grain represented in such order or orders, and in addition thereto one cent per bushel for each and every day of such neglect and refusal. Upon the delivery of the grain under such receipts, the same shall be marked "Canceled."

The grain represented by such receipts may be delivered in part. Receipts so issued may be surrendered and new ones issued. Such receipts may be consolidated as provided in an act entitled "An act to regulate warehouses, inspection, weighing and handling of grain," approved March 5, 1885, and upon presentation of such terminal receipt to such terminal elevator, and upon the payment or legal tender of payment of all lawful charges as hereinbefore provided, the grain represented therein shall be immediately delivered to the holder of such receipt, and it shall not be subject to any further charge for storage after demand for delivery shall have been made. The grain represented by such terminal receipt shall be delivered within twenty-four hours after such demand shall have been made and cars or vessels to receive the same from such terminal elevator or warehouse shall have been furnished. If not delivered upon such demand within twenty-four hours after such cars or vessels for receiving the same shall have been furnished, the owner or operator of the elevator in default shall be liable to the owner of such receipt for all damages sustained by reason of such default, not less than the sum of one cent per bushel, and in addition thereto one cent per bushel for each and every day of such neglect and refusal to deliver.

Provided, no warehouseman shall be held to be in default in delivering if grain is delivered in the order demanded by holders of different receipts as rapidly as reasonable care, diligence and prudence will justify.

Sec. 8. Any person, firm or corporation operating any country warehouse or country elevator under this act shall, on or before the first day of September in every year, and oftener if necessary, render and furnish in writing and under oath to the railroad and warehouse commission a report and itemized statement of all grain received and stored in or delivered or shipped from such elevator or warehouse, during the year then last passed. Such statement shall specify the kind, grade, gross and net weight of and dockage upon all grain received or stored and all grain delivered or shipped, and shall particularly specify and account for all so-called overage that may have accrued during the year. Such statement and report shall be made upon blanks and forms furnished and prescribed by the railroad and warehouse commission.

Sec. 9. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation who shall operate any country grain elevator or country grain warehouse, under this act, to enter into any contract, agreement, understanding or combination with any other person, firm or corporation, who shall operate any other country grain elevator or country grain warehouse, under this act, for pooling of the earnings or business of other different and competing grain elevators or warehouses, so as to divide between them the aggregate or net proceeds of the earnings or business of such grain elevators or warehouses, or any portion thereof; and in case of any agreement for the pooling of the earnings or business aforesaid, each day of its continuance shall be deemed a separate offense.

Sec. 10. Sec. 12. The railroad and warehouse commissioners shall fix the charges for storage, inspecting, weighing and handling of grain, including the cost of receiving and delivering; said charges shall be and constitute a lien on the grain so received; and said charges for receiving, inspecting, weighing, handling, storing and delivering of grain shall be collected by the inspector, warehouseman or assistants, and shall be by them paid into the state treasury, and be known as the grain and warehouse fund; provided that the minimum fee for inspecting grain shall be fifty cents per thousand bushels or car load lot and twenty-five cents for weighing a like quantity.

Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Minnesota:

Section 1. That any person or corporation having any right, title or interest in or to any land or real property in this state may file or cause to be filed in the office of the county auditor of the county in which such land or real property is situated a statement in writing containing first, the name of the person or corporation having such right, title or interest; second, a description of the land or real property in which such right, title or interest is had, and third, the designation of some person who is a resident of such county or of some corporation which has an office or place of business within such county upon whom or upon which a personal service may be made of notices of the expiration of the period of redemption of land or real property from tax sales. Each such statement shall be signed by the person or corporation having such right, title or interest, or by any agent or attorney of such person or corporation, but need not specify the nature of such right, title or interest.

Sec. 2. Each such statement so filed in the office of any county auditor in this state shall be immediately numbered and filed in his office by such county auditor consecutively in the order in which it is received, and such county auditor shall, at the same time, enter consecutively in the order in which such statement is received, in a book to be kept by him for that purpose, first, the file number of such statement; second, the date when such statement is received and filed by him; third, the name of the person or corporation named in such statement as having some right, title or interest in land or real property, with the postoffice address of such person or corporation, if given in such statement, and fourth, the name of the person or corporation named in such statement as the one upon whom or upon which a personal service of notices may be made. And at the same time such county auditor shall enter the file number of such statement in his real estate transfer book or books under each piece or parcel of land described in such statement. For the duties required of the county auditor by this act the county treasurer shall be paid for the use of the county by the person presenting such statement to be filed a fee of five cents for each piece or parcel of land described in such statement. The county treasurer shall certify on each statement before it is filed his receipt of this fee. Each such statement shall cease to be valid and effectual as such for any and all the purposes of this act at the expiration of five years from the date of its filing, or when the person named therein as the one upon whom a personal service of notices may be made dies or ceases to be a resident of such county, or when the corporation named therein as the one upon which a personal service of notices may be made ceases to have an office or place of business within such county. Provided, however, that the person or corporation named in a statement filed under the provisions of this act as having such right, title or interest may file in the same office in which such statement is filed an instrument releasing any particular piece or parcel of land or real property described in such statement from the effect of such statement, such releasing instrument to be executed with the same formalities as are necessary to entitle conveyances of real estate to record. Such releasing instrument shall be by the said county auditor immediately attached to and filed with such statement affected thereby. Every person or corporation filing such releasing instrument shall before such releasing instrument is filed pay to the said county treasurer for the use of the county a fee of ten cents for each such releasing instrument. The county treasurer shall certify on each such releasing instrument before it is filed his receipt of this fee. From the time when such releasing instrument is so filed, such statement affected thereby shall cease to be valid and effectual as to such particular piece or parcel of land or real property so released, but shall nevertheless be and remain valid and effectual as such for any and all the purposes of this act as to each and every other piece or parcel of land or real property therein described.

Sec. 3. Whenever any land or real property in this state has been or shall be sold for taxes at any tax judgment sale or under or by virtue of the provisions of any law of this state relating to the sale of land or real property for taxes, every person or corporation holding a tax certificate shall, after the expiration of the time for the redemption of the land or real property therein described as provided by any law of this state now existing or hereafter to be enacted, present such tax certificate to the county auditor of the county in which such land or real property is situated, and thereupon such county auditor shall prepare, under his hand and official seal a separate notice to each person or corporation having any right, title or interest in or to the land or real property described in such tax certificate, or in or to any part of such land or real property, as indicated by any and all valid and effectual statements which have been or shall be filed in the office of such county auditor under the provisions of this act. Each such notice shall be addressed to the person or corporation named in his or its particular statement filed under the provisions of this act as having some right, title or interest in such land or real property, and such notice shall also give the postoffice address of such person or corporation if such postoffice address is given in such statement. Such notice shall also give the name of the person or corporation designated in such statement as the one upon whom or upon which a personal service of notices may be made. Such notice shall specify the description of such land or real property the amount for which the same was sold, the amount required to redeem such land or real property from such sale, exclusive of the costs to accrue upon such notices, and the time when the redemption period will expire. These notices such county auditor shall deliver to the party applying therefor, who shall deliver the same to the sheriff of the proper county for service, mailing and return. Such sheriff shall, with all reasonable expedition after the receipt by him of said notices, serve the same and make return thereof and of his fees therefor to the said county auditor, which return of service and fees shall be filed in the said county auditor's office. Each such notice shall be by said sheriff served personally and directly upon the person or corporation designated therein as the one upon whom or upon which a personal service of notices may be made. Such service shall be made in the manner prescribed for the service of a summons in a civil action in the district court, except that the service shall in all cases be personal and directly upon such person or corporation required to be served as above. Said sheriff shall, at or before the service of each such notice, mail a true and correct copy thereof, with letter postage fully prepaid, plainly addressed to the person or corporation named in such notice as having some right, title or interest in such land or real property, and plainly addressed to the said postoffice address of such person or corporation, if such postoffice address is given in such notice. Proof of the mailing of such copy and of his fees therefor shall be returned to said county auditor by said sheriff and filed in the said county auditor's office. The time for the redemption of any land or real property in this state from any such sale for taxes shall not expire, as to any person or corporation concerned, until sixty days after the service and mailing of all the notices and copies thereof as required by the provisions of this act or by the provisions of any other law of this state, nor until sixty days after the filing of the proofs thereof and of the sheriff's fees therefor in the office of the proper county auditor, as required by this act. For his services in serving such notices and in mailing such copies thereof, the sheriff shall be entitled to the same fees that are now or hereafter may be allowed him for the service of summons in a civil action in the district court. The fees of the sheriff for serving all such notices and for mailing all such copies thereof shall be paid, in the first instance, by the person or corporation holding the tax certificate, and shall be repaid by the party offering to redeem such land or real property, before any certificate of redemption shall issue. No transfer of the land or real property described in any tax certificate shall be made to the holder of such tax certificate on the books of the said county auditor, nor shall any such tax certificate be entitled to record, until sixty days shall have elapsed after the service of all such notices, the mailing of all copies thereof, and of the filings of the proofs thereof, and of the sheriff's fees therefor in the office of the said county auditor, as required by this act.

Sec. 4. When any land or real property in this state has been or shall be bid in for the state at any tax judgment sale or under or by virtue of the provisions of any law of this state relating to the sale of land or real property for taxes, and when the right of the state in such land or real property has been or shall be at any time thereafter assigned or conveyed in any manner, whether under and by virtue of section one hundred and one of chapter eleven of the general statutes of 1878, or under and by virtue of the provisions of any act amendatory thereof, or otherwise, the instrument of such assignment or conveyance shall, for all the purposes of this act, be deemed and considered to be a tax certificate, and each and all the provisions of this act relating to tax certificates shall apply to such instrument of assignment or conveyance and to each and all the holders thereof, and the same notices shall be prepared and served and copies thereof mailed in the same manner as required in the case of tax certificates by the provisions of this act. And the time for the redemption of any land or real property in this state from any such bidding in or sale for taxes shall not expire as to the state, nor as to any person or corporation to whom the right of the state has been or shall be in any manner or at any time assigned or conveyed, nor as to any person or corporation concerned, until sixty days after the service and mailing of all the notices and copies thereof as required in the case of tax certificates by the provisions of this act or by the provisions of any other law of this state, nor until sixty days after the filing of the proofs thereof and of the sheriff's fees therefor in the office of the proper county auditor, as required by this act in the case of tax certificates. No transfer of any such land or real property shall be made on the books of the county auditor to the state nor to any person or corporation to whom the right of the state in or to such land or real property has been or shall be in any manner or at any time assigned or conveyed as above, and no assignment, conveyance, certificate, or other evidence of any right, title or interest in or to any such land or real property under or by virtue of any such bidding in or sale for taxes shall be entitled to record, until sixty days shall have elapsed after the service of all such notices, the mailing of all copies thereof, and the filing of the proofs thereof and of the sheriff's fees therefor in the office of the proper county auditor, as required by this act.

Sec. 5. The service and mailing of notices required by the provisions of this act shall not supersede or take the place of the notices required by any other law of this state to be served or published, but shall be additional thereto.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
Department of State.

I, H. Stockenstrom, assistant secretary of the State of Minnesota, do hereby certify that the foregoing general laws, passed by the legislature of 1893, so far as they are printed in full, have been carefully compared with the enrolled copies of said laws deposited in the office of the secretary of state, and that they are true and correct copies of said enrolled laws, and are an official publication thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand this first day of May, A. D. eighteen hundred and ninety-three.

H. STOCKENSTROM,
Assistant Secretary of State.

A Sympathetic Soul.

New York Sun. One of those hard, practical New England women that occur in magazines oftener than in life, called on an artist in this city, at his invitation, not many days ago. She looked faithfully over his pictures and studies, though there were many of them, betokening great industry, and after the inspection was finished she said in a severe tone: "Yes, it's very pretty, but I should think you'd get dreadfully tired of doing such things. Don't you ever want to go out and work?"

The Prose of a Kiss.

Life: She—There's no poetry in a kiss. It's like a trunk.
He—Like a trunk?
She—You can always find a man to express it; and it's wiser to check it if you don't want it to go too far.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION. The Best Cough Syrup. Tastes Good. Use in time. Sold by Druggists.

My little boy aged three years, had a severe Cough all winter, resulting from La Grippe. For two weeks we did not sleep at night. When the paroxysms came on he had to be held up to get his breath. Though we had physicians, and the boy took medicine all the time, he never seemed to get any relief until I began to give him Piso's Cure for Consumption. He would sleep for several hours after taking a dose. When he began coughing he would halloo "Piso's" as soon as he could get breath. Sometimes I gave him three doses during the night, and after each dose he would go to sleep. We are now giving him the third bottle, and he is so nearly well that a dose taken occasionally is all that is necessary.—Mrs. A. Smith, Bald Knob, Arkansas, April 21, 1893.

GERMANY'S DISTURBERS.

VERY CRITICAL DAYS ARE THESE FOR WILHELM.

The Kaiser Suffers His Mauvais Quart d'Heure in Common With the Rest of Humanity—A Social Democratic Address.

"Uneasy Lies the Head."

Berlin, May 8.—The Vorwearts publishes the election manifesto of the social Democratic party. After appealing for contributions to the campaign fund, the executive committee emphasizes its opinion that the new reichstag will have to deal not only with the army bill, but also with the fundamental rights of the people, which will be threatened by the present attack upon universal suffrage.

A report is current that a Bismarck party is forming. The party will urge the prince to accept a seat in the reichstag and under his name and with his authority will organize a campaign throughout the empire. The most important field of agitation will be South Germany.

The Berlin correspondent of the London Daily News says: "However enormous the burdens which the army bill will impose, it was a grave mistake to reject it. The Radicals must know that the bill will be passed, even if it be necessary to dissolve parliament two or three times. German constitutionalism is to weak to stand a conflict with the government in military matters. In the coming elections, however, the army bill will play only a secondary part. The war cries of the enemies of liberalism will be anti-semitism and protection."

Dublin's Bomb Thrower.

Dublin, May 8.—The police guarded all night the Four Courts in which a bomb was exploded at 10 o'clock last night. They found in a quadrangular courtyard a time fuse and fragments of a zinc canister, similar to those left by explosion of Exchange court last December. The paving stones in the yard were loosened, but the walls of the court buildings were little injured. The police say that the bomb was evidently thrown into the Inn Quay, which is on the River Liffey, between Whiteworth and Richmond bridge, and just opposite the court buildings. The explosion was heard more distinctly at a distance than near by. It roused everybody at the Kilmainham barracks, and Lord Woolseley dispatched at once an orderly to report on the trouble. Before midnight thousands had gathered at the Four courts. To-day half the city has been in the neighborhood, but the crowds have been kept back by a double cordon of police, who will keep the court yard intact until after the arrival of a government inspector. The purpose of the person throwing the bomb was not to sacrifice human life. At night the Four courts and all the immediate neighborhood was deserted, so that there was not the slightest prospect that anybody would be killed by the explosion. The Nationalists believe that the thrower of the bomb intended to harrass the government. The police attribute the act to a Unionist agent who wished to make the impression that the Irish Loyalists wished to remind the party of the Phoenix Park assassinations.

To Get at the Natives.

Washington, May 8.—Designs for the three gunboats authorized by the last congress have been completed by the bureau of construction and repair, and all that is necessary for issuing the advertisements is the approval of the secretary. They are to be about 120 tons displacement, fitted with triple expansion engines, light of draught, and intended for service on the Asiatic station, where they will be able to ascend far up the rivers, where American interests have been several times jeopardized in recent years, and the government unable to give them proper protection on account of the great draught of our naval ships.

For Irish Amnesty.

New York, May 8.—Odd Fellows hall in Second street was thronged this morning with Irish National league delegates making preparations for holding a monster mass meeting in Cooper Union June 6. The meeting will be one of the thousands to be held all over the country for the purpose of agitating amnesty for Irish political prisoners. The executive of the Irish National league believes that when Mr. Gladstone extends the olive branch by opening the prison doors for James Daly, Dr. Gallagher, Arthur Kane and the other prisoners, it will have a great effect toward wiping out the feeling now existing.

Brave Britons.

New York, May 8.—The New York lodges of Sons of St. George this afternoon presented medals to Able Seaman Robert Halfyard and Ordinary Seaman Henry C. W. Hunt, of the British warship Blake. The act of heroism the medals commemorate was the saving of James Brown and his twelve-year-old son, John, on April 30, when the boat they were in overturned. The presentation was made on board the Blake in the presence of the crew and a few invited guests. This was, it is said, the first time such a ceremony ever took place on board a British war vessel in a foreign port.

Delmar Vanquished.

New York, May 8.—Walbrodt to-day defeated Delmar in a Sicilian defense adopted by the latter after sixty moves. The German thus wins the match by 5 to 3 and six drawn games. Delmar challenged the winner right after the conclusion of the game to play three more games for $100 a side. Walbrodt declined to play so short a contest, but declared his willingness to give Delmar another chance after his (Walbrodt's) return from Chicago, provided considerations are suitable.

About twenty-four houses were demolished. The country was swept clear of everything for many miles.

He said no election would be held for some time probably.

A Congressman Resigns.

Ogden, Utah, May 8.—J. H. Rawlins, Democratic delegate to congress from Utah, has resigned. It is thought the resignation was on account of the appointment of C. C. Richards of this city to be secretary of the territory, as Rawlins was opposed to him. The resignation will necessitate the governor calling a special election in twenty days. It is the opinion that Frank Cannon, the Republican standard bearer defeated by Rawlins, will be nominated by the Republicans and sustained by the liberals.

A Duluth Residence Burned.

Duluth, Special, May 8.—H. W. Coffin's new residence on Fourth street was totally destroyed by fire early this morning. Loss, $5,000; insurance, $3,000.

CLEVELAND CRIES QUITS.

He Makes an Announcement.

Washington, May 8.—The following has been issued by the president for publication: "It has become apparent, after two months' experience, that the rules heretofore promulgated regulating interviews with the president have wholly failed in operation. The time which under those rules was set apart for the reception of senators and representatives has been almost entirely spent in listening to applications for office which have been bewildering in volume, perplexing and exhausting in their iteration and impossible of remembrance. A due regard for public duty which must be neglected if the present conditions continue, and an observance of the limitations placed upon human endurance, oblige me to decline from and after this date all personal interviews with those seeking appointments to office, except as I, on my own motion, may especially invite them. The same considerations make it impossible for me to receive those who merely desire to pay their respects except on the days and during the hours especially designated for that purpose. I earnestly request senators and representatives to aid me in securing for them uninterrupted interviews by declining to introduce their constituents and friends when visiting the executive mansion during the hours designated for their reception. Applicants for office will only prejudice their prospects by repeated importunity and by remaining in Washington to await results."

Depew Is Severe.

New York, May 8.—The Herald says: Dr. Chauncey M. Depew found time yesterday to pay his respects to the president and tell what he thinks of the administration's financial policy. "Mr. Cleveland appears to me," said Dr. Depew, "like a baby with a locomotive. He does not know what to do. He acts like a pedagogue and appears to be endeavoring to educate the majority of his party, who are silver men, up to the gold standard, while in the meantime the financial standing of the country is going to wreck. Many houses have already become bankrupt because Mr. Cleveland has not had financial horse sense enough to avert the crisis. He has not in his cabinet a man who has ever been a good financier. Instead of putting bonds on the market and doing something to restore confidence, Mr. Cleveland goes right along trying to educate his silver constituents and letting the treasury and the people take care of themselves. When Mr. Cleveland took the reins of government we were moving along prosperously. The government was on a good, solid footing financially and industries were flourishing. We find ourselves in the midst of a financial crisis that is making havoc with everything. But the people wanted a change in the government and they got it."

Southern Duellists.

Memphis, May 8.—The duel between Col. W. A. Collyer of the Appeal-Avalanche and E. W. Carmack, editor of the Commercial, did not occur to-day as was anticipated. Owing to his arrest here, Mr. Carmack did not arrive at Holy Springs, Miss., until an hour after the appointed time of meeting. Col. Collyer and his party were on board their train which was about to pull out for Memphis, when Mr. Carmack arrived on his special. The sheriff and several of his deputies were at the depot, and fearing arrest, all returned to Memphis, arriving at 6 p. m. In all probability further correspondence will be indulged in and a meeting arranged. The difficulty grows out of Carmack's denouncing the owner of the Appeal as a common trollop and Collyer denouncing Carmack as a liar. The Dubose impeachment case is at the bottom of the whole business.

Great Possibilities.

Washington, May.—Col. C. J. Murphy, the representative of American maize in Europe, has returned to this country for a few weeks' leave to enable Secretary Morton to confer with him in regard to his work abroad. Col. Murphy speaks enthusiastically of the corn work in Europe, and feels especially encouraged by the interest aroused in the Scandinavian countries on the subject. But it is not in corn alone that Mr. Murphy is interested. He says: "All the wine consumed in the northernmost countries of Europe has to come from France, Spain, Italy and certain parts of Germany. For wines of a comparatively moderate price we can already rival the manufacturers of Southern Europe in quality, and I am not quite so sure that we can lay them down in the ports of Northern Europe at a cost which will enable us to rival them in price. I am satisfied that we can secure a good market for fruits also."

King Must Retire.

Washington, Special, May 8.—John H. King of Chamberlain, S. D., has been requested to tender his resignation as chief of the interest, warrant and expense division in the treasury department, and will be succeeded by an Idaho Democrat June 1. King has been acting assistant register of the treasury since December, as the assistant register has been filling the place of Gen. Rosecranz. King will probably practice law in Washington, although he will continue his connection in South Dakota, and especially in South Dakota politics.

Tacoma, Wash., May 8.—Of forty-one alleged Chinese merchants aboard the steamer Victoria waiting for their certificates, claimed to have been forwarded by mail, forty were ordered deported to-day on the arrival and examination of the documents. The certificates were all forged in Hong Kong by confession of the Chinese. They claim they paid $50 apiece for them to the Kwong Ah Wing company of that city.

A Collapsed Roof.

Kilsey, Ill., May 8.—While workingmen were tearing a temporary casing from beneath the new built Crown kiln to-day, the roof, a brick one, collapsed, burying three workmen and killing instantly Caleb Charr, owner of the factory, aged fifty-eight, and William Keith, aged twenty-eight. Elias Reid, aged twenty-three, was extricated. He is injured internally and will probably die.

Probably a Canard.

Washington, May 8.—Senor Anibal Cruz, charge d' affaires of the Chilean legation, said to-day that no information had been received by him of the killing of Frank Matthewson, an American railroad contractor, near Concepcion, Chile, as reported yesterday. If such an event had occurred, he said, he would have been advised, and in the absence of any communication he did not believe the report.

Kansas Wheat Overestimated.

Topeka, Kan., May 8.—Kansas elevator men are criticising Secretary Mohler severely on his report of the Kansas wheat crop. They charge him with knowingly overestimating the probable yield in the interests of buyers. This they claim is detrimental to the farmers who have last year's wheat. Mohler's report predicts seventeen bushels to the acre as an average yield. The elevator men say will no reach ten bushels.

Wanted in Duluth.

Cincinnati, May 8.—Charles Lawrence was arrested here to-night on a warrant of the sheriff of Duluth, Minn., charging him with the embezzlement of $900 from the Johnson Land and Emigration company. Lawrence was following a theatrical company, with a member of which he is infatuated. He will be returned to Duluth.

Pistol vs. Ax.

Chicago, May 8.—The suburb of Maywood was aroused to a high pitch of excitement this morning over the shooting of Frederick Heller, a well known citizen, which occurred at 1:30 at his home. Heller and Oliver Atkins, a man in his employ, who boarded with him, quarreled, and Heller attacked Atkins with an axe. In self-defense Atkins shot his assailant, the bullet passing the abdomen, inflicting a fatal wound. An excited mob of neighbors gave chase to Atkins, but he gave himself up to the police in time to save himself from the hands of pursuers.

At present is looks as if only the very wealthy would be able to attend the World's Fair, The railroads charge nearly full fare and at Chicago it is said the people are charged exorbitant prices for everything. If matters do not mend the fair will be a failure.

Postmaster General Bissel sends out a card announcing the fact that all who attend the World's fair at Chicago can get their mail on the fair grounds as there will be a full grown post office on exhibition. All letters intended for World's fair visitors should be addressed to the "World's Fair Station," Chicago, Illinois.

St. Peter Herald: What has the legislature done?

We answer, what has it not done? It passed a state capitol bill, It tried to pass a hoop skirt bill, it tried to pass a horse tail bill; it voted away large sums for internal improvement, when the treasury had already been looted; it had a coal combine investigation and a lumber investigation which amounted to what, yes, what? It centured Loren Fletcher and listened to J. J, Ingalls; it endorsed a man to office and gave a colored sergeant-at-arms $50 for doing what he was hired to do; it provided a place for Mott's younger son, and it allowed several hundred bills to die an unnatural death; it killed an express bill which was drawn in the interest of the people; it killed the Markham bill and then tried to ruin Markham.

Weather prognosticator Hicks prophesies for May as follows:

"Cool days and frosty nights, following last April storm period, will give place to warmer stormy weather about 2nd and 3rd, Sharp, frosty nights need not surprise two or three days before the 7th or 8th, about which days it will turn very warm and active storms are liable about 8th, 9th and 10th. Temperature will fall to the frost line after the disturbance of this period The 14th and 15th will bring sudden and extreme warmth, with much tendency to cyclonic storms on and about those dates. Watch them! Cooler up to next storm period, running from 18th to 22nd. About these days expect very warm weather, to end in hard storms. This is true, also for the 25th and 26th and dates touching them. May will end growing warmer with storms brewing and moving from the west. Watch and see!"

Attorney Steenerson of Crookston, who has undertaken, for a conditional large sum to knock out the prohibition law in North Dakota on unconstitutional grounds applied to the supreme court today for a writ of habeas corpus on petition of William Larrabee now imprisoned in the Cass county jail, for alleged violation of the prohibition law The petition sets forth that the prohibition article in the constitution is void because it did not receive a majority of all the legal votes cast at the last election on the adoption of the constitution. The contention is that a majority of votes cast on the article itself was not sufficient, but that it should receive a majority of all the votes cast at said election. It is also contended that the prohibition law of 1890 is void because of a defective title, Much interest centers in the case, but the attorney general says that the points raised are wholly and rediculously worthless. The action is brought in such a manner that it can be appealed to the federal supreme court, which is doubtless the desire of the liquor men behind this case.—Grand Forks News.

There is always a great deal of rivalry between the different lumber companies each winter, in the matter of getting up big loads of logs. Not long ago a load gotten up in Michigan for the World's fair and which was drawn a few hundred feet, was then unloaded and the logs shipped to Chicago for exhibit. This was an immense load for four horses, but the Brennan Lumber company now comes in and beats this record by about two hundred feet. The load contained 131 logs, scaling 36,600 feet, and was hauled two miles. The logs were 18 feet long, and the load was 26 feet high and 21 feet wide.

To carry this immense load required a large and strong sled and the one which bore it had runners 5 inches thick, 10 inches high, 9 feet long and 9 feet apart; the bars were 15x18 inches 12 feet long and the rockers 15x18 inches, 17 feet long.—Lumberman.

An exchange says the law concerning stray animals is not known as it should be, If you take up a stray animal you must within ten days, give notice to your township clerk, who must make an entry of the same; then you advertise the animal in your local paper and sixty days after such advertisement has appeared you apply to the justice of the peace to sell the animal. He issues a warrant to the constable who gives ten days notice by poster, then he sells it and you get pay for expenses. The penalty for taking a stray animal and not giving notice is $5; and besides the owner can come upon your place and take it away without paying you anything.

"Talk about floods" said a gentleman who came down from the north last evening, "to get a proper idea of what a flood is, a person must see one in Marshall county. The Red River has overflowed its banks for fifty miles in that county and has spread over five or six miles into the country on each side The water is running from four to five feet deep over the farms between Snake and Red rivers. Many farmers have lost all their stock and had their seed grain ruined by the water. People have been obliged to abandone their homes and everything moveable has been carried away. At least $100,000 damage has been done and the farmers of that section will be unable to sow any small grain this season.—Crookston Times.

Deputy Coroner Wyatt went to McIntosh this morning to hold an inquest over the remains of a man named Olson who met his death there yesterday. Olson and a number of companions live near McIntosh and had been spending the day in the village. When they started for home all were intoxicated. After driving a short distance from town Olson who sat upon a spring seat in front fell asleep and toppled over falling between the wagon and the horses. The wheels of the heavy wagon passed over his neck injuring him so badly that he only lived a few moment after he was picked up.—Crookston Times.

Four Different Standpoints.

"Literature," said the sad eyed, stoop shouldered pilgrim with his baggy trousers, "is an attractive and ennobling thing, but considered as a business it doesn't pay."

"You have had some experience in that line perhaps," observed the comfortable looking party in the new spring overcoat.

"Yes," sighed the other.

"As a publisher or as a dealer in books?"

"Neither. As a writer. I have tasted the joys of authorship. I am the father of a successful novel. It went through eight or ten editions, and papers all spoke well of it. And what do you suppose I made out of it? Seven hundred and fifty dollars. Three months' work, nine months' waiting and $750! It may have netted the publisher more than that, but that's all I got out of it."

The sad eyed pilgrim was silent, and the other ventured to ask:

"Are you still writing novels?"

"Oh, yes. I've got one or two on hand, but I am in no hurry to publish them. What's the use? There's more money in running a good grease tank, only I don't know how to run a grease tank."

"You are engaged in literary work of some kind, I presume?"

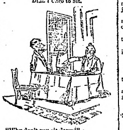
"Yes, I write an occasional newspaper 'special,' have had articles accepted by the magazines which I hope to see in print if I live long enough, and I assist in keeping the books during the busy season at one of the big book stores. Altogether I manage to make a living for myself and family of six children, but that's about all."

"My experience," said the man in the spring overcoat, "is somewhat different from yours, and I am in the same line of business too. I make about $5,000 a year with my pen."

"Writing books?"

"Writing books? Great Scott, no! I do these nice little newspaper stories that turn out to be puffs for patent medicines after you've begun to get interested in them."—Chicago Tribune.

Didn't Care to Sit.



"Why don't you sit down?"

"This morning I asked you how many made a million, an you said darned few. I told teacher that in arithmetic class today, an that's why I can't sit down."—Life.

A Suggestion.

Doctor—Your case is serious. If you don't want to break down, you must take a perfect rest.

Patient—But I'm an employee of a government office!

Doctor—Then try hard work for a time.—Chicago Record.

Woman's Judgment.

Boarder—Yes, she is, but we are not.—New York Weekly.

Heartrending.

The beautiful young matron bowed her head in her soft white hands and wept, until it seemed to the good old pastor that her fragile frame would be disintegrated by the violence of her sobs.

He smoothed back the disheveled hair from her throbbing brow, and being but a man smashed the roses on her hat in so doing. "Do endeavor to calm yourself and tell me what this great grief is. Let me try to help you."

The young matron sobbed still, but managed to utter:

"Oh, why am I so punished? Oh, what have I done that this grief should be brought upon me? And I have been so happy!"

"But, dear sister, tell me what it is that troubles you?"

The young matron turned a tearful gaze toward her good old pastor's face and read therein a world of sympathy. At last she controlled the violence of her feelings enough to speak. "Oh—oh—oh," she sobbed, "Fido is jealous of the baby!"

And again her stricken heart found relief in tears.—Indianapolis Journal.

Keeping Him Supplied.

He—Since you embroidered me that beautiful pair of slippers I have staid home almost every night.

She—Let me know when they are worn out.—Clothier and Furnisher.

Trouble About a Sign.

"Inside Boots Blacked Outside." That nearly caused a riot. Scores of people gathered around it, and casual remarks were made about lynching. The Italian became alarmed and pulled in the sign. The next day this appeared, "Boots Outside Blacked Inside." There was a rumbling sound heard as of an earthquake in the throes of composition in the vicinity of that stand. It swelled into a roar that seemed as if it were about to sweep everything before it, when the Italian ran for his life. When next he appeared, he proudly pointed to his new sign:

☞ On Rainy Days Outside
Boots Shined Inside.

That Italian says that "this is one great country for making the mon, but one dum country for the crank," for the police made him take that sign in.

The newest sign reads:

"Within The Store, On Tempestuous Days, Boots will Be Cleaned, Blackened and Polished, by the Brush Manipulator, without Extra Charge."

It has been allowed to stand. It was composed by a wandering Boston man.—Art in Advertising.

Who It Was.

One day Miss Goode stopped her lesson, and while the hum of childish voices was coming from the other seats began to tell the class about the "Shut In Society." Her stories of the little sick ones and the aged invalids who were getting a ray of light from this sweet ministry interested the children, and Mary Brown was seen to turn her head away. Then Miss Goode went on: "And now, children, where do you suppose the name came from? They call it the 'Shut In Society.' Who can tell me in whose memory it was formed?"

There was no answer, and the children were lost in thought. Miss Goode was quiet for a second: "Whose life was it, children, that was hampered on all sides? Who was it that tried to get out into a larger life, into a bigger world of existence?"

Little Sammy's eyes sparkled.

"Ah, Sammy, you can tell, can't you? Who was it?"

"Dunno, miss, but I 'spect it must have been Jonah."—Boston Budget.

All Judges.

Mrs. Livermore—Now I think that a nice chuck steak is more tender and much juicier than a sirloin.

Mr. Feeder—Yes, I have known a great many people who preferred that cut to any other.

Mrs. Livermore (decidedly pleased)—And they were good judges, I suppose.

Mr. Feeder—Oh, yes, they all kept boarding houses.—Life.

No Heirlooms.

Mrs. Oldfam—That set of china belonged to me great-great-grandmother.

Caller—Did it, really? Why, I have not a single piece that belonged to my great-grandmother.

Mrs. Oldfam (distantly)—Indeed!

Caller—No. We always kept servants, you know.—New York Weekly.

Answered.

"You seem to be a person of considerable standing," said the man comfortably seated in the crowded street car.

"That, sir," retorted the man clinging with both hands to the strap, frowning darkly, "is because I've got a pull."—Chicago Tribune.

Human Nature.

Cumso—Wait a minute, Fangle. I want to step into the dressmaker's and pay my wife's bill.

Fangle—Why don't you give her the money and let her go and pay it?

Cumso—She'd order another dress.—Quips.

Poor Jawkins.

"Jawkins says he's mighty glad, on one account, that the hoops are returning."

"Why, for goodness sake?"

"His wife will have something else to try her dress skirts on now."—Vogue.

An Authority.

Bessie—I am told that Flora Van Pelt is the sweetest, prettiest, most graceful and accomplished girl in the city.

Kitty—Who says so?

Bessie—She does.—Truth.

It Happens Every Year.

Oh, glorious spring! Oh, balmy air!
Full soon we'll take with zest
Our last year's summer underwear
Forth from the cedar chest.

We'll place it on our backs. Whoopee!
And then from morn till night
We'll frisk about in transient glee,
Because we feel so light.

But when the doctor comes next day,
And we are steeped in woe,
Our wives will shake their heads and say,
"There, now, I told you so!"

Nervous Prostration.

This is a disease from which women suffer desperately. Put into plain English, diagnosed, as it were, it means a horrible sort of depression, a sensation as if something were going to happen—a physical feeling as if one would sink through the earth. A prominent physician says that half the cases of nervous prostration, dyspepsia and insomnia that come to him for treatment are to be directly traced to an inactive liver.—New Orleans Picayune.

A Seattle, Wash., taxidermist, while dissecting a monstrous shark, claims to have found inside the the fish a cuff button which bore the portrait of President Cleveland.

World's Columbian Exposition

Will be of value to the world by illustrating the improvements in the mechanical arts, and eminent physicians will tell you that the progress in medicinal agents has been of equal importance, and as a strengthening laxative that Syrup of Figs is far in advance of all others.

Indian bones in large quantities are being unearthed at Milton, Ind.

Are You Happy?

The man or woman who is profitably employed is generally happy. If you are not happy it may be because you have not found your proper work. We earnestly urge all such persons to write to B. F. Johnson & Co., Richmond, Va., and they can show you a work in which you can be happily and profitably employed.

Horses are said to be particularly fond of the skin of the banana.

IT'S ASTONISHING how Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription acts upon nervous women. It's a marvelous remedy for nervous and general debility, Chorea, or St. Vitus's Dance, Insomnia, or Inability to sleep, spasms, convulsions, or "fits," and every like disorder.

Even in cases of insanity resulting from functional derangements, the persistent use of the "Prescription" will, by restoring the natural functions, generally effect a cure.
